

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, before that request is granted, I should like to see a list of the nominees.

Mr. McKELLAR. There are three from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I ask that the nomination of the postmaster at Cody, Nebr., be not included in the request for unanimous consent.

Mr. McKELLAR. I omit that nomination and ask that the others be confirmed en bloc.

Mr. NORRIS. I ask that the appointment of the postmaster at Cody, Nebr., go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination for postmaster at Cody, Nebr., will be passed over, and, without objection, all the other nominations of postmasters are confirmed en bloc.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1936

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Rabbi Edward Sandrow, of the Ahavai Sholom Congregation, Portland, Oreg., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, Father of all men regardless of race, color, or creed, we invoke Thy blessing upon this assemblage of American leaders, the Representatives of the masses of people of our beloved country. Inspire, we pray Thee, these men and women to the realization that in spite of economic turbulence, in spite of national and international uncertainty, America, if it has faith in its past, if it clings to those lofty principles of liberty, tolerance, and democracy upon which this Nation was founded; if it stands united, wholeheartedly firm and cooperative, as did the fathers of this Nation when they laid down their lives for political liberty and freedom of conscience; if it has hope, if it has an unflinching divine hope in its future, then all the difficulties, all those depressing moments through which our country has gone in the last few years will vanish from the heart and from the soul of the American people. Give these men and women of the Congress, O Eternal, the strength of character and the sturdiness of will to keep from our free shores the spirit of religious prejudice, of racial animosity, of ill-will and misunderstanding so common in other parts of the world but so alien to America. Make them continue to appreciate America, to admire its hills and its valleys, to love its songs and the beauty of its spirit—not with arrogant chauvinism but with humility and respect—so that all people of this Nation may climb from this time and forever to greater spiritual heights and physical achievement, so that these United States may always be the home of the free, the towering edifice of all that is noble in life, and the people of this country may achieve the happiness and the security which so concerns this Congress. May this be Thy will, O God, and let us say, Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, January 31, 1936, was read and approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sundry messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

THE MARINE BAND

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, at the direction of the Committee on Naval Affairs I present a privileged report on House Resolution 407, which I send to the desk and ask to have read. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution, the report, and the letter of The Assistant Secretary of the Navy be read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 407

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the House of Representatives forthwith by whose direction, order, or command, and upon what or whose authority the United States Marine Band canceled its engagement to render a musical program at the meeting of the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense held at the Mayflower Hotel in the city of Washington, January 28, 1936, and to furnish the House of Representatives with a copy of such direction, order, or command.

ADVERSE REPORT (TO ACCOMPANY H. RES. 407)

The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the resolution (H. Res. 407) that the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the House of Representatives by whose direction, order, or command the United States Marine Band canceled its engagement to render a musical program at the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense held at the Mayflower Hotel in the city of Washington, January 28, 1936, and to furnish the House of Representatives with a copy of such direction, order, or command, having had the same under consideration, report it back to the House and recommend that the resolution do not pass.

The action of the committee is based upon the following letter to the chairman of the committee from the Secretary of the Navy:

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, February 1, 1936.

Hon. CARL VINSON,
Chairman, Committee on Naval Affairs,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I have your letter of January 30, 1936, with which you transmit House Resolution 407, and request the views and recommendations of the Navy Department.

The subject resolution directs the Secretary of the Navy to inform the House of Representatives by whose direction, order, or command the United States Marine Band canceled its engagement to render a musical program at the meeting of the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, held at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington on January 28, 1936, and to furnish a copy of such direction, order, or command.

A section of the United States Marine Band canceled its engagement to play at a banquet given by the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense on Tuesday evening January 28, 1936, by direction of The Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who transmitted his directive to the Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Little, who further transmitted this order to the leader of the Marine Band, Capt. Taylor Branson, through the commanding officer of the Marine Barracks, Washington, D. C.

All orders were transmitted verbally, and there is no record of any written direction, order, or command.

The above is the full information desired by the resolution, and in order that it may be fully understood the following is submitted: On December 10, 1935, the Navy Department granted the request of Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker for a section of the Marine Band to furnish music at the banquet of the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense to be given on January 28, 1936.

This was done in accordance with the established policy of long standing, by which the band is permitted to play to patriotic gatherings of national import.

On the opening day of the conference, Monday, January 27, 1936, the leading address was made, which was political in character, and on account of the political color given to the conference by this speech it appeared improper that the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps should participate under orders or official sanction. Accordingly the above directive was issued.

There is no objection on the part of the Navy Department to the enactment of the subject resolution.

Sincerely yours,

H. L. ROOSEVELT,
Acting Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the information has been furnished to the House, I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

SOCIALISM, COMMUNISM, AND DEMOCRACY

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, we have been hearing a great deal about socialism, communism, and democracy. William Randolph Hearst has found that America has gone communistic and Al Smith thinks that we are nearly there. In the speeches and writings, most of the charges made relative to socialism and communism in the United States have been coupled up with charges against the President of the United States and the New Deal as being an instrument of socialism and communism. In view of these charges, it seems about time we should take a look at the record.

In 1933, on March 4, when President Roosevelt took office, the banks of the United States were bankrupt. Seven thousand banks had closed their doors within a period of 2 years. The President found himself in a position of allowing the banks to continue closing their doors and allowing the depositors to lose their money by the closing, or by closing down the entire banking structure and, with Government assistance, put them in order. This latter action he took. After the Government had investigated the banks, taken their collateral and put them on their feet, he returned them to the private owners. Is this socialism?

The railroads were unable to meet payments of interest on bonds and other indebtedness. Through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation hundreds of millions were loaned to the railroads that they might continue their operations under private ownership. Is this socialism? The insurance companies and savings and loan associations throughout the United States were in a position where under no circumstance could they be liquid. The President of the United States organized the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the farm-loan banks, took up their collateral and mortgages that they held upon homes and farms, many of which were far greater than the value of the properties on which the Government took mortgages. In this manner the insurance companies and savings and loan associations became liquid institutions and were retained not by the Government but by the private ownership that existed prior to the enactment of these laws. Is this socialism?

The heavy industries of the Nation were unable to pay dividends upon their stocks or bonds and were unable to maintain employment or keep the industries operating for the lack of business. The building industry had dropped to approximately 16 percent of the 1926 level. All of these industries were strictly up against it and crying for Government interference. Our President and Congress, at the urgent request of the National Chamber of Commerce, created the N. R. A. and the A. A. A. The N. R. A. allowed them to set their prices and practically nullify the antitrust laws, so that they might receive greater profits. He added to this the Public Works Administration and the spending of billions of dollars, most of which went into the purchase of the goods produced by the heavy industries. These industries are still in the hands of private owners and not bankrupt only because of this help of our President and the Congress. Is this socialism?

Seven million farmers of the United States, the producers of the most valuable commodities for the good of mankind, were in poverty and despair. Millions of acres of land had been foreclosed upon by the insurance companies. Many more were on the verge of bankruptcy. Our President and Congress instituted the A. A. A., an act subsidizing the farmers and raising the price levels of the farmers' goods by bringing about a restricted crop production program, this to insure profits to the farmers and to maintain the private ownership of farms and farm goods, even though 20,000,000 people were on relief and in need of the things which were destroyed—or, rather, not produced—under this program. Is this socialism?

The public power program of the President has been often referred to as one of his most socialistic attempts. Hundreds of cities and towns in the United States today own and operate power and light systems. More and more of them are going into the business of public ownership and operation of power and light each year. This program has been instituted by officials of cities and towns throughout the United States over a period of years, and the President is only following the lead of other officials in recognizing the right of the public ownership of power, light, and water.

The charges made by Al Smith in his speech in Washington a few days ago that the Democratic Party and the New Deal had taken over the Socialist Party platform substantiate the statement of Al Smith that he never reads anything. Somebody must have told him that the New Deal had accepted the Socialist Party platform. Had he read it, he would have found that there was no comparison whatever between the New Deal and Socialist platform.

Now, let us compare the Socialist platform of 1932 with the Democratic platform of 1932, then with the enactments since March 4, 1933. What do we find. The Socialist platform of 1932 advocated the socialization of mines, forests, oil, power, transportation, and all basic industries. These resources and industries are still in the hands of private owners.

The Socialist platform demanded Government ownership and operation of the credit currency system. The banks are still in private hands.

The Socialist platform demanded the immediate expenditure of $5,000,000,000 for public works, especially for rehousing. This administration has done very little in the rehousing program.

The Socialist platform demanded the 6-hour day and the 5-day week, without wage reductions. The Black bill is still in the hands of a committee of the House.

The Socialist platform demanded drastic reduction of armaments. This administration is spending a billion dollars or more a year on armaments.

The Socialist platform demanded that the Government put the unemployed to work producing their own homes, fuel, food, and clothing on a basis of production for use. The F. E. R. A. timidly started such a program and stopped it shortly thereafter.

There are several other planks of the Socialist Party in which the New Deal has in no way taken any part. This is definite proof that these reactionary hirelings of the Liberty League not only are telling nontruths, but have no understanding of the things about which they talk.

Going through Al Smith's speech and reading Mr. William Randolph Hearst's newspapers, we find only two things that either one has ever suggested to bring about a decent economic and social order from the position of chaos in which we find ourselves. Communism in this country amounts to simply nothing. The Communist Party itself admits a membership of less than 30,000. So, the only thing in their opinion then to bring about the necessary recovery to the American people must be the balancing of the Budget.

I don't know but what it might be a very good idea if we did attempt to balance the Budget for these gentlemen.

Perhaps they would want to do it in a different manner from what we might suggest. First of all, in balancing the Budget we should call in all Government bonds, issue currency against them, and stop the interest of approximately one billion dollars a year. This would be a step toward the balancing of the Budget.

The best step would be to call in all the loans due the Government by 6,000 banks, sell back to the banks $1,000,000,000 in preferred stock, which the Government now holds; demand immediate payment in full of the debt of over four hundred million owing the United States Government by the railroads of this Nation; demand that the mortgage companies repay the $131,000,000 they owe the Government; $8,000,000 to be repaid immediately by the building-and-loan associations; $11,000,000 owing this Government by insurance companies; sell back to the insurance companies their $31,000,000 worth of preferred stock which the Government now holds. By recalling these loans the Government would realize over $2,000,000,000. Stop the C. C. C.'s and return to the streets of America 550,000 youths; stop the public-works projects, especially those in which 60 percent of the funds expended are expended in the purchase of materials from the heavy industries; stop the Federal Government emergency relief program and throw 22,000,000 American people onto the streets without homes, food, or clothing. Reduce the expenditure of the armed forces of the United States to $25,000,000 a year, saving the Government of the United States approximately $975,000,000 each year.

If this were done tomorrow these gentlemen who are now formed into the united front of reaction, opposing the President of the United States would within 30 days again be on their knees before the Treasury of the United States begging for assistance, providing the pauperized and destitute people would allow themselves to be starved for 30 days.

Those people, whom President Roosevelt has tried to save—this system which President Roosevelt has and is trying to patch up and save—has in it, in my opinion, the greatest number of backbiters ever known in political history. They should be reminded of a song popular during the World War known as "Don't Bite the Hand That's Feeding You."

The American Liberty League, the Manufacturers' Association, the American Bankers' Association, the Economy League, and those reactionary Democratic puppets of the wealthy, with William Randolph Hearst as their newspaper spokesman, will find that every attack made upon the President of the United States in charging him with communism and socialism will only strengthen him and weaken them. In my State the people have felt that the President has not gone far enough to the left; that he had lost some ground in that State, I believe to be true, but at the present time with the present line-up, with these forces of reaction opposed to the President, I am absolutely positive that he will carry the State of Washington in 1936.

For myself, I hope these attacks will continue, for if they do, in 1936 the line of demarcation between the candidates sponsored by these "gentlemen" and "gentlemen's" organizations and the candidacy of President Roosevelt, be so definite that on the side of this group we will have a pronounced program of reaction. Our President will then have a platform drawn by the Democratic Party, a platform of liberalization that we may fight the battle out on that ground.

They will be doing a favor to the Democratic Party by compelling the reactionary Democrats to take a "walk" right into the party of special interests and privileges, the Republican Party, and at the same time give a real inducement to the progressive and forward-looking of the Republican Party to "walk" out and join the revised party of the people, the Democratic Party of 1936. Incidentally, they are rendering a real service to our President, who asked the reactionary Democrats to leave the Democratic Party and join the Republican Party and for all the progressives of the Republican Party and other parties to join the Democratic Party. This was in his speech accepting his nomination in 1932.

Of all the newspapers in the United States that should be chosen to represent the policies of this reactionary group—the united front of reaction—William Randolph Hearst certainly should have been their choice, because of the fact that this gentleman, through his newspapers, will print anything, regardless of the truth.

As an example of this, in a recent article printed in the Washington Herald (Thursday, Jan. 30, 1936) I was quoted as having said:

ZIONCHECK "DISGUSTED"

Democratic Senators, of course, praised it. Republican Members remained silent, watching the widening rift between New Deal and Constitutional Democrats. Some of the comment:

Representative ZIONCHECK (D.), of Washington:
"I was disgusted with his apologies about the Roosevelt administration. We who believe in true socialism don't want Roosevelt ranked with us."

This statement I did not make and would not make.

In the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, a Hearst newspaper, an article was published on the vote of overriding the President's veto on the bonus. The article was headlined "All Washington Senators and Congressmen Voted for the Bonus, Except ZIONCHECK." This is a distortion of the facts, because I did vote for the bonus every time it has come before the Congress of the United States. I have twice signed a petition to take it away from the committees. I only state this to show how Mr. Hearst and his newspapers will put into print those things so that they may cause prejudice against the people to whom he is opposed.

Before closing, I may say that I believe in the last few weeks these attacks by these reactionary groups upon the President of the United States and Congress with the assistance of William Randolph Hearst, have assured the reelection of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936.

SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON LABOR—LEAVE TO SIT DURING SESSIONS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a subcommittee of the Committee on Labor considering the Ellenbogen bill, the textile bill, be permitted to sit during the sessions of the House during this week.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

DISNEY OIL IMPORT BILL—H. R. 10483—DIRECTLY AFFECTS KANSAS AS WELL AS THE INDUSTRIAL STATES

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, Kansas will profit by millions of dollars if Congress passes the bill proposed by Congressman DISNEY, of Oklahoma, whose intent is to open to the domestic petroleum industry some of the most valuable markets in this country which are now held by the foreign branch of that industry.

Kansas last year received over $50,000,000 for the crude oil produced in the State. In addition to this is the amount paid to farmers for leases and royalties, making petroleum one of the most important crops on Kansas farms. These receipts by Kansans will be greatly increased if the importers of cheap foreign oil are compelled to pay a proper excise tax, and if the amount of this oil which enters into such direct competition with the domestic product were limited to some definite proportion of the national consumptive demand as is done in the new Disney oil import bill.

The oil industry is the second largest in Kansas, according to data compiled by Charles W. Steiger, attorney for the State corporation commission. Agriculture alone surpasses the oil industry in its annual contribution to the wealth of the State. There are over 100 recognized pools in 35 counties in Kansas. Nearly 20 new pools were discovered last year in areas which had not previously been productive. Old wells which were yielding small quantities of petroleum have recently been deepened to a new and lower sand and suggests the possibility of discovery of large production beneath the present depths of other old fields.

So many important oil discoveries were made during the past year in Kansas that newspapers have commented upon these as ceasing to be sensational news. The increase in wildcatting and field development suggests that this State may expect to see its petroleum industry make enormous contributions to the future prosperity of the State.

If foreign oil is permitted to control our domestic markets, the development of the petroleum industry in this State cannot advance. There would be no point in drilling deeper wells or opening new fields and pools unless there is a market for the petroleum and the petroleum products produced.

The biggest single crop, with the possible exception of wheat, that Kansas farms can produce is oil. The only steady and reliable source of income which many Kansas farmers possess has been the money for oil leases and for oil royalties. These have paid the taxes and furnished ready cash on countless numbers of Kansas farms. Many of these leases have not been developed. The untapped oil resources of the State will become reservoirs of wealth when the petroleum industry in Kansas can have what it has never possessed in the past, assurance that the market for its oil products will not be ruined by imported oil and that the Kansas oil industry will not be forced to sell this valuable product at less than its value because of the competition offered by the cheap imported product.

Kansas relies, to a large degree, upon the public revenue received from the various State taxes levied upon the petroleum industry. None of these taxes apply to the products of the foreign oil with the single exception of the sales tax paid by the consumer at the filling stations. Even more than the State, however, the business interests of Kansas are dependent upon the millions of dollars received from the production of crude oil and from the sale of the refined products of that oil.

As the millions of barrels of Kansas oil are shipped from this State into another State, millions of dollars worth of products are brought back into Kansas from the industrial States of the Union. Our purchasing power is derived from the oil industry more than from any other source with the sole exception of agriculture.

We can increase our purchasing power only as our markets are increased. If foreign petroleum is permitted to take the markets which might otherwise be supplied by domestic oil, including that from Kansas, then our industry and our employment are decreased by just that amount. On the other hand, if we place upon the importation of foreign oil the same character of restrictions which we in Kansas are placing upon the production of our own petroleum, and thus stabilize the markets and balance supply with demand, then the oil industry in Kansas will have a larger opportunity, the people of Kansas will have a greater consuming power, and a strong stimulus will be given to the general recovery program throughout the Nation. Kansas, therefore, considers this Disney bill as one of the most important measures pending before Congress which so directly affects the well-being of the entire State.

As the domestic market for Kansas oil is enlarged, the market in Kansas for the goods of the industrial States is also enlarged, and the prosperity of Kansas increases the prosperity of the whole Nation.

HEALTH OF QUEENS COUNTY, NEW YORK STATE

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Mr. Speaker, I think it is about time that we cast aside partisanship and proceed to think about our health. In that respect I call the attention of the House to the fact that the county in which I reside, Queens County, in the State of New York, was again adjudged the healthiest county in the United States, the second year in succession.

The United States Public Health Service has announced that New York's Queens County, the borough of homes and apartment houses, had the lowest death rate in the Nation.

In 1935 the death rate was 6.4 per 1,000 estimated population; the rate is even better than in 1934, when Queens County had the same distinction of being the healthiest place in the United States, when it was 6.5 per 1,000 estimated population.

Doctors pointed out that my county had all the requirements for good health, such as sanitation, garbage disposal, milk inspection, numerous hospitals, and a great many eminent physicians.

I recommend to those seeking a long healthful life a residence within the confines of this great and fastest growing county, the garden spot of the Nation, Queens County, N. Y.

WORK ON WORK-RELIEF PROJECTS

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, just how much longer is the Congress of the United States going to stand for an un-American, inexcusable, intolerable situation? I refer to the ruling of Harry Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, that no man may be given work by the Government who was not on relief November 1, 1935. That ruling is ridiculous. That ruling is inexcusable. That ruling is un-American. It is intolerable. And this Congress should change it.

Many Americans, Mr. Speaker, through no fault of their own, were compelled to accept relief from the Government. For them every American had deep sympathy and understanding.

But at the same time there were thousands of splendid Americans everywhere in dire distress, who in order to keep off of relief, sacrificed and stinted and denied themselves and even starved. They and their wives and children wore shabby clothes. They denied themselves the ordinary pleasures of life. They ate cheap food and not enough of that. They even went hungry. They kept off of relief, but now they have their backs to the wall, and must have work. And when they ask for work, they are denied it because Harry Hopkins says their Government cannot give them work unless they were on relief November 1, 1935. Is Harry Hopkins running this Government? Is he bigger than this Congress? Is he supreme?

When this Congress appropriated $4,800,000,000 and gave it to the President to provide work for the unemployed, not one of the 435 Members of this House ever dreamed that a cruel, unjust, inexcusable discrimination would be made against worthy, deserving Americans. Every Member here thought that all needy Americans would be treated alike. We never dreamed of injustice. We never dreamed that proud, worthy Americans would be penalized because they had sacrificed everything to avoid accepting support from their Government. If Congress had known that Harry Hopkins would make unjust discriminations, it would never have furnished this stupendous sum of money.

Our worthy needy constituents not on relief are just as important to us, and are just as much entitled to be employed on this Government work, as are those who have been on relief. There should be no distinction. This Congress should direct Harry Hopkins to stop penalizing them unjustly.

I realize full well that after Congress appropriates the money the President then administers it through Harry Hopkins and his other agents, whom the President himself selects, and to keep the matter out of politics the President handles the matters of relief and public works through county officials, and that Congressmen have nothing whatever to do with such administration. But when Harry Hopkins and the county officials are showing unfair discrimination, and our worthy constituents are not all treated justly and alike, this Congress should stop it, and force fair and just treatment to all alike. I insist that this Congress should order Harry Hopkins to immediately rescind this intolerable ruling. It is outrageous. [Applause.]

I have protested and protested. Now, we are providing for a manufacturers' census. Thousands of employees are to be given jobs all over the United States. I have numerous requests from good men and women who are deserving, who are honest, who are worthy, who need them and want these jobs. Yet Mr. Hopkins sits down here in his office in Washington and says that no person shall be employed to take that census unless he has been on the dole.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent also to incorporate a statement made by my colleague, Mr. MARTIN DIES, appearing in yesterday's press.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, much of the distress now suffered by our unemployed American citizens is due to the fact that there are millions of aliens from foreign countries within our borders holding American jobs that only American citizens should hold. For years I have been fighting for proper restriction laws to have them registered, to keep them out, and to deport all aliens. The United States is the only country in the world that will allow aliens to be employed when its own citizens are without jobs and cannot get work.

The article I referred to, so ably written by my distinguished colleague from Texas [Mr. DIES], expresses the sentiments I have many times expressed from this floor, and I am glad to have consent to now quote it, to wit:

[From the Washington Herald of Feb. 2, 1936]

SIX MILLION ALIENS THRIVE IN NATION AT EXPENSE OF UNITED STATES
JOBLESS, SAYS DIES—NONCITIZENS SEND 100 MILLION DOLLARS
YEARLY TO HOMELANDS, CONGRESSMAN CHARGES, URGING DEPORTATION

By MARTIN DIES, Congressman from Texas

Eight million employable Americans now are out of work. Meanwhile there are 8,000,000 aliens in the United States. As a people we are supporting—in jobs or on the dole—8,000,000 foreign citizens, while furnishing relief to a like number of our own citizens and their dependents.

Of this gigantic alien population—meaning foreigners resident here, who are not citizens—it is estimated that approximately three and one-half million are in this country illegally.

Of our 8,000,000 alien residents, it is estimated further, one and a half million are on relief.

We pay out $50,000,000 a year to provide medical attention alone for these aliens on relief. We pay $25,000,000 annually to educate their children.

As a whole, these 1,500,000 aliens actually on relief are costing our Government about half a billion dollars a year. This sum is equivalent to a weekly contribution of 25 cents by every wage-earner in the United States.

They have not given up their native citizenship. They recognize no allegiance to this Nation and when they have enriched themselves sufficiently in jobs which should be reserved for our own citizens, they plan to live a life of comfort—on our dollars—in their native lands.

SENDING MILLIONS TO HOMELANDS

While millions of Americans have been forced to accept the dole and other millions have been taxed to pay it, aliens holding jobs here have been sending $100,000,000 annually in savings to various homelands.

There you have epitomized briefly some main essentials of a grave problem which confronts us all. And it is a problem which is little understood.

Indeed, it is seldom discussed; primarily because the basic facts of this situation are not generally recognized or even known.

For 6 years I have been studying the effect of this group of 8,000,000 aliens upon America. I have read everything available, searched out facts in all competent sources, and I have traveled thousands of miles, studying the effect of these aliens upon our economic, social, and political life.

My files on the subject are the most complete in the country. I am opening them for the first time in the preparation of this series of articles in order that Americans may understand a condition which no other nation would countenance for a moment.

As a prelude it should be made clear that "alien" does not mean foreign born. In this country there are 16,000,000 persons who were born abroad. Alien means those of that number who were born abroad of foreign parents and who reside in this country but have not been naturalized.

If we thought that an invading army of 8,000,000 alien persons was about to invade our shores we would resist to the last gasp.

But such an invasion has occurred in the last quarter century. And we did nothing about it. We knew relatively nothing about it. Even now we do not take the trouble to find out just how big this army is. Research in many places was necessary before it was possible to arrive at the figures given, and which I believe to be absolute minimum figures.

One section of this study shows that some 6,000,000 citizens of other countries today are holding American jobs.

"Brain trusters" and other experts are spending billions of American dollars trying to solve the problem of unemployment. This large alien population is the basic cause of unemployment. An act of Congress forbidding aliens to work while American citizens are unemployed would do more toward putting our citizens back at work than most of the money being spent upon experiments.

A second act providing for deportation of destitute aliens, instead of giving them relief, then would very largely solve our unemployment troubles.

Some other phases of this alien problem which stand out stark and clear from my studies are:

1. The crime rate among aliens is double that of the rest of the population.

And yet our laws are so lax and their administration so liberal that relatively very few of these foreign criminals are deported, while the influx of alien criminals continues.

2. To say that 6,000,000 aliens have taken Americans' jobs tells but a part of the story, possibly the smaller part. They have "imported" the pauper labor conditions of their homelands into this country. Their competition beats down prevailing wage rates, thus tending generally to lower the American workers' standards of living. In the mass, the effect of this is literally incalculable; but every area in which there are large alien groups proves this point.

3. Aliens form the backbone of communism and fascism in this country.

Yet aliens still are pouring into the United States; and the policies of the Department of Labor make the situation worse, rather than better.

Communism, fascism, Hitlerism, and many other "isms" which are un-American both in conception and principle have been "imported" also, along with the hordes we admit through our open door.

WOULD DEPORT ALIEN DESTITUTE

The underlying political principle of all these "isms", regardless of their viewpoint regarding private property, was expressed by Mussolini when he said:

"Everything for the state, nothing outside the state, nothing against the state."

This political philosophy is diametrically opposed to the principles of the American system of government, and the two cannot survive side by side.

Nevertheless, these "isms" are being forced upon us by these same alien groups which are so largely responsible for our unemployment problem. For proof you have but to look at the persons attending Communist parades and meetings, or consider those advocating radicalism and pacifism in our schools. Wherever these foreign concepts are found there you find aliens.

4. These alien-minded groups want to bring Europe to America—in alien standards and alien ideas. They also want to send America to Europe.

It is from such as these that there arises a considerable proportion of the propaganda and pressure for our entrance into entangling alliances which would involve us in European affairs, at a time when Europe is gathering itself for another suicidal war. Each group wants us to champion the cause of its particular nationality, in Europe's age-old quarrels. It means nothing to them that the founding fathers came to these shores to escape that very thing.

The last war proved almost disastrous to us, and brought about many of the evils from which we are now suffering.

But many of these alien groups are convinced that if they can bring about our participation in another world war, that may bring about the end of free government in the United States.

Thus, they believe, the way would be cleared for their type of "ism", of whatever kind; but in any event, some form of political or economic dictatorship.

These are facts which challenge every American citizen.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway], I ask unanimous consent that he may have 15 minutes in which to address the House immediately after the reading of the Journal and disposition of matters on the Speaker's table tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

THE RASH OF TOWNSENDITIS

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to insert in the RECORD an address which I delivered over the National Broadcasting System in opposition to the Townsend plan.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include my address in opposition to Mr. Gomer Smith, vice chairman of the Townsend movement, Thursday evening, January 23, 1936, in the Town Hall

Meeting of the Air over station WJZ and the National Broadcasting Co. chain, as follows:

Mr. Chairman, ladies, and gentlemen, you have listened attentively to Mr. Gomer Smith. He deplores the "pension" of $10,000 a year Congressmen get. What an outrageous statement to make. A salary is not a pension. Even so, my adversary wanted that $10,000 a year. He ran for the Senate and was defeated. I suppose it is a case of sour grapes. After hearing him I am more than ever opposed to the so-called old-age pension revolving plan.

He, like Townsend, apparently does not believe in the principles of economics. That is readily discernible from his remarks tonight. In fact, not a single economist supports him. In his testimony before the Ways and Means Committee of the House (p. 751 of the Hearings, Jan. 21 to Feb. 12, 1935), the good doctor in part said: " * * * What are economists? On what do they base their conclusions? On precedent, do they not? Gentlemen, we have arrived at an unprecedented age. * * * This new age is presenting new problems. Economists do not know anything more about that than you or I; not in the least, * * *."

However, I warn the good doctor, whether he will it or no, his nostrum will have to be tested in the crucible of economics to determine its soundness before it be taken into the body politic. All economists agree that it is a pseudo remedy, filled with poisons that would increase the maladies of unemployment and distress.

Doubtless we were not subject to such national economic suffering the mere suggestion of a Townsend plan could make no headway; but in times of stress, we have and always will have a "technocracy", a Huey Long share-the-wealth plan, a Sinclair E. P. I. C.—now it is the rash of Townsenditis. It is, as it were, what the storm blew in.

Dr. Townsend has the edge on all the other so-called redeemers. They offer usually an abstract, complicated program. Dr. Townsend goes them one better. He offers something concrete—$200 per month. Any simpleton can understand that. Who would refuse $200 per month? He and his followers keep hammering that idea on the anvil of the Nation's suffering. Only the so-called benefits of the plan are stressed. Little or nothing is said of the method of raising yearly the vast sum of twenty billions required.

The Townsendite already has visions of buying automobiles, radios and new houses, and all the medical care he may need. The Townsend Weekly is filled with ads recommending cures for rheumatism, neuritis, deafness. He will travel—Daytona Beach Townsendites already were on the job handing out leaflets, ready to cash in on the pension to come. The $200 per month is no longer a vision; it is a fact.

In San Diego I am informed, when a Townsend pension bill was before the California Legislature, hosts of elderly people tried to buy automobiles and radios on the credit basis of $200 they daily expected to find in their mail. (For shame, Dr. Townsend, is it not cruel thus to deceive these poor hapless souls!) These old people should and must be disillusioned. It is heartless to continue the deception.

Very cleverly there has been injected a note of religion. The National Townsend Weekly speaks of the plan as "religious in action." The leaders cannot address meetings without previous arrangements for "amens" and "hymns", frequent references to "God and the Creator", and quotations from the Sermon on the Mount. The speakers very artfully proclaim that the Townsend plan is just as much inspired by God Almighty as was the emancipation proclamation of Abraham Lincoln.

The harsh realities of the plan are never touched upon. Usually at meetings it is with a sort of religious hysteria that the adherents revel in the gifts to come. It is this very spiritual enthusiasm that makes the plan doubly dangerous, and mayhap more difficult to scotch.

Furthermore, there is a very deceitful appeal to the passions and prejudices of the unthinking. An examination of the arguments advanced discloses the following: "We must provide security for the people over 60, and jobs for the people under 60. When that is accomplished the Townsend Clubs won't disband. Oh, no. We will tackle the problem of aliens in this country. We'll fix J. P. Morgan."

WHAT IS THIS PLAN?

Frankly, your plan is "too good to be true." Each citizen 60 years of age and over is to receive a pension of $200 a month for life provided he gives up all gainful pursuits and spends the $200 each month. To pay these pensions there is to be a 2-percent tax laid on the gross dollar value of every business and financial transaction. This so-called transaction tax, which is really a sales tax, is to be supplemented by a 2-percent tax on all inheritances and gifts in excess of $500 and a 10 percent increase on all present income taxes. To insure payment of these taxes all sellers of all commodities of things of value are to be licensed, the fee of the license to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

This scheme, aside from giving pensions to the aged, is supposed to create new purchasing power, provide jobs, and give us rip-snorting prosperity!

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE COULD NOT AND WOULD NOT PAY THE BILL

According to the census of 1930 there were 10,479,028 persons in the United States 60 years of age or beyond. Thus the cost, if all over 60 would be pensioned, would be $2,096,000,000 a month, or over $25,000,000,000 a year.

According to the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury for 1934 this is about eight times the present normal revenue of the Federal Government received from taxation and miscellaneous receipts.

Most Townsendites claim that about 8,000,000 persons would be eligible for the pension, and that therefore the total cost, with the expense of administration, would be about $20,000,000,000 per annum. This is two-thirds of our national debt. What does it mean? That yearly cost would place a burden upon us equal to about seven times the revenue received by the Federal Government in 1934. We would have to tax ourselves about seven times our present rates.

According to the August 1935 Survey of Current Business of the Department of Commerce the national income for 1934 amounted to $49,440,000,000. Let us say fifty billions. Thus, to pay the Townsend pension of $20,000,000,000 would require 40 percent of our national income. In other words, it is proposed to give to 6 percent of the population 40 percent of the national income and leave for the 94 percent of the population the other 60 percent.

According to Dr. Walter E. Spahr, chairman, department of economics, school of commerce, New York University, "if the national income of $50,000,000,000 were distributed evenly among the 127,000,000 population, each person would receive $394. Since the Townsend plan proposes to take 40 percent of it, each person would have left $236. Thus 94 percent of the citizens of this country would have their incomes cut to an average of $236 per year so that 6 percent of the citizens may enjoy net incomes of $1,440 per year ($2,400 less the 40-percent tax), or more than six times as much."

Prof. Willford I. King, of the National Bureau of Economics Research, estimates \$900 per annum as the income per average laborer in the United States. To pay each individual pensioner would absorb the complete annual income of more than  $2\frac{1}{2}$  laborers. To pay 8,000,000 aged persons would require the entire annual income of over 22,000,000 average laborers.

Let us view this stupendous cost from another angle. The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics indicates 37,200,000 wage and salary earners of average income. The Townsend pension cost, according to Professor Spahr, would require the entire annual income of 14,900,000 of these wage and salary earners. It would require two-thirds of the entire annual income of 22,300,000 such persons; or it would require one-half of the entire income of nearly 30,000,000 such persons.

The best estimates indicate that about 67 percent of our national income is paid to laborers in the form of wages and salaries—that is, 67 percent of our annual income of $50,000,000,000 goes to 37,200,000 wage and salary earners at work earning an average annual income of $900. If each such person pays his 40 percent of taxes, then each such person has left only $540 per year out of his $900 average salary to support himself and his children. The net income per Townsend pensioner—$2,400 per annum less 40 percent—would be $1,440, or $2,880 per family, where father and mother are living. Therefore, such husband and wife pensioners over 60 years of age would receive a sum over five times as great as would be left to the average wage and salary earner who also has a family to support.

Let the workers beware. Let the white-collar worker beware. Let the machinist, the bookkeeper, the clerk, the farm hand, the stenographer, the plumber, the mechanic, the teacher, the miner—let them all beware. Do you think the masses of our people, who have to pay this bill, would remain supine and indifferent? They will rise in righteous wrath and indignation. Put this Townsend plan into effect and our whole social system would collapse.

THE SO-CALLED TRANSACTION TAX WOULD FALL MOST HEAVILY ON THE POOR

The wage and salary earner would pay more than his proportionate amount, because the poor spend most for the necessities of life. This transaction or sales tax of 2 percent on every transaction "from the cradle to the grave" would raise prices to an astonishing degree. Let us take a suit of clothes: One would have to pay a 2-percent tax on the retail cost, 2-percent tax on the wholesale cost of the material, on the raw fiber, thread, lining, buttons, wages at every stage, transportation, and distribution. The pyramiding of the tax and the cost would give us inflation with a vengeance. Townsendites admit that prices would go up 100 percent. They would go up much further. As a consequence, the laborer's income would buy fewer commodities and the proportion of his income taken by taxation would increase. This high cost of living would affect most seriously those who have fixed incomes, like widows, orphans, and veterans. And what about those on relief? See how hard they would be hit.

While this plan could not be carried into effect without spreading ruin throughout the land, and while the tax itself could never be effectuated, and therefore the pensions never be paid, nevertheless, let us assume for the sake of this argument that it could be put into effect. Then this "transaction tax" would increase geometrically. It would drive American production costs so high that in order to protect manufacturers against floods of foreign imports we would have to apply extortionately high tariffs. Otherwise there would be a complete surrender of the domestic markets to foreign imports. Such unbelievably high tariff walls on our part would encourage retaliatory tariffs on the part of all other countries. Our international trade would become frozen.

THE TRANSACTION TAX WOULD TURN US INTO LIARS AND CHEATS

There would be made necessary the most gigantic policing bureaucracy in the history of the country—at what a prohibitive cost for the army of spies and snoopers. Townsend, in his testimony, stated that neighbors would be expected to spy on pensioners and to report if they think pension funds are being misspent. Thus all pensioners would be policed. They must spend the $200 each month. If they fail to do so and obtain the next month's quota, they are guilty of a new crime, the crime of failure to spend money.

POWERS NEVER BEFORE EXERCISED BY A SULTAN OR A CZAR WOULD BE GIVEN THE GOVERNMENT

Every seller of goods would have to apply for and receive a license from the Secretary of the Treasury, who would have the right to fix the license fee. In every county or ward there would be organized administrative boards with powers beyond the wildest dream of avarice. Every businessman, farmer, and seller of goods, therefore, would be under governmental surveillance by Government agents and inspectors, who would have the power of life and death over these businessmen, and over any farmer, for if a farmer sells milk or butter or eggs, and produce of any sort, he must be licensed.

THE PLAN IS PALPABLY UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Its sponsors, however, dismiss, in cavalier fashion, the question of constitutionality. That is a detail that does not concern them. In the light of the A. A. A. decision, and in view of the occupational tax provided for in the plan, I assure you it cannot possibly square with the Constitution.

An amendment to the Constitution would be necessary. A little thing like that does not concern Dr. Townsend. An amendment would take years to bring about, but in all likelihood it could never be brought about. Townsend Weekly fails to mention this difficulty and continues to deceive its readers.

WHAT WILL BE THE EFFECT OF A TRANSACTION TAX ON WEALTH AND INCOME?

The Townsendites' glib argument is that the dollar value of all transactions in 1 year is about one thousand billion dollars, or $1,000,000,000,000, and that 2 percent of $1,000,000,000,000 is $20,000,000,000 per annum, the amount needed to pay the pension.

They little realize that taxes must be paid out of income and many times may have to be paid out of the capital which produces the income. The good doctor and his cohorts confuse the tax on these transactions with the effect of taxation on wealth and income.

Let us see how wrong they are. Take, for example, an automobile manufacturer with a capital of $1,000,000. It normally has a net income of 10 percent, or $100,000. In order to make this profit the manufacturer turns over his capital 10 times, and therefore does a business of $10,000,000. According to this good doctor and his followers, $10,000,000 of transactions pass through his hands during the year. They would impress upon that business (upon those transactions) a 2-percent tax, which would amount to $200,000. But the business has only earned a net income of $100,000. There would be a deficit of $100,000. That business would be wrecked, because taxes can only be paid out of income. They cannot be paid on "turnover" or "transactions." Every other manufacturer, every other businessman would also be wrecked. Ruin would be visited upon millions of employees.

Thus the argument that new jobs would be created must go by the board.

THE TOWNSEND CIRCULATION-OF-MONEY THEORY PUTS THE CART BEFORE THE HORSE

Townsendites say that the spending of money is all that is necessary to bring about recovery; that because money does not circulate, business is in the doldrums. It is the other way around. Business is bad and therefore money does not circulate. They do not understand that money is merely a medium of exchange and goes into circulation automatically only as business expands. In other words, circulation cannot make business. It is business that makes circulation.

If this were not true, then there should have been great prosperity among the German people in 1923, when they had trillions of money in circulation. If circulation of money makes prosperity, then there should have been great prosperity during our colonial days when we issued continental dollars; during our Civil War when we issued greenbacks; in 1790 when the National Assembly flooded France with assignates. However, during all these periods the people suffered with increased circulation of money. Business folded up. Savings were destroyed. Poverty stalked the land.

TOWNSENDITES CONFUSE MONEY WITH WEALTH

Money of itself is not wealth, nor is it income. It is merely a medium of exchange, or a claim or title to real wealth and real income. Artificially increase that supply of currency or money, and you do not increase wealth. You simply cut the pie of wealth, as it were, into more pieces, but the pie does not increase in size. Artificially increase currency, and you raise prices for the bare necessities of life far beyond the reach of the poor and lowly.

WHY NOT EXTEND THE TOWNSEND PLAN?

If the Townsend argument is sound, why stop with pensions of $2,400 for persons over 60? Why not $5,000 pensions for persons over 40? Or $10,000 pensions for persons over 30?

As Walter Lippmann says, "What can be said against these proposals that must not also be said against the Townsend plan? Dr. Townsend's error lies in forgetting the simple truth that someone must produce the wealth which is consumed by the non-producers, be they infants, old people, sick people, the unem-played, the idle rich, or the criminal classes. If Dr. Townsend's medicine were a good remedy, the more people the country could find to support in idleness the better off it would be."

THE VIRTUES OF THRIFT, SAVING, AND INSURANCE WOULD GO GLIMMERING

If the plan were put into effect, why should the young live prudently and usefully, save, invest, or take out insurance? Policyholders would convert their policies into cash. There would be no need to insure against old age. Insurance companies would have to dump their securities on the market to meet the demands of all these policyholders.

Why save for old age? Savings banks would consequently have to dump their securities to meet withdrawals.

Who would buy all these securities? The markets would collapse. The exchanges could not remain open a day. Insurance companies and banks would crumble.

Somebody argued that the pensioners themselves would buy all these securities. In the first place, they could not do this, because by so doing they would be getting an income and thus would not be eligible for the pension. And, furthermore, even if they would be permitted to buy these securities, before they could do so these huge taxes would have to be collected. But as a Frankenstein they would be so ruinous as to destroy the very source from which the revenue springs.

HOW WOULD THE AGED SPEND THEIR MONEY?

Townsend would offer no restrictions. Each couple would have $4,800 a year less the "transaction tax." Grandma and grandpa could readily keep in the household without work many sons and daughters and in-laws. In fact, Townsend would put no restrictions on any expenditures. Testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee, he said (p. 687 of the hearings of Jan. 21 to Feb. 12, 1935): "We shall not restrict that expenditure at all * * * And of the pensioner he said (ibid.): "Let him have carte blanche. Let him buy whisky with it if he wants to kill himself off as quickly as he chooses. That is immaterial * * * He was questioned, "Would it be permissible for those children to live with them and be supported from the provisions supplied with this pension money in the home?" He replied, "Why not? Why not let the elders buy commodities and give to their children if they like? That is immaterial * * *"

THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AFFORDS THE BEGINNING OF A REMEDY

Personally, I am heartily in favor of sensible and adequate pensions for old people. This is embodied in the social-security bill of last year which provides upward of $30 per month for the aged; that is, the Federal Government will match the States dollar for dollar up to $15 per month, providing free pensions for all old people without other means of support. In addition, it provides for compulsory old-age insurance for employees.

In New York State we provide pensions for our aged and many other States do likewise. In the course of time, national and State legislation will be greatly improved and more sensible benefits will be granted to the aged, the helpless, and the needy.

The Townsend scheme would destroy at one fell swoop all progress made in old-age-pension laws. It should be consigned to the place where it belongs—limbo.

The ploy of it all is the false promise that the Townsend plan holds out to the old, feeble, and helpless. It is hard to tell the poor aged that the scheme is merely a mirage. Everywhere they dream of riches to come. Nothing could be more tragic than their eventual disillusionment.

TITLE I—F. H. A.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, title I of the National Housing Act, covering modernization and repairs, expires April 1 of this year. I understand that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DUFFY] has introduced H. R. 10501, extending this title for 2 years. The date of the expiration is now only 60 days in the future. I hope that the Committee on Banking and Currency will do everything in its power to speed the passage of this legislation.

I am certain that every Member of the House has been receiving requests from people in his or her district asking for this extension.

During the month of August 1934, which was the beginning of the Federal Housing Administration's program of insuring modernization loans for the purpose of repairing and improving domestic and commercial properties, $251,595 in loans were reported for insurance. During the month of August 1935, 1 year later, $24,240,034 in loans were insured. As of January 11, 1936, a total of over 739,715 loans had been insured, amounting to $264,214,444. There has been a monthly increase in the insurance of modernization loans, November having reached the peak with a total of $31,051,673.

From reports submitted to the Federal Housing Administration from every State, it has been conservatively estimated the amount spent for modernization and repairs since August 1, 1934, has amounted to over $1,266,481,000. This estimate indicates the amount of repair and modernization work being done which is paid for either by loans (insured or uninsured) or by cash outlay.

MODERNIZATION CREDIT—TITLE I

At the close of business on Saturday, February 1, there were 6,184 financial institutions throughout the country that had reported insured notes; that is, notes representing loans made for the purpose of modernization and repair of homes. The total of these notes on the date mentioned was 794,177, representing $281,417,238 in loans.

Evidence of the amount of weekly business is shown by the fact that the weekly average is $6,400,000 since October 1.

A further analysis of loans insured disclosed that single family dwellings more than equaled the combined total of all other properties improved or modernized.

Type of property improved	Percent of total
	Number	Amount
Single family	60.7	57.1
Multiple residential	31.6	25.7
Retail store	3.9	7.8
Commercial	1.1	3.4
Industrial	.3	2.5
Institutional	.4	.7
Miscellaneous	2.0	2.8
Total, all types	100.0	100.0

With a record of having insured $55,341,520 in modernization and repair notes, the State of New York led the Nation in which there was a total of $264,214,444 at the close of business January 11, 1936.

New York had made 127,529 insured loans out of a total of 739,715 for the Nation.

California was second, with a total of $39,516,179 for 123,527 loans, and New Jersey third with $15,924,726 for 39,484 loans.

Contractors, real-estate operators, dealers, carpenters, painters, home builders, salesmen, floor layers, merchants, brokers, millmen, engineers, and so forth, are unanimous in their acclaim of the benefits that have been derived from this legislation.

A company in Chicago writes:

DEAR SIR: The Federal Housing Administration, through its insured modernization loans, has been most beneficial in many ways to our corporation, the 300 families directly connected with it, our numerous customers, those indirectly affected, and, in our opinion, the entire Nation.

It has enabled us to absorb many unemployed by considerably enlarging our factory and office force.

It has enabled us to increase the earnings of our factory and office force by substantial bonuses based upon salaries or wages received. It has also made it possible for our salesmen to earn a great deal more money in the form of commissions on account of the increased volume of sales they have enjoyed.

It has enabled the users of our equipment—those engaged in the relief of human suffering—to purchase necessary modern, result-producing equipment at substantially lower finance or carrying charges than have heretofore been available, on terms more commensurate with their ability to pay and on a basis which largely enabled them to make their payments out of their increased income. This has brought about much expressed appreciation from our customers of the opportunity not only to serve their patients more effectively but to increase their own earnings.

It will result in this corporation being able to remit to the Government a much larger amount in the form of income taxes.

A large number of banks and other sources of modernization credit cooperating with us have benefited on account of the profitable nature of loans made by them under the insured modernization credit plan. These institutions have expressed entire satisfaction with the way the loans are being repaid to them and are, in the great majority of instances, ready and anxious to extend additional loans where it can be done with safety.

A report recently received from the Federal Housing Administration stated that their losses on all insured loans had been about thirteen one-hundredths of 1 percent of the amount of the insured loans. This almost unbelievably small loss can, in our opinion, be attributed to the fact that these loans have, insofar as our knowledge goes, been extended in the main with discretion and caution and to a class of purchasers deserving of credit and able to repay. There is a most wholesome impression with reference to these loans, by those securing them, that they must be paid.

The increased business that has been created by this worthy effort, amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars, of which our share has been a small part, has, in our opinion, afforded employment directly and indirectly to such a large number of people as to have caused other necessary National and State expenditures to be decreased. This has brought about the net result that the insured modernization loans of the Federal Housing Administration have in the final analysis not cost the taxpayer anything, but have actually been a means of saving him large sums.

We deem the insured modernization loans of the Federal Housing Administration of great value to the Nation in order that business may be further sustained, employment may be more general throughout the country, and the benefits that have accrued to the country be continued. For these reasons we desire to petition all representatives of the people, regardless of party, to lend their influence and support to the continuance of this most worthy and profitable legislation.

Respectfully yours,

In view of the standing of California in second place for the United States, it is to be expected that the retail lumber dealers of the State of California are very anxious to have title I of the National Housing Act extended.

I urge the committee to report and the House to adopt H. R. 10501 to continue one of the brightest spots of the New Deal.

NATIONAL PARKS AND MONUMENTS

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I should like to call the attention of the membership of the House today to the fact that we are going to consider the Consent Calendar. On that calendar are many requests from Members of the House of Representatives for parks or national monuments. Under the Maverick bills passed last year, Public Laws Nos. 201 and 292, we set up a General Advisory Board of the Historical Park Commission. That Advisory Board will pass on all parks and monuments in this country. We appropriated the money for this set-up. I think it is the duty of every Member of the House to permit his park bill or his monument bill to go before that committee before it is brought on the floor of the House. There are a number of them on the Consent Calendar today, and I am going to object to them. So you might as well make requests to carry them over without prejudice, because we have not the money, and you nor anybody else will tell us where we are going to get the money to continue indefinitely setting up these objects that are going to require additional funds in the future to maintain.

I hope the membership will request, before they are objected to, that their bills be carried over until the Historical Park Commission can pass on them. I make that request of you in order that you will not have your park bills objected to today.

[Here the gavel fell.]

SOIL EROSION

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
There was no objection.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, the Congress, as well as the whole country, is now concerned with the problem of providing a substitute for the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which the Supreme Court recently made inoperative. Regardless of its fate at the hands of the Court, that act saved American agriculture. We are hearing much discussion of the question of soil erosion, and I want to give you a picture of the situation as I see it; just what has been happening to our agricultural lands as a result of erosion and just how little we have realized its destructive force. Our country is comparatively new, and we have been able to take from the soil what we have needed, without realizing just how expensive it has been or what effect it has had on the value of the land for future productive purposes, or how those who are to come after us are to carry on. In other words, we are taking all and leaving nothing for those to whom we owe at least a moral responsibility.

The older parts of the country, of course, experienced the destructive effects of erosion a long time ago, but I doubt if they gave any serious thought as to just what it meant to them or how to prevent it. It was like a horse or a wagon; in the course of time it just wore out. The old farm was not producing like it used to, but aside from placing fertilizer on the soil there was nothing to do about it. They did not realize how serious their problem was or what they should do to prevent its continuance until it was too late.

The topsoil, or productive part of land, washed away cannot be restored. It is forever gone. True, with extensive and expensive fertilization, it may continue to produce, in a measure, a living, but its real fertility is gone, and the efforts to make a living from it will have to be doubled. A little thought and effort directed to preventing the cause will be far better than a futile effort to effect a cure.

Not always have those most affected been willing to accept advice on the subject, and they were reluctant to see the situation as it really was. It is human nature to do things in the usual and accepted manner, and we sometimes are inclined to resent new things even when they are designed for our protection and our prosperity. We have felt that so long as we were able to grow a reasonably good crop there was nothing to worry about. Probably the owner of the land felt unable to stand the expense of putting back into the soil that which he was, year after year, taking out. Most folks who buy a farm are so sorely pressed to meet the interest obligations, pay the taxes, a little on principal, and live, that nothing is left with which to rebuild the soil. In other words, we must farm it so intensively to live, and pay what we must, that we lose sight of just what it is costing us in destroyed value and lessened fertility of soil every year.

Unquestionably, it is a national problem, and it calls for the cooperation of the Government and the owners of the soil everywhere to solve it. It is a national problem, because it is the duty of the Government to protect national resources and plan for the future as well as to meet the problems of the present. When the natural resources of a country are destroyed and no effort made to restore them, that country is beginning to decline.

You may say that so long as our country is engaged in an effort to curtail production for the purpose of reducing surpluses, surely we are not concerned seriously with the question of making our land more productive. We will not always have a surplus; when our millions reach their full consuming power that surplus will vanish. For the purpose of this discussion, I am not concerned with producing more; I am concerned with the protection of the soil.

I can see no good reason for farming 160 acres of land if as much can be produced on 80 acres with half the effort and expense.

I do not desire to discuss here the question of taking lands out of cultivation or use for the purposes of crop reduction or controlling surpluses. That is another economic question that has little to do with the actual question of soil erosion as a destructive agency of wealth and value, and will occupy our attention soon.

For 5 years there has been a soil-erosion experimental station located at Bethany, in my district in Missouri, and the information gained from the experiments have thrown a great deal of light on the subject. The experiments have been carried on under such conditions as to make the information indisputable.

If it requires the results of a lifetime of labor to pay for 160 acres of land when that land is reasonably productive, what will be required when the productive capacity of that same land is reduced one-half or more, through the washing away of the fertile topsoil?

During our lives we have witnessed the destruction of the trees and shrubbery and vegetation of almost all kinds, and there has followed drought, the blowing away of the soil, and its rapid washing away. The rain that falls upon the ground rapidly rushes to the low places and carries with it the best part of the soil, and the moisture does the ground but little good because it only touches it in its mad rush to the river or other places of escape. Water falling upon a paved street rushes into the sewer and leaves the street clean and shiny. So it does when it falls upon the land, unless there is something to hold it back in its mad rush to the sea. The land is washed clean of the very part that is necessary to make it productive.

If moisture does not remain in the soil how may we expect to have moisture coming from the skies? Moisture, of course, draws moisture. In addition to preventing the washing away of the soil, we must see that sufficient moisture remains in the soil to support growing plant life.

Let us look at the picture: I can best describe the condition in my own State, and that condition is common to most other States. It is estimated that only about 10,000,000 acres of land in Missouri, or slightly more than one-fourth the area, are not subject to erosion, and approximately two to three million acres of such land are affected for agriculture purposes, because of stream cutting and deposits of eroded material from uplands adjacent to the stream bottoms. Slightly more than one-fourth of the area of the States is affected by moderate to serious erosion, having lost one-fourth to one-half of the original surface soil. Slightly less than one-half of the State, or probably 20,000,000 acres is affected by serious erosion, have lost one-half to three-fourths of the original surface soil. Another million acres are affected by severe erosion, and of course, the longer such erosion is permitted to continue, the greater the damage.

An acre of soil to a depth of 1 inch weighs approximately 143 tons. The result of a survey indicates that 20,850,000,000 tons of soil have left Missouri farms since they have been cultivated. It is estimated that the average Missouri soil contains 2,500 pounds of nitrogen, 1,250 pounds of phosphorus, and 2,800 pounds of potassium to the acre, to a depth of 7 inches. This means that Missouri, as a result of soil washing, has lost 26,090,000 tons of nitrogen, 13,030,000 tons of phosphorus, and 300,240,000 tons of potassium. If this lost soil could be magically replaced to a depth of 7 inches on the eroded acres of the State, it would make an area in size almost equal to one-half of the present land area of the State. The restored fertility would probably be sufficient to increase the corn yield from 10 to 20 bushels per acre over this area. Once this nitrogen and humus is lost it can never be completely replaced, even though heavy applications of manure are added, and green manure crops are turned under.

If it is assumed that commercial nitrogen sells for 10 cents a pound, the loss of nitrogen fertility alone from Missouri soils has been approximately $5,000,000,000, since the land was first farmed—and Missouri is comparatively a new State.

These figures may readily show one of the causes of depressed land values, delinquent taxes, and foreclosures, in areas where erosion is particularly destructive. If it is to be permitted to continue unchecked, I do not see how we may expect to make farm loans in the future. The collateral is rapidly being destroyed.

Erosion has been far more serious since the war. When prices of farm commodities became very high and land values in accordance, farmers everywhere plowed up pasture lands and planted grain which brought much more income to them. The result was that such lands immediately began to wash away. Then farm commodities slumped tremendously in value, and it became necessary for every farmer to produce all he possibly could with the facilities available to live and meet his obligations. That meant no rotation of crops, and the erosion that had started increased each year in startling degrees.

In the United States, 100,000,000 acres of formerly cultivated land has already been ruined and abandoned. That is the equivalent of 625,000 farms of 160 acres each, and approximately the combined extent of the States of Ohio, Illinois, Virginia, and South Carolina; 125,000,000 more acres now in production are practically stripped of the topsoil and still another 100,000,000 acres of cultivated land is rapidly approaching the point of bankrupt farming. The cost to the farmers of the United States amounts to $400,000,000 annually.

According to measurements made at the erosion service station in north Missouri, erosion is removing the surface soil 7 inches, or plow depth of soil, in slightly less than 15 years where corn is planted up and down an 8-percent slope. The average loss of soil amounted to 60 tons per acre per year.

Results indicate that under unprotected cultivated conditions the rate of erosion increases rapidly as the length of the slope increases. Doubling the length of slope increases the average erosion 1.66 times, and trebling the length increases the rate of erosion 2.59 times.

Another test showed soil losses from a 3.68-percent slope, over a 6-year period, of 41.2 tons per acre annually, where the ground had been plowed to a depth of 4 inches, and that approximately 68 percent of the annual rainfall was held back; the balance was cutting and tearing and taking away the soil. From a grass-covered area of the same slope and soil type less than 0.03 ton of solid matter was removed each year, or a total of 1.7 tons in 6 years, while 88.45 percent of the rainfall was retained and soaked into the soil. At this rate of erosion, 7 inches of the topsoil would have washed away in 24 years from the area tilled 4 inches deep. Whereas it would have taken 3,547 years to remove the same amount from the grassed area.

Slightly more than three-fourths of the soils of Missouri have lost over one-fourth of their original fertile surface soil and one-half of the soils have lost one-half or more of their original soil according to recent surveys made by the State agricultural college.

What is the remedy? First, there must be a thorough understanding and appreciation of the seriousness of the situation, and just what it means to the future of our country and to our own prosperity. The farmers must realize the seriousness from their own point of view and wholeheartedly enter into the cooperative plan the Government has worked out for crop rotation, proper planting, terracing of fields to shorten slopes, stopping washes in cultivated fields, and fertilization. Experiments seem to show that crops may be divided into three general classes in regard to erosion control. (1) Sod crops which are erosion resistant. Among them are bluegrass, timothy, red clover, lespedeza, alfalfa, and sweetclover. (2) Small-grain crops (wheat, oats, barley, and rye), which are partly resistant. (3) Cultivated crops such as corn or soybeans, which are highly erosive.

In connection with the erosion station I mentioned heretofore, for the past 3 years there have been more than 600 members of C. C. C. camps engaged in soil-erosion work in one county, and such work has covered a large area. The results have been far reaching and those who have observed the results of the work and the ones who have benefited by it are most enthusiastic. The farmers have readily entered into contracts to continue the work the Government has started. Large and small dams have been constructed in places where necessary to do the most good.

It is a comparatively easy task to stop washes in fields if proper methods are employed; the expense is practically nothing and the result surprising.

Their experiments have shown the effect of properly laying out a field for planting and cultivation; the proper locating of different kinds of crops in the same field, to prevent erosion; terraces constructed to shorten the slopes, thus retarding the progress of the water; the effect of rotating crops and the consequent saving of the soil as well as its enrichment and the necessity for fertilization, even on sodded eroded soil, to prevent further erosion and to restore, in a measure, the productive qualities. May I say here that I believe the C. C. C. camps have been the most effective agency the Government has created to combat the ravages of soil erosion.

The result of one demonstration that comes to my mind seems to me to demonstrate very clearly the effectiveness of the character of work I have been describing. In the district where the demonstration was made, there are two streams alike in size and draining approximately the same size area each, and the area drained by each is of the same topographical formation. The soil erosion prevention methods were carried out in the area drained by only one of these streams. Measurements were made of a rain, general over the whole area. The stream in the area where no work had been done rose 3 feet higher than the stream in the area where the work had been done, and the stream in the area where the work had been done stayed up 3 hours longer than the other stream. This, of course, was conclusive evidence of effectiveness of the methods used in the area; the water was being held back and soaking into the soil and creating a reservoir for future use in the growing of crops; it was not rushing off the soil and carrying with it tons and tons of the topsoil necessary to fertility.

The Government cannot, of course, do all the work necessary to protect the vast areas that are affected. It can, however, show the way.

Experiment stations are located at various places in the country, and I should like to see every farmer avail himself of the opportunity of visiting one of them and seeing for himself just what they are proving—seeing how much of the value of his land is being washed away every year.

In every community where erosion is at work, I should like to see the farmers form cooperative organizations for the development of conservation projects; to acquire, on a cooperative basis, machinery necessary to do the work, and to have the benefit of the knowledge of a trained expert on the subject, the latter, of course, without cost to them. If this plan were followed, I believe thousands and thousands of now fertile lands would be saved from the ravages of erosion. The value of the land would be maintained, loans would be better secured, and for that reason more easily obtained. A living would come with less effort, obligations would be more easily met, and there would be some value in the heritage of those who are to follow.

PROGRESS IN THE POSTAL SERVICE

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include therein a radio address delivered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MEAD].

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks, in the RECORD, I include the following radio address delivered by Representative JAMES M. MEAD, chairman of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, on January 30, 1936, over the National Broadcasting System:

The Postal Service has always played an active part in the growth of our Republic. It is not surprising, therefore, that when our country is seeking a way to spread employment, the world's biggest business, the Postal Service, should take the initiative and set the example for industry to follow.

We are proud of the law enacted in the last session of Congress, shortening the hours of service of our postal workers, giving them a 5-day week. This is in line with the economic trend of our day in every industry, due to the increased productivity of the machine.

Not one of us would be willing to discard the modern inventions which lighten labor, which turn out work so efficiently and so speedily; but the truth is brought home to us daily that these mechanical contrivances are revolutionizing the world—they are taking the bread from the mouths of our workingmen in so dangerously reducing the number of jobs.

The machines are here to stay. It is our job to find a way to use these inventions wisely. In giving the world the benefit of the speedier method of production, we must, at the same time, protect our workers. They, too, must benefit from these labor-saving devices.

We must find new avenues of employment, and we must accompany this program by a division of the available jobs among all willing to work.

What is more logical right now than a fair division of labor opportunities by shortening the work periods?

We are now operating under that plan in the Postal Service, and it is proving successful. By reducing the workweek from 44 hours to 40 hours, regular employees have been given long-merited promotions, relief has been provided for more than 18,000 substitutes; and with all this remarkable progress the Department paid its way. Additional help has been taken on, and the Service is expanding to meet present-day needs of increased mail volume with faster and more frequent deliveries of mail to our farmers, our business houses, and our homes.

When private industry follows the example of the Postal Service, America's problem of unemployment will be well-nigh solved.

Another achievement of the Department is the spanning of the Pacific by the air mail. On November 22 last the China Clipper spread its wings at Alameda, Calif., soared into the sky, and then headed for the Philippines. That was the first scheduled trans-Pacific air-mail flight in history. Just 100 years earlier the first clipper ship sailed into San Francisco Harbor; and now in our day we have seen the blazing of new trails, the linking of America with Asia, the spanning of 8,000 miles of ocean in 5 days. It is almost unbelievable.

And this is but the forerunner of another amazing development—the development of trans-Atlantic commercial service by air.

Our Postmaster General is so confident that the bridging of the Atlantic by air is sure to follow that he is inviting the attention of Congress to the desirability of preparing for such service. Mr. Farley declares: "It has been the experience of the United States that when better communications and faster transportation have been established between this and other countries better understandings have resulted, and an improvement in trade and commerce has followed."

Another growth of the Postal Service is to the north. In the last session we passed a bill authorizing contract air-mail service in Alaska, and, on a wider scale than was previously the case, it is now supplementing the slower dog-sled service. The air mail is speeding up communication between the States and the Territory of Alaska, and it is rendering a humane service in rushing food and medical supplies to the starving and the sick in the isolated regions of the north.

Air-mail service now links the islands of Hawaii, giving daily instead of of semiweekly service. The islands' first letter carriers were the missionaries, who carried the mail in making their pilgrimages from one island to another.

This is a progressive age in which we are living. We are witnessing changes which were merely dreams a few years back. Not long ago the 40-hour week for labor was unheard of, the bridging of the Pacific by airplane was out of the question. But both have come to pass. Even greater things lie in store for us; and we can feel confident that, whatever they may be, the Postal Service is sure to play a prominent role in all such stupendous undertakings.

TEXAS CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on House Joint Resolution 459, to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the Texas Centennial Exposition and celebrations to be held in the State of Texas during the years 1935 and 1936, and authorizing the President to invite foreign countries and nations to participate therein, and for other purposes", and ask that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

DR. MEAD

Mr. EKWALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks relative to the late Dr. Mead and to include therein an article which appeared in the Portland Journal, of Portland, Oreg., after Dr. Mead's death.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

Mr. EKWALL. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted by the House, I desire to insert in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an editorial from the Oregon Daily Journal, of Portland, Oreg., in its issue of Tuesday, January 28, 1936, eulogistic of the late Dr. Elwood Mead, Commissioner of the United States Reclamation Service.

This encomium pays Dr. Mead a well-deserved tribute. Here was a man of great vision, who translated his concepts into realities and his prophecies into fulfillment. No idle dreamer was he. That which he had envisioned in youth and middle age was vouchsafed to him in the winter of life to accomplish. It would not be too much to say of Dr. Mead that he was an empire builder, for his was "a pioneer idea instinct with genius." In this respect he can justly take his place in history alongside the immortal George Washington. The parallel is striking. Washington as an engineer solved stupendous and vexatious problems for the benefit of mankind. His vision embraced a wide terrain. He opened up vast tracts of land fitted to become the home of millions of American farmers. He spoke of his plan of waterways to the West as the "channel of commerce to the extensive and valuable trade of a rising empire." The horizon of this empire, however, scarcely extended beyond the Alleghenies. Many decades thereafter it fell to the lot of another great American, Dr. Elwood Mead, to see, with prophetic ken, the potentialities of the vast western country beyond the Rockies for development by the ingenuity of man, aided by "the most powerful machines yet devised." This public benefactor, self-abnegating, gave his knowledge, gave his science, gave his spirit, and gave his very life that future generations might benefit by his work and his self-sacrificing devotion to duty.

As a member of the standing Committee of the House on Irrigation and Reclamation, I came in close contact with the work of Dr. Mead, and I feel sure that all of my colleagues on this committee join with me in agreeing that he, like Saint Paul, might well say:

I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.

The editorial tribute to him is as follows:

DR. MEAD

Dr. Elwood Mead built his own monument. He built it of earth and concrete and with water. He built it of the desert turned into farms and flowers and homes.

Dr. Mead, at 78, and after only a week's illness, is dead in Washington, D. C. He had been United States Commissioner of Reclamation since 1924. To him was given the building of Boulder Dam on the Colorado, of Grand Coulee Dam on the Columbia, of Owyhee and Vale irrigation projects in Oregon, of Casper-Alcova in Wyoming, and of other great enterprises of reclamation throughout the West. He was a benefactor to the Oregon country.

The greatest work of his life he did after he had passed three score and ten. And after he was 75 he directed the spending of hundreds of millions of dollars allotted to reclamation in the recovery program. When he passed, 35 reclamation dams were under construction; $170,000,000 was being spent, and $30,000,000 of this amount in Portland's trade territory.

While Dr. Mead built he prophesied. He predicted on the Pacific coast as great cities as have been built in the world. He prophesied a great and widespread population in the West and activities that shall be titanic. He pointed to the West as the new opportunity for the drought-stricken people of the Midwest. He found profound significance for the future in the fact that the Columbia River has the greatest water supply in the arid districts of this Nation.

He found the basis of his prophecy in the plains and valleys of volcanic ash made miraculously fruitful and beautiful by water scientifically led from nature's inverted reservoirs, the mountains. He had used in construction some of the most powerful machines yet devised. He had shown that every man employed on a reclamation project employs two elsewhere. He had given proof to Congress that every dollar invested in a reclamation project produced $4 of additional value. He had shown eastern industries that reclamation projects were drawing upon them for $100,000,000 of manufactured products a year. And in one accounting, below present totals, he revealed that upon 3,000,000 acres of land reclaimed in Federal projects, 41,000 country homes had been provided, cities and towns had been built, and a revolving fund investment of $280,000,000 had been turned into $2,000,000,000 of property values.

Isalah, another prophet, wrote the epitaph to which Dr. Mead is entitled:

"And they that shall be of thee shall build the old waste places; thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called the repairer of the breach, the restorer of paths to dwell in.

"I give waters in the wilderness and rivers in the desert."

Some months ago Dr. Mead confronted Mrs. Mead's proposal for retirement, for ease, and for a trip around the world. He elected to stay on the job. Thus he was happiest, for when he had passed he left in full vigor the work that produces life.

CONQUESTS IN THE ORIENT

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, in the light of the great changes that have taken place in the Orient in recent times, the subjugation of Manchuria and the establishment of a government dominated by the Japanese, and the monetary changes that have been effected in China and their effect on the business and financial relations of the people of this country and those of China and Japan, it will be interesting to review some of the statements that appear in the memorial of Premier Tanaka, an ambitious plan for the conquest of China and the rest of Asia and world dominance, with the following quotations from the Memoirs of Tanaka that appeared in a contribution made by myself in 1932, before the conquest of Manchuria, the bombardment of Shanghai, or the nationalization of silver in China. I quote from the memorial:

Iron and steel are closely connected with national development. Every country attaches great importance to it. But because of the lack of ores we have found no solution of this problem. Hitherto we have had to import steel from the Yangtze Valley and the Malay Peninsula. But, according to a secret survey of our general staff, a wealth of iron mines are found in many places in Manchuria and Mongolia. A conservative estimate of the reserve is 10,000,000,000 tons.

The term Manchuria and Mongolia includes the Provinces of Fengtien, Kirin, Heilungkiang, and outer and inner Mongolia. It extends on area of 74,000 square miles, having a population of 28,000,000 people. The territory is more than three times as large as our own empire, not counting Korea and Formosa, but is inhabited by only a third as many people. The attractiveness of the land does not arise from the scarcity of population alone; its wealth of forestry, minerals, and agricultural products is also unrivaled elsewhere in the world.

After studying the present possibilities of our country, our best policy lies in the direction of taking positive steps to secure rights and privileges in Manchuria and Mongolia. Armed by the rights already secured, we shall seize the resources all over the country. Having China's entire resources at our disposal, we shall proceed to conquer India, the archipelago, Asia Minor, Central Asia, and even Europe.

It will be recalled that when the nine-power treaty which restricted our movements in Manchuria and Mongolia was signed, public opinion was greatly aroused. All agreed that the nine-power treaty was initiated by the United States. Unfortunately, just as we were ready to carry out our policy and "void the nine-power treaty, the Seiyukai cabinet suddenly fell and our policy failed of fruition."

MONEY MANIPULATION UNDER THE GOLD STANDARD NECESSARY FOR THE SUCCESS OF JAPANESE SCHEMES

Although Manchuria and Mongolia are within our field of activities, yet the legal tender is still silver. The Chinese businessmen use silver money throughout and are free from the effects of exchange fluctuations. (It might be observed right here that the "effects of exchange" constitute a toll profit to the banking interest on every transaction between the citizens of different nations.)

Therefore their junk (water-borne) trade is prosperous although they have no scientific knowledge of exchange value of gold and silver, they always gain in the transaction. It (the silver standard) often conflicts with our gold basis and works to our disadvantage. That our people have failed to prosper as they should in these places is due to the existence of silver monetary system there. The Chinese have persistently upheld the silver basis, and therefore made it impossible for us firmly to establish our colonization plans on firm economic foundation.

The money that we bring into Manchuria is of gold standard. When we use it either for daily livelihood or for industry and trade, it has to be exchanged into Chinese silver dollars. The fluctuation of exchange is not infrequently as much as 20 percent, resulting in serious loss to our people.

With the silver standard in existence the Chinese Government can increase their notes to counteract our gold notes, consequently our banks will fail to carry out the mission of extending our country's influence.

If the gold standard is adopted, we can issue gold notes freely. With the credit of the gold notes, we can acquire rights in real property and natural resources and defeat the credit of the Chinese silver notes. The Chinese will be unable to compete with us; the currency of the whole of Manchuria and Mongolia will be in our control.

Until we have entirely discredited the Chinese silver notes, we will never place our gold notes in their proper place in Manchuria and Mongolia, much less obtain the monopoly in currency and finance of the two countries.

In view of the above-mentioned considerations, we must overthrow Manchuria's inconvertible silver notes and divest the Government of its purchasing power. Then we can extend the use of our gold notes in hope of dominating the economic and financial activities of Manchuria and Mongolia. Furthermore, we can compel the authorities of the three eastern Provinces to employ Japanese advisers to help us gain supremacy in financial matters.

We must have the rights of monopoly for the sale of Manchurian and Mongolian products before we can carry out our continental policy and prevent the invasion of American capital as well as the influence of the Chinese traders. (Reprinted and distributed by World Peace Movement, 108 Park Row, New York.)

There is food for thought in the above paragraphs.

Is there a parallel between the scheme outlined by the Japanese Premier by the manipulation of money based on the gold standard for the subjugation and control of the Chinese people and the schemes, recently exposed, of our international bankers for the subjugation and control of the masses of the American people? Is the money system of this country under its present management being allowed to function freely for the advancement and general welfare of the masses, or is it being manipulated to deprive them of the fruits of their thrift and industry?

While the Japanese Government has repudiated and disavowed the authenticity of the memorial, subsequent events point to the adoption of a preconceived plan that closely follows the proposal contained in the memorial text of the pronouncement. It is apparent that outside influence, with the connivance of Chinese financiers, has successfully brought about the nationalization of silver by China, placing an interest burden on the business of the Chinese people, as has been done in this and other countries, by retiring gold and silver and replacing the coinage with paper money, loaned into circulation when secured by such interest-bearing obligations as may be eligible. It will be interesting to watch the results of the efforts of financiers to retain control of money and credit in the several nations and at the same time restore business conditions by these experiments.

TOWNSEND PLAN

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask permission to extend my remarks in the RECORD at this point, to insert a short statement showing where a very small portion of the Townsend money has gone.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object; I have never objected to a colleague extending his remarks—but I think this ought to be pointed out to our colleagues on both sides: That very recently for the first time in years in the House a practice has grown up of Members asking permission to extend their remarks in the RECORD "at this point", and then inserting long speeches. I think it is a very bad practice. I do not think our colleagues should indulge in it. Those responsible for the RECORD ought to see that it is not pursued.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The statement submitted by Mr. HOFFMAN follows:

IS THERE A PROFIT IN THE TOWNSEND PLAN; IS THAT PROFIT HONESTLY OBTAINED?

Beyond question there is a profit in the Townsend plan. Who gets the profit? Does it go to Dr. Townsend or to those who are paying their dimes, quarters, and dollars to support the plan? Who will profit from the plan if it becomes a law, and what will that profit be?

In the beginning the plan was an old-age pension plan—a pension to the aged, to those over 60. The plan is now a plan to restore prosperity. The appeal in the beginning was to justice and to sympathy to relieve want and suffering. The object now being to increase business, let us treat the proposition in a businesslike way. Dr. Townsend testified at a hearing before a congressional committee that his salary was but $50 per week; that he received nothing else. Let us have the facts:

As long ago as May 18, 1935, the doctor signed and swore to a complaint in the district court of the United States for the district of Colorado, in which, among other things, he said that the membership of the clubs of the State of Colorado was approximately 200,000; "that each new member has heretofore paid, and will hereafter pay, the sum of 25 cents initiation fee; and that each member has heretofore, and will hereafter, pay the sum of 10 cents per month as a voluntary contribution; and that said contribution is now regularly made by more than one-half of the membership in the State of Colorado, and will hereafter continue to be so made; that said membership makes further additional contributions which average 1 cent per member per week, and will so continue hereafter * * *."

So, for initiation fees in Colorado alone the members have, up to May 18, 1935, paid $50,000; that each member has heretofore, and will hereafter, pay the sum of 10 cents per month as a voluntary contribution, which means $20,000 per month from the State of Colorado alone. And that is not all. There are, as the good doctor says, other contributions.

If he is correct in his statement that his members the country over number 21,000,000, if but one-quarter of them pay the 10-cents-per-month dues, someone is getting $525,000 per month from that source alone. And do not forget this is just the 10 cent dues. There are many other sources of revenue; one, the Townsend Weekly. There is also the Townsend Legion, with dues of $1 a head per month.

A partial statement would look something like this:

Membership fees a year for the doctor—for easy figuring let's lose a million, and say that one-half of a 20,000,000 membership pay 25 cents; another.....	2,500,000
The profit from newspaper weekly per year, $200,000 (one-half to Dr. Townsend).....	100,000

Total to Townsend organization, per year..... 8,600,000

Here is a little total of $8,600,000, to say nothing about the dues from the legionnaires, the profits from the sales of badges, pictures, etc. Perhaps the doctor's motive is just pure, unadulterated charity, but with his plan incidentally goes an income that would make some of these international bankers and Wall Street bankers decidedly envious.

The foregoing is a very brief statement, but from it you can get the big idea.

HOW DOES THE DOCTOR GET THE MONEY?—WHAT DOES HE TELL THE PEOPLE TO MAKE THEM SHELL OUT?

Let me quote from the Townsend plan victory chart (based on Townsend plan becoming the law of the land):

"THE MIRACLE OF 10 CENTS (IN ACTION FOR ANNUITANTS)"

"Quota investment on monthly basis: Original investment 10 cents. Returns on investment (after first few months), $199.90. Life returns on investment (after first few months), $200.

"Quota investment on yearly basis: Original investment, $1.20. Returns on investment (after first year), $2,398.80. Life returns on investment (after first year), $2,400.

"THE MIRACLE OF 10 CENTS (IN ACTION FOR NONANNUITANTS)"

"A permanent well-paid job or position until 60, then $200 monthly, $2,400 yearly, for life.

"The formula: Congress will vote for the Townsend plan when the Townsend Clubs control the vote in the 435 congressional districts of the 48 States."

so on, as outlined in the plan, join the club, and pay their dues? Is it not strange that even those under 60, promised a "permanent well-paid job or position until 60", should bite on a bait of this kind? You who are paying your membership fee, your monthly dues, and besieging your Congressman to vote for this plan, think a little, not only of what the doctor tells it will do for you but of what it will do to people generally, and then take one thought as to what the doctor and his organizers are getting out of it and determine for yourselves whether they are working for the interests of those contributing to the plan or for their own interests.

And what are you getting, or what will you get, for the money which the local organizations and its members are contributing? In this circular you were promised $200 a month if you were eligible to receive the pension. Now you know from the admissions of those who promised you this sum, made on the floor of Congress, that they have no such plan in mind, that they have no such bill pending in Congress. Why be longer deceived? Put your faith and your trust in men that you know to be honest, in Representatives who do not promise the impossible. Be no longer deceived by those who, pretending to be working for your interests, are merely serving their own.

It is time that investigation was made, and the real purpose of these organizers and their lack of ability and sincerity disclosed to those they are deceiving.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, a few days ago I explained the attitude of the Democratic Party in connection with labor legislation. Shortly afterward my distinguished colleague from Illinois, Mr. DIRKSEN, made reply. Tonight, on the Star Radio Forum, Senator O'MAHONEY will explain the O'Mahoney-Mead bill. The title of his discourse will be, "National Charters for National Commerce." The bill is, in my judgment, an answer in part, at least, to the present economic problem. I hope you will listen to the Senator's address tonight.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, the plight of deserving and needy people in this country who have kept off relief thus far but now find themselves in distress, as described by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] a few minutes ago, finds a deep response in my heart. The question I want to put to the gentleman and to the Members of this House now is: What are you going to do about it?

Mr. BLANTON. We ought to take Mr. Hopkins by the nape of the neck and throw him out of that building down there. Let us look at this from Mr. Hopkins' angle.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Our Colorado delegation went to see Mr. Hopkins a few days ago in behalf of 30,000 workers in the State of Colorado who are getting no relief and who cannot get work, although the public-works program in that State has been expanded 25 percent beyond its original objective, or from 31,000 to 42,000. Mr. Hopkins said to our committee:

We now have about 3,000,000 men and women at work in this country under the W. P. A. program. Tomorrow morning I could turn these 3,000,000 people out and put 3,000,000 more people in their places.

The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that the $4,000,000,000 would not put to work over one-third of the idle people in this country. I said this to Mr. Hopkins:

What you were up against when we passed the $4,800,000,000 bill was 10,000,000 idle people in this country. You started out with an objective of putting 3,500,000 people to work. It was, therefore, obvious from the start that you could not take care of more than one-third of the idle people in this country. This is so in every Member's district. You have not yet exhausted the registered unemployed who were on relief November 1 when the W. P. A. program started, but naturally every idle man in this country will feel that he ought to be among the 3,500,000 who are put to work, and you have not got the money.

Mr. Hopkins nodded in the affirmative.

Mr. RICH. If we would tax mass production a little bit, these men from industry would be put back to work.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Regardless of where the money might come from, the point I want to make is that it is not there now. The fact that W. P. A. now has employed in Colorado about 42,000 men and women, while its original objective under the W. P. A. allocation for that State was only 31,000, does not mean that Colorado was given a 25-percent increase in its allocation. It simply means that in order to relieve unemployment distress immediately 11,000 more were put to work, which will simply shorten the life of the allocation. They will run out of money just that much sooner. Something had to be done, and they did all they could.

Administrator Hopkins made it clear in answer to the plea of our delegation that if he expanded the employment program in one State, he would be called upon to do it in every State. He instanced the fact that the mayor of one great city was asking for the employment of an additional hundred thousand; that the mayor of another great city was asking for a vast increase; and that he had scores of other requests. I hope I am violating no confidence when I say that Mr. Hopkins stated that if he merely maintained the present employment figures the W. P. A. appropriation would be exhausted by June 30, and that even to maintain it until June 30 the fund might have to be replenished from unexpended or defaulted sums in other appropriations. I even fear that the situation may be worse than Mr. Hopkins painted it. I got information from another inside source that the works-progress appropriation would be exhausted by April 1, and that they had contemplated reducing the present employment figures 400,000 in order to insure that the money would last until April 1. This action, it is true, was not taken, but even its contemplation indicates the straits to which the administration is being reduced to maintain its work-relief program. We had just as well face the plain fact that Mr. Hopkins is not putting these deserving, needy people to work because he has not got the money.

I have a letter from a Works Progress regional director in my State who has a district of nine counties. He says that he has at work now about 9,400 men and women in the nine counties, but that there are still 2,550 unemployed who were on relief and registered as unemployed, and on top of this 2,000 deserving, needy people who have succeeded up to this time in keeping off relief, but who are now as desperately in need of relief and of work and as deserving of it as any people in the State. I do not need to come to Washington to get this picture. I got it at home. I got it in my office and out among the people every day until I was driven almost to despair. That regional office has no money to employ these 4,500 people, the State director has no money to employ them, and the Federal Administrator, as he himself stated, could put 3,000,000 more people to work if he had the money.

Mr. Speaker, I may say that I knew before the shift was made from direct relief to work relief—I knew as far back as the 1st of October and so represented to the administrative heads at Washington—that there would be not less than 40,000 people in Colorado who would be outside of all forms of relief this winter. I was too conservative; 100,000 would come nearer the fact. As far back as the 1st of November I stated in the papers in Colorado that there must be another large relief appropriation passed by this session of Congress. It ought to be passed, and it ought to be passed now. I am advised that in the face of the opposition clamor against public works and relief, the President does not want to come to Congress at this time and ask for another appropriation to round out the present fiscal year, and that a request may only be made later on for the next fiscal year.

Mr. Speaker, my attitude on this matter is reflected in a letter I wrote a constituent this morning in answer to one suggesting that it would be a good thing if Members of Congress followed the suggestions in Al Smith's speech to the Liberty League. I told this constituent that, with as high as one-fourth of all the people in my congressional district dependent upon Federal aid for food, I could not find much light in Al Smith's suggestions to Congress, and that I had much more immediate worries than Mr. Smith and the Liberty League. Mr. Hoover is a little more definite than Al Smith. He made a speech at St. Louis recently, in which he laid down a four-point program: First, stop public works; second, do it now—so we still have only one point; third, cut relief in two; fourth, study American history and the Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, under permission to extend my remarks, I am inserting a letter just received by me from W. P. A. workers in a county in my district. I wish Al Smith or Mr. Hoover had the answering of such letters as this every day. I would be interested in reading their answers.

WALSENBURG, COLO., January 29, 1936.

To JOHN A. MARTIN,

Congressman of Colorado, Washington, D. C.:

We, the workers on Huerfano County W. P. A. projects, assembled at a mass meeting in the Blue Glade Hall this 29th day of January 1936, have adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas the W. P. A. workers are furnishing their own transportation to and from the jobs, under the most miserable circumstances, and paying for medical service for themselves and their families; and

Whereas the workers and their families are going undernourished and without sufficient clothing, thereby threatening and undermining their general health; and

Whereas the minimum wage of $44 per month for W. P. A. workers has been tried and found out to be insufficient to adequately supply the necessities of life for the workers and their families: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we demand prevailing union wages on all W. P. A. projects, 30 hours per week, with transportation to and from the jobs, and medical aid to the workers and their families; be it further

Resolved, That we recommend that the W. P. A. administration set up for all children a hot-lunch project in all of Huerfano County schools; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of the following officials: Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Works Progress Administrator, Washington, D. C.; Senator Costigan, Colorado Senator, Washington, D. C.; John A. Martin, Colorado Congressman, Washington, D. C.; Paul D. Shriver, Colorado Works Progress Administrator, Denver, Colo.; Ed. C. Johnson, Governor of Colorado, Denver, Colo.; Charles Haines, Huerfano County Works Progress Administrator, Walsenburg, Colo.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, on Friday of last week the gentleman from Texas made a statement in his speech which I think reflects on my integrity. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Dakota?

There was no objection.

Mr. BURDICK. When the Wheeler-Howard Act was before the Congress and under consideration in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, you will recall I submitted an amendment to limit the amount of money given to the Indian Bureau for the purpose of carrying on propaganda among the Indians for this new act.

I think I was entirely right when I sought to limit the amount of $160,000 to $10,000; but the House took action, and that is all there is to it. I had my say, but the House thought otherwise.

Mr. Speaker, in a speech the following day the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK] stated:

BURDICK, on page 1280, entirely misdescribes the self-government feature of the Indian Reorganization Act.

He made the statement that in referring to the act I said that any committee of Indians organized under the new act was always subject to the whim and the caprice of the Department of the Interior. He took exception to that statement and said that I misdescribed the act, and states this:

The committee or governing body of the tribe, under its constitution, is elected by the tribe and is subject to removal by the tribe alone.

I want to say that I did not misdescribe this act to the Members of Congress. I sat for 5 months on a committee which heard the complaints of the Indians; and if the Members of the House will refer to the hearings that were held on H. R. 7781, they will find set out in that document the fact that on the Klamath Indian Reservation the business committee did not suit the Department of the Interior, and this committee was removed. I say that the Department can remove any committee organized under the new act.

Mr. MAVERICK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. MAVERICK. If anything I said the other day was merely a difference of opinion, I may be wrong, and the gentleman may be right. I would not cast any reflection on the gentleman at all.

Mr. BURDICK. The thing I disliked was the statement that I misdescribed that act to this body.

Mr. MAVERICK. I will change that to difference of opinion, because I have a very high opinion for the gentleman's intelligence, integrity, and ability. Also, I agree with you pretty much on your ideas of the Federal Reserve System; upon that I think the gentleman from North Dakota is one of the greatest authorities in the United States. I agree with the gentleman upon some matters of importance, so this Indian business is a difference of opinion on what I regard as a minor matter. The gentleman from North Dakota serves his people well, and if necessary I will make an apology 9 miles long. [Applause.]

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, apparently this settles all difficulties.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I received notice from the Whip this morning to the effect that bills on the Private Calendar would be called tomorrow. Does that mean that an omnibus claim bill may be called up tomorrow?

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, an omnibus claim bill may not be called up tomorrow.

Mr. COCHRAN. An omnibus claim bill can be called up by unanimous consent tomorrow, if unanimous consent is granted?

The SPEAKER. The House may by unanimous consent agree to the consideration of such a bill, but under the rule omnibus bills may not be considered unless unanimous consent is given. Only individual bills on the Private Calendar may be considered tomorrow.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to express the hope that the Speaker will not recognize anyone requesting unanimous consent for the consideration of an omnibus claim bill until the Members of the House have had 10 days' notice in advance. This thing of calling up such bills on 24 hours' notice is not fair to the House. The bills provide for appropriations and, as the gentleman from Colorado stated the other day, the Congress, without any regard for the condition of the Treasury, is continually passing bills calling for large expenditures. Members should receive a week or 10 days' notice so they can examine omnibus claims bills.

JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Mr. DUFFY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee holding hearings with reference to amendments to the Clayton Act, as well as the Judiciary Committee itself, may sit during the session of the House tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts, may I say that a great many Members are awaiting for bills on the Private Calendar to be called, and I shall be forced to object to any further unanimous-consent requests.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, I merely rise at this time to take issue with my friend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] in reference to Mr. Hopkins and the relief program. At the conclusion of Mr. BLANTON's speech I called Mr. Hopkins' office and talked to Mr. Aubrey Williams in reference to the query propounded by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] put to the House today in reference to relief. There is no one in this House who would not be perfectly willing to give that citizen to whom the gentleman referred preference—I refer to the patriotic Americans who have striven mightily to carry on without aid from the Government, and who finally found themselves penniless and at the end of their rope—and the answer of Mr. Hopkins is this: Does Mr. BLANTON want everyone who is on the relief rolls taken off and put these other people on? Or, is Mr. BLANTON willing, as I am, to appropriate the money to put them all on?

Mr. BLANTON. I want all American citizens in distress to be treated exactly alike, with no discrimination.

Mr. CONNERY. That is exactly what Mr. Hopkins wants to do.

Mr. BLANTON. I do not want any halo or sacrosanct put around the heads of those on the relief rolls and give them Government work and say to every other worthy citizen in the United States whose family is starving, "You cannot have public work, because you have not been on relief."

Mr. CONNERY. I understand the gentleman from Texas perfectly.

Mr. BLANTON. I want American citizens in distress treated exactly alike, with no discrimination.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Hopkins wants to treat them all alike, but he cannot do so unless we give him the money. It is up to my friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON], to support an appropriation that will first take care of those citizens to whom he referred, who have made sacrifices and have come to the end of their rope, and also to take care of that extra 100,000 that Mayor Laguardia is calling for in New York, who have to go on relief, as well as these other thousands that are referred to by the mayors of Chicago and every other city in the United States. Let us take care of all of them. Is my friend the gentlemen from Texas willing to appropriate the money to take care of all of them?

Mr. BLANTON. We appropriated $4,800,000,000 to furnish work to all distressed Americans. That is a stupendous sum of money. It was intended for the worthy unemployed. Congress did not intend that discrimination should be shown. We wanted all treated fairly, and justly, and exactly alike. One distressed American is just the same as any other distressed American. I want to see them all treated exactly alike.

Mr. CONNERY. And I repeat to my friend from Texas, that that is exactly what Mr. Hopkins wants.

Mr. BLANTON. It may be what Mr. Hopkins wants, but he is doing just the reverse. He is giving all the work to those who have been on relief, and is giving no work to any man who through many sacrifices has kept off of relief, although his family is now starving. We must change this intolerable situation. It is indefensible.

[Here the gavel fell.]

PROCESSING TAXES

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following letter, which I have today written Mr. Gustavus F. Swift, president of Swift & Co., Chicago:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., January 30, 1936.

MR. GUSTAVUS F. SWIFT,
President, Swift & Co., Chicago, Ill.

DEAR MR. SWIFT: It is my understanding that by virtue of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the so-called rice-millers case, impounded processing taxes in an amount approximating $10,000,000 will be released to your company. In view of the fact that in paying these processing taxes you merely acted as a collecting agency for the Government of the United States, I am wondering what disposition your company expects to make of this money.

I assume that your company does not contend that it paid any portion of this tax or that it has any right or title to it at this time. I am basing this assumption upon the repeated statements which have been made by the packers of this country to the effect that they had not and could not absorb processing taxes, that they could not pass them on to the consumer and that the only alternative was to take them out of the price paid the producer. I assume that there is no question about this being the position of the packers of the country and of your own company. I specifically call your attention to the testimony of Mr. George E. Putnam, economist for Swift & Co., who testified before the House Committee on Agriculture on Saturday, December 17, 1932. At that time the committee had under consideration what was known as the Jones allotment bill, which imposed a processing tax upon hogs. After discussing at considerable length the effect and incidence of a processing tax on hogs, Mr. Putnam summarized the packers' position as follows:

"I should like to take up just 30 seconds by way of résumé of the principal points that I attempted to develop. I led you up through some rather dismal channels by way of showing some of the fundamental economic principles involved in the meat business and in the whole question of the incidence of a tax.

"First, the packer's profit margin is not sufficient to absorb a tax of one-half cent a pound or a tax of 2 cents per pound or a tax of 4 cents per pound.

"Second, the tax cannot be passed on to the consumer on the form of high prices because, first, the pork is highly perishable and must be moved at the market price, whether that price is satisfactory or unsatisfactory, and second, because there are a great many substitutes for pork, and if the packer attempted to pass on a tax on hogs to the consumer in the form of higher prices, the consumer would substitute not only other meats but any number of kinds of food. Therefore the tax must be passed on to the producer" (p. 232 of hearings).

In the course of the hearings on this bill Mr. Thomas E. Wilson, then president of Wilson & Co.; Mr. T. G. Lee, then president of Armour & Co., and Mr. Oscar Mayer, a packer of Madison, Wis., all testified to the same effect.

Mr. Mayer summed the matter up by saying:

"Under these conditions, any absorption of the tax by the packing industry is clearly impossible and there remains only the final alternative of pushing the tax back upon the farmer in the form of lower prices for livestock" (p. 283).

Mr. Lee said: "I am here for the purpose of stating to you from an experience of over 30 years in selling meat products that the proposed tax cannot be passed on to the consumer, and, likewise, that the processors cannot pay it" (p. 291).

Mr. Wilson said: "Now, as to the packer being able to pay this tax, there is nothing out of which he would be able to pay it, in his business. As I figure it, this would amount to approximately $300,000,000, the tax as proposed, and the manufacturers cannot take that out of their earnings. The packer has nothing out of which it can come. Therefore, if it cannot be passed on to the consumer and cannot be paid by the packer it must come out of the producer, in my opinion" (p. 268).

On March 6, 1935, the House Committee on Agriculture conducted hearings on the bill (H. R. 5585) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act. At that time Mr. Putnam, again representing your company, appeared, and for the purpose of ascertaining whether the predictions of the packers and their representatives as to the incidence of the tax were being borne out, I asked Mr. Putnam the following question:

"Mr. Putnam, is it your opinion that the farmer would today receive $2.25 more for his hogs if the processing tax were not in effect?"

Mr. Putnam replied:

"I say that if you will remove the processing tax from hogs the price of hogs would jump instantly $2.25 on the hundred, and I am most sure of that, for this reason: The farmer that produces hogs receives not only the market price, the current price, but if he is cooperating with the Government in the reduction of production program he receives a benefit payment of somewhere in the neighborhood of 90 to 95 percent of the processing tax. Now, do not misunderstand me; I do not say that the processing tax reduces the amount the farmer receives per hog, for on balance the processing tax is returned to him in the form of benefit payments but the market price is less."

In reply to a further question along the same line, Mr. Putnam replied:

"The market price is less by the amount of the processing tax" (pp. 254-255).

It would appear that it was still the belief of the packers after more than a year's experience with the processing tax that it was being passed back to the farmer. Indeed, I have never heard any other contention made by anyone representing the packing industry, and I take it for granted that no such contention is made now. Therefore, it would seem that the only fair and equitable disposition of this money would be for the packers to return it to the producers who had the amount of the tax deducted from the sale price of their hogs.

While it might take some time and trouble to return these taxes to the producers who have paid them, yet I assume that the records of your company are sufficiently complete to enable you to make such refunds within a reasonable period of time. In all fairness and good conscience this should be done as soon as possible.

This same inquiry, of course, might well be made of all of those who engage in the packing industry. It is impossible, however, for me to write all packers regarding the matter, so I am writing to you because of the influential position and leadership of your company in the industry. I am sure that whatever position you follow in this regard will be persuasive as to other companies. I shall be pleased to hear from you to the effect that it is the purpose of Swift & Co. to restore to the hog producers of the country the tax which the Federal Government has collected from them through you.

Very sincerely yours,

CLIFFORD R. HOPE.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized in his discretion, and under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to withdraw from the United States Treasury and to deposit in banks to be selected by him the common or community funds of any Indian tribe which are, or may hereafter be, held in trust by the United States, and on which the United States is not obligated by law to pay interest at higher rates than can be procured from the banks. The said Secretary is also authorized, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to deposit in banks to be selected by him the funds held in trust by the United States for the benefit of individual Indians: Provided, That no individual Indian money shall be deposited in any bank until the bank shall have agreed to pay interest thereon at a reasonable rate, except that the payment of interest may be waived in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior on active checking accounts: Provided further, That no tribal or individual Indian money shall be deposited in any bank until the bank shall have furnished an acceptable bond or pledged collateral security therefor in the form of any public-debt obligations of the United States and any bonds, notes, or other obligations which are unconditionally guaranteed as to both interest and principal by the United States, except that no such bond or collateral shall be required to be furnished by any such bank which is entitled to the benefits of section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, with respect to any deposits of such tribal or individual funds to the extent that such deposits are insured under such section: Provided, however, That nothing contained in this act, or in section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, shall operate to deprive any Indian having unrestricted funds on deposit in any such bank of the full protection afforded by section 12B of said Federal Reserve Act, irrespective of any interest such Indian may have in any restricted Indian funds on deposit in the same bank to the credit of a disbursing agent of the United States. For the purposes of said acts, said unrestricted funds shall constitute a separate and distinct basis for an insurance claim: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior, if he deems it advisable and for the best interest of the Indians, may invest the trust funds of any tribe or individual Indian in any public-debt obligations of the United States and in any bonds, notes, or other obligations which are unconditionally guaranteed as to both interest and principal by the United States: And provided further, That the foregoing shall apply to the funds of the

The bill was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. There was no objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice to enable the committee to comply with the Ramseyer rule.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

SKILLED SHORTHAND REPORTERS IN THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4886, providing for the employment of skilled shorthand reporters in the executive branch of the Government.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. EAGLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

BOARD OF SHORTHAND REPORTING

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4887, to create a board of shorthand reporting, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TABER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, this would create another board, would it not?

Mr. EAGLE. Which costs the Government not one penny.

Mr. TABER. Would the gentleman explain how that could be possible?

Mr. EAGLE. Gladly, because it provides that out of a fee of $25 each, to be paid by the applicants for a certificate as a certified shorthand reporter, all salaries and expenses shall be paid, and the bill expressly so states.

Mr. TABER. Unless this board passes on the qualification of someone, they cannot be employed as a shorthand reporter in the District?

Mr. EAGLE. That would not be true.

Mr. TABER. It would not?

Mr. EAGLE. No.

Mr. TABER. I think I will ask that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. EAGLE. I wonder if the gentleman would be patient and allow me to make a brief explanation of it, because I am satisfied if he understands it as I do, he will not be disposed to object.

Mr. TABER. I am willing to reserve the objection.

Mr. EAGLE. At the request of the National Shorthand Reporters Association and State shorthand reporters' associations of many States, at the request of several of the departments of the Government, including the Interstate Commerce Commission, I have introduced this bill. A similar bill, S. 1453, was introduced in the Senate, unanimously reported favorably by the Senate committee, and passed unanimously by the Senate, and has been referred to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House, and that committee has considered it and, in turn, made its favorable report.

The State of Iowa and the State of New York led off in the matter of securing accurate stenographic transcripts of public business. Many other States have, also, but those two, notably, have taken the lead.

I wish to say to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] and other Members that at present, under the statute and under the rule prevailing, under the statute and under the custom prevailing, stenographers to make stenographic reports for great bureaus, like the Interstate Commerce Commission and other independent agencies of the Government, are obtained by competitive bidding. Contractors come and bid so much to do the work for 6 months or 12 months. You do not get a lawyer upon the basis of competitive bidding; if you did, you would lose every case. You do not get a doctor upon the basis of competitive bidding; if you did, you would likely go to your grave. Yet in matters affecting millions or even hundreds of millions of dollars in the Interstate Commerce Commission and other great independent agencies of the Government, and in matters affecting the rights and liberties of the citizens, bids are let to contractors at wholesale, who take them so low they cannot get the best stenographic service in the country, but get men who cannot compete with the successful and competent shorthand reporters of the country, and they often make reports upon which lawyers and litigants, rich and poor alike, cannot rely. The contractors make up the deficit, if at all, by the sale of extra certified copies of these imperfect records. This bill provides that three persons who have lived in the United States 5 years and have been public stenographers for 5 years shall be appointed by the President as a board of shorthand reporting, to be confirmed by the Senate. Thereafter the term shall be 3 years for such persons; that their compensation, and their only compensation, shall be a fee of $25 for each applicant to get a certificate. Nowhere does it say that the Government boards, bureaus, or departments are limited to these holding certificates, but the implied understanding is that they will employ such as have been examined, qualified, and certified, in order to have good services.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EAGLE. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. Does the gentleman think the application fee a little high?

Mr. EAGLE. I do not, because if the applicant shall fail to pass, he could, within 2 years, without the payment of an additional fee, when better qualified come and be examined again.

At stated periods and times this board of three, paying their traveling expenses and their own compensation out of such $25 items from all over the country, go to different parts of the United States where it would be convenient for applicants to be examined. I think, therefore, the fee is not too high.

Mr. KNUTSON. Is there not danger of favoritism in an arrangement of this kind?

Mr. EAGLE. I do not think so.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order at this time.

Mr. RICH. Could not the Civil Service hold these examinations?

Mr. EAGLE. No; not under the present civil-service statute.

Mr. RICH. Would it not be more satisfactory for the Civil Service Commission to do this?

Mr. EAGLE. The Civil Service Commission law would have to be amended before it could so make by examination an eligible list of stenographers for such purposes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

CLASSIFICATION OF POSTMASTERS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3251, extending the classified civil service to include postmasters of the first, second, and third classes, and for other purposes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, when this bill was called 2 weeks ago I believe I made the statement to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MEAD] that I would favor a bill placing first-, second-, and third-class postmasters under civil service. I thought at that time this bill might be the answer to my prayer, but I find in studying the bill that it merely creates the machinery by which all existing postmasters may be blanketed into the civil service upon reappointment. For this reason and because of the highly political nature of the bill, I am forced to object.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Will not the gentleman from Michigan withhold his objection to permit me to ask a question?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I withhold my objection, Mr. Speaker, to permit the gentleman to make a statement.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I would like to ask the gentleman from Michigan what the other method is? This simply applies the present civil-service law to postmasters.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I will answer the gentleman in this manner: I have in mind introducing a bill which I believe will take care of this situation and be fair to both sides of the aisle, because, after all, this is a political issue and nothing else.

I would provide, I believe, for the immediate elimination of first-, second-, and third-class postmasters; I would provide that these offices be immediately filled by competitive civil-service examinations; and to give inducement for promotion from the ranks of the postal employees I would provide in this bill that experience should rate, we will say, 60 percent, in order that there may be a career for some of these men who are actually doing the work at the present time without the honor of being called postmaster. We all know that in first-class offices in particular the assistant postmaster or the superintendent of mails does the actual technical work of the office and that the postmaster becomes merely a figure-head.

Now, there is no reason why this assistant postmaster, who quite often is a civil-service employee, or the superintendent of mails, should not have the title, already having the responsibility of doing the work; and I believe, as I have been thinking it over since the last call of the calendar, that this would be the only equitable way in which the situation could be handled. This would be fair to all the existing postmasters and fair to both sides of this aisle.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. MEAD. If it is impossible for us to have this legislation enacted I shall be very glad to join with the distinguished gentleman from Michigan in advocating his plan. I want to compliment him on having a plan that approaches the solution of this question. It has, however, been the custom of the Civil Service Commission, gained from the experience in handling problems of this kind, to cover the employees affected as is done in this bill.

This bill contains their recommendations. A postmaster who is physically unfit, over age, or otherwise disqualified, would not be covered by civil service because they have to take a qualifying examination. I would like to see this bill advanced, because it is the recommendation of the bipartisan Civil Service Commission, and it advances the cause of good administration and improves the personnel of this service.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think the gentleman from New York and myself are in accord on what we want to accomplish, but the gentleman realizes that this bill would give a lifetime job to every first-, second- or third-class postmaster reappointed.

Mr. MEAD. Only after he could pass the qualifying test provided by the Commission.

Mr. WOLCOTT. No. As I understand the bill, if this administration goes over into a second term, then upon the reappointment of the present postmaster he immediately obtains a civil-service status.

In other words, it is possible for all existing postmasters to be blanketed into the civil service upon reappointment.

The regular order was demanded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TABER, Mr. WOLCOTT, and Mr. RANSLEY objected.

RETIREMENT OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3044, to amend the act of May 29, 1930 (46 Stat. 349), for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service and in certain positions in the legislative branch of the Government, to include all other employees in the legislative branch.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of May 29, 1930 (46 Stat. 349), for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service and in certain positions in the legislative branch of the Government, is hereby amended to include all other employees in the legislative branch.

Sec. 2. The provisions of such act of May 29, 1930, shall not be applicable to any employee in the legislative branch who is brought within its scope by section 1 of this act until such employee gives notice in writing to the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House of Representatives, as the case may be, that he or she desires to come under the provisions of such act of May 29, 1930. Such notice must be given, in the case of any such employee in the service on the effective date of this act, within 6 months from such effective date, and in the case of any such employee entering the service after the effective date of this act, within 6 months from the date of such entrance.

Sec. 3. The provisions of section 2 of such act of May 29, 1930, and of section 204 of the Economy Act of June 30, 1932, and any Executive orders pursuant thereto, relating to automatic separation, shall not apply to any employee in the legislative branch to whom the provisions of such act are extended by this act.

Sec. 4. The term "employee in the legislative branch" where used in this act shall also include (a) officers elected by the Senate or House of Representatives who are not members of either body, (b) the legislative counsel of the Senate and the legislative counsel of the House and the employees in their respective offices, (c) the Capitol Police force, and (d) the employees of the Joint Committee on Printing and the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, and

Sec. 5. This act shall take effect on October 1, 1935.

With the following committee amendments:

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection a moment?

Mr. MOTT. Yes; I withhold it.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. May I inquire the purpose of the gentleman's objection?

Mr. MOTT. I understand the purpose of this bill is to allow certain interested parties in Oregon and Washington to go into the courts again for the purpose of redetermining the ownership of Sand Island, at the mouth of the Columbia River, which has already been determined and passed upon by the Supreme Court. The people at the mouth of the Columbia River object at this time to opening this matter again. I have recently received some letters from people living at the mouth of the Columbia, engaged in the fishing industry, and this is the objection they raise to it.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will not the gentleman let the bill be passed over without prejudice?

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. We might as well have it determined now.

Mr. MOTT. I have no objection if you would rather have the bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair may state that there is a similar Senate bill on the table.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker I reserve the right to object and yield to the gentleman from Tennessee, if I may do so without losing control of the floor.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I am simply asking the gentleman to withhold his objection pending an explanation.

I appreciate the vigorous opposition of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS] to any legislation that may impair our immigration policy, but this is an individual case which will in no sense affect our policy. I am just as strongly in favor of restricted immigration as the gentleman from Ohio, as my record as a member of the Immigration Committee will show; but this is a very worthy case, applying to a young lady who, when 16 years of age, came to the United States and was denied admission because of lack of quota and was sent back. She came over with her father and mother, her father at that time having an application for naturalization pending. Later on she came back under false colors, and while over here married the son of a reputable physician in Chicago. Then, on the advice of the immigration authorities in Chicago, she returned to Rumania with a tacit understanding there would be no objection to her coming back in the regular way. She is now denied the right to come back and is separated from her husband. This is an isolated case and was heard on its merits by the committee. I think, as a matter of justice, this bill ought to pass, and we ought to allow this woman to reenter the United States and be reunited with her husband. I think it would be a simple act of mercy to do this.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I further reserve the right to object and would like to make the statement, if I may, that I think this is a very important bill. The principle involved is far more important than the inconvenience that may result to any one individual.

The immigration law is different from any other law with which we have to deal. For instance, most of our laws deal with American citizens. An American citizen has rights under our law. He has recognizable rights, but an alien or a foreigner who has not yet arrived in our country has no such rights under our law. He must be here before he has any standing under our law. Then when we speak of the "rights of these people being invaded" we are taking an untenable position.

With this basic principle in mind I want you to bear with me a moment, because I wish you to know that this is not a personal objection on my part at all. I have great regard for the author of this bill, Mr. CHURCH, but there is a principle involved that we all might stop to consider. There are a great many of you who for years have been opposed to letting down the bars. Here is a big bar that you are going to let down if you allow this bill to go through. You are going to let the bar down and there will be absolutely no way for you to put this bar back up, because they will climb upon it and say, "This is a personal bill and only applies to one individual." Some of you were here in Congress when we threshed out the first individual bill of this kind. We had it up here for days and days, at different times, and here is what happened with respect to that bill. Many of you will recall that the bill involved a case that had been taken up in the courts of the United States. The individual concerned was a very wealthy man from New England, a boy in the American Army. He wanted to marry a girl in Germany. He applied for information and advice from the proper consular officer for the United States in Germany and was told that the girl's criminal record was such he could not bring her into this country at all. What did he do? He said, "I will bring her in anyhow." He then comes back to the United States and gets in touch with his rich relatives scattered all over the United States, and what did he do? He married her anyhow, and then what was his next step? He comes down here and goes into the courts of the United States and brings a mandamus proceeding against one of our highest Cabinet officers, the Secretary of State. In other words, an individual clear across the ocean was trying to get jurisdiction in our courts to mandamus the Secretary of State to permit the entrance of this woman into the United States. What did the courts do? The case went to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Supreme Court of the United States stood upon its dignity and said, "No; this individual has no recognizable rights under our law", and held accordingly. He then commenced a long fight to have a special bill passed permitting the entrance of this girl, with a criminal record, whom he had married in defiance of the Government, and to the everlasting discredit of Congress the bill was passed. Within the last year or two this bill was repealed as a useless part of the immigration laws.

If this bill passes, it will be the beginning of a new method of handling these immigration matters. I do not recall of but one case of this kind within my time here, and that is the case that I have already mentioned. This bill if passed will allow a woman to enter who came in illegally. One who had attempted to come to the United States as the daughter of a man who consented to play this part of practicing a deception on the Government officers.

But, as I have stated, I am not so much interested in this individual case as I am in the new principle that we are adopting. Just as sure as you commence letting persons into the United States of America by special bill you are tearing down the immigration bars and permitting a flood of new immigrants of all classes. Already nearly 30 special bills have been introduced expecting that if this bill is passed they shall enter. And why not?

I wish you to consider this fact. No committee of this House has ever assumed to vote out special bills to people who are not in the country, and who have no rights in our courts or in our country. The Pension Committee votes out special bills to persons who have a claim on the Government. The Committee on Claims votes special bills in cases where the individual has had a right to a claim against the Government and has lost it by reason of the running of the statute of limitation or some other good reason. These are the two committees out of which most of our special bills come. I repeat that the House should pause to appreciate just how important this step is. I should like this bill to be passed over to some later date until the Members have thoroughly familiarized themselves with the importance of the principle involved.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I call for the regular order, Mr. Speaker.
Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I object.

PERSONAL INJURY AND DEATH CASES ARISING IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2891) to provide for the adjustment and settlement of personal injury and death cases arising in certain foreign countries.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That when any act of omission of any officer, employee, or agent of the Government of the United States, including all officers, enlisted men, and employees of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, results in the personal injury or death of any person, not an American national, in any foreign country in which the United States exercises privileges of extraterritoriality, the Secretary of State may consider, adjust, and determine any claim, arising after the passage of this act, for the damage occasioned by such injury or death in an amount not in excess of $1,500, United States currency, in any one case, and such amount as may be found to be due to any claimant shall be certified to Congress as a legal claim for payment out of appropriations that may be made by Congress therefor, together with a brief statement of the character of each claim, the amount claimed, and the amount allowed: Provided, That this authorization shall not apply to cases of persons in the employ of the United States: Provided further, That no claim shall be considered under this act by the Secretary of State unless presented to him within 1 year from the date of the accrual of said claim: And provided further, That acceptance by any claimant of the amount determined under the provisions of this act shall be deemed to be in full settlement of such claim against the Government of the United States.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ONONDAGA CREEK

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8797) to provide preliminary examination of Onondaga Creek, in Onondaga County, State of New York, with a view to the control of its floods.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination to be made of Onondaga Creek, in Onondaga County, State of New York, with a view to the control of its floods, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of an act entitled "An act to provide for the control of floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes", approved March 1, 1917, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENDING THE TIME FOR FILING ADVERSE CLAIMS IN SUITS AGAINST MINERAL ENTRIES, ALASKA

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 8700) to amend an act entitled "An act extending the time in which to file adverse claims and institute adverse suits against mineral entries in the District of Alaska", approved June 7, 1910 (36 Stat. 459; U. S. C., title 48, sec. 386).

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask that this bill go over without prejudice.

Mr. DIMOND. Will the gentleman withhold that? This does not cost anybody a cent. I cannot conceive of any objection to it that anybody can have.

Mr. TABER. It cannot be in the interest of expedition because it extends the time.

Mr. DIMOND. No; it does not. It shortens the time. If the gentleman will look at the statement at the end of the report, he will see that the period is now 8 months, and this is shortened to 60 days. I wanted to cut out the 60 days, but the Department said that cutting it from 8 months to 60 days would be reasonable and fair.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of Congress entitled "An act extending the time in which to file adverse claims and institute adverse suits against mineral entries in the District of Alaska", approved June 7, 1910 (36 Stat. 459; U. S. C., title 48, sec. 386), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That in the District of Alaska adverse claims authorized and provided for in sections 2325 and 2326, United States Revised Statutes, may be filed at any time during the 60 days' period of publication, and the adverse suits authorized and provided for in section 2326, United States Revised Statutes, may be instituted at any time within 60 days after the filing of said claims in the local land office."

With the following committee amendment:

On page 2, line 2, after the word "publication", insert "or within 60 days thereafter."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

STATE OF NEW MEXICO

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 6538) for the relief of the State of New Mexico.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, I would like to have the gentleman explain what this bill does for New Mexico.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, in 1930 there were certain losses caused by floods in Socorro County, N. Mex. The War Department through the National Guard loaned certain equipment and in making returns there was a loss of some $4,600 worth of materials. The War Department investigated the matter and the then Secretary War, Mr. Hurley, recommended that the State of New Mexico pay a certain amount, I think $1,600 or $1,800, and that $2,900 be unasked of them, and that the State be relieved of the payment of that amount by the passage of this legislation. That is what this provides.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There is a similar Senate bill (S. 2206) on the Speaker's desk and, without objection, the Senate bill will be substituted for the House bill.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the State of New Mexico is hereby relieved from accountability for certain property belonging to the United States, of the total value of $2,839.04, which property was loaned to such State for use by the New Mexico National Guard and was unavoidably lost or destroyed, such total value representing the sum of the following items: $381.22 for property shortages listed in report of survey dated April 24, 1930; $334.53 and $62.95 for property shortages listed in two reports of survey dated April 25, 1930; $904.48 and $880.12 for property shortages listed in two reports of survey dated June 11, 1930; $11.35 for property shortages listed in report of survey dated July 11, 1930; $264.39 for property shortages listed in report of survey dated September 3, 1930.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

A House bill (H. R. 6538) was laid on the table.

ONE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF BIRTH OF MARK TWAIN

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 338, establishing a commission to be known as the United States Commission for the Celebration of the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of Mark Twain (Samuel L. Clemens).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I have been requested by the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER], to ask unanimous consent that this bill be laid on the table and disposed of in that way officially. Will the gentleman withdraw his objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Inasmuch as the bill provides for a centennial which passed last year, I have no objection to laying the bill on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the bill will be laid on the table.

There was no objection.

INDIAN IRRIGATION PROJECT

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2656) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to grant concessions on reservoir sites and other lands in connection with Indian irrigation projects, and to lease the lands in such reserve for agricultural, grazing, or other purposes.

SAN CARLOS APACHE INDIANS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2523) authorizing payment to the San Carlos Apache Indians for the lands ceded by them in the agreement of February 25, 1896, ratified by the act of June 10, 1896.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to place in the RECORD at this point a letter from the Comptroller General about this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The letter referred to is as follows:

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, January 16, 1936.

HON. JOHN J. COCHRAN,
Chairman, Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: There is submitted herein individual report, as requested, on S. 2523, involving the San Carlos Apache Indians. Reference is made, also, to report to you on this bill under date of August 1, 1935, A-63577, a copy of which is enclosed herewith.

In addition to the recommendations made in that report on S. 2523, it is suggested, if this bill receive favorable consideration for enactment, that it be amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"except that before the deposit of the amount so appropriated to the credit of the said San Carlos Apache Indians, the Comptroller General of the United States is authorized and directed to ascertain and deduct therefrom the total gratuities theretofore paid to such Indians of the character provided for offset by section 2 of the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1935, 49 Stat. 596."

It would take approximately 10 months for this office to ascertain accurately the amount of such gratuities to be offset.

Sincerely yours,

J. R. MCCALL,
Comptroller General of the United States.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, August 1, 1935.

HON. JOHN J. COCHRAN,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. COCHRAN: Further reference is made to your letter of July 5, 1935, acknowledged July 6, enclosing a copy of the bill S. 2523, Seventy-fourth Congress, entitled "A bill authorizing payment to the San Carlos Apache Indians for the lands ceded by them in the agreement of February 25, 1896, ratified by the act of June 10, 1896", together with a copy of Senate Report No. 1016 thereon, and requesting that you be advised "what the records show in regard to this matter", and "did the Government carry out its agreement, or does it owe the Indians for this land?" The bill provides as follows:

"That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, as payment in full to the San Carlos Apache Indians, at the rate of $1.25 per acre for 232,320 acres ceded by them under the agreement of February 25, 1896, ratified by the act of June 10, 1896 (29 Stat. L. 358), less $12,433.63 received by the Indians as royalty under mining permits, the sum of $277,966.37 to be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the San Carlos Apache Indians, and to be available for expenditure for the benefit of such Indians: Provided, That none of the funds herein authorized to be appropriated shall be subject to the payment of any claims, judgments, or demands against the San Carlos Apache Indians accruing prior to the approval of this act."

The said agreement of February 25, 1896, referred to in the bill, provides in pertinent part as follows:

"This agreement, made on the 25th day of February 1896, pursuant to an item in the act of Congress making appropriations for current and contingent expenses and fulfilling treaty stipulations with Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, as follows: 'The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to negotiate with the Indians on the San Carlos Reservation, Ariz., through an inspector, for the cession or relinquishment to the United States of the lands embracing the coal fields, and that any agreement made shall be submitted to Congress for its action', by Province McCormick, United States Indian Inspector, on the part of the United States, and the Apache, Mohave, and Yuma Indians, residing on the San Carlos Indian Reservation, in the Territory of Arizona, by their chiefs, headmen, and members of said tribes, embracing a majority of all the male adult Indians occupying said reservation: Witnesseth—

"ARTICLE I

"That the said Indians do hereby cede, grant, and relinquish to the United States all right, title, and claim which they may have in and to all the land embraced within the following described tract, now a part of the said San Carlos or White Mountain Indian Reservation, to wit:

"All the land lying south of a line commencing at a point on the present eastern boundary of the said reservation, 1 mile south of Goodwin Spring; thence in a general direction west to the highest point on Mount Turnbull; thence in a westerly direction to a point on a line between the agency building proper and Stanley, or the Saddle Butte, 7 miles from said building in a southerly direction; thence in a westerly direction at longest possible tangents to the mouth of Hawk Canyon, not crossing said canyon; thence down the Gila River, following the south bank to a point where said Gila River crosses the present western boundary of the reservation.

"ARTICLE II

"That in consideration of the lands ceded, relinquished, and conveyed, as aforesaid, the United States stipulates and agrees to place in the Treasury of the United States to the credit and for the sole benefit of the said Apache, Mohave, and Yuma Indians, and to account therefor annually to them through their agent, the net proceeds accruing from the disposal of such coal and mineral lands, lying within the ceded territory, under the laws applicable thereto; and that said money shall be paid to them in cash from time to time as the same shall become available, pro rata, share and share alike to each man, woman, and child of the tribes now living upon and entitled to the privileges of the said reservation: Provided, That none of the money credited to said Indians under this agreement shall be subject to the payment of any claims, judgments, or demands against said Indians for damages or depredations, claimed to have been committed prior to the signing of this agreement.

"ARTICLE III

"That for the purpose of segregating the ceded land from the diminished reservation the new boundary line described in article 1 of the agreement shall be properly surveyed and permanently marked in a plain and substantial manner by prominent and durable monuments; and that the cost of said survey shall be chargeable to and be paid out of the proceeds of said ceded lands."

The letter dated May 22, 1935, from the Acting Secretary of the Interior to the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, United States Senate, incorporated in Senate Report No. 1016, Seventy-fourth Congress, copy of which report was enclosed in your letter and is herewith returned, states that the Indians received a royalty totaling $12,433.63 on actual production under mining permits. Interior Civil Claim No. 36223-1914, a record of this office, shows that the said sum of $12,433.63 was not the proceeds of royalty payments but of the sale by the United States Land Office, Phoenix, Ariz., on July 3, 1906, of four tracts of land containing 160 acres each within the involved area at $20 per acre. From the total proceeds of the sale, $12,800, there was deducted pursuant to article III of the said agreement of February 25, 1896, the sum of $366.37 for expenses of surveying, leaving net proceeds of $12,433.63 with which the said Indians were credited. The bill should state correctly the source of the said sum of $12,433.63.

The records show that the United States expended a further sum of $480.01 for surveying, which sum, in pursuance of article III of the said agreement, was subsequently during the year 1912 reimbursed to the United States from the fund "Indian moneys, proceeds of labor (San Carlos)", as evidenced by Second Auditor's Settlement No. 30323-1912. It thus appears that all reimbursable sums expended by the United States in the premises have been reimbursed to it.

What is hereinabove stated is all that the records of this office disclose. It has no information and therefore cannot advise you whether the Government did or did not carry out its agreement, or whether it owes the Indians for this land.

Sincerely yours,

J. R. McCALL,

Comptroller General of the United States.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 5, strike out "set forth in sections 1, 2, and 3."

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask if this bill should not have been passed out by the Naval Affairs Committee instead of coming in here on the Consent Calendar?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill is reported by the Naval Affairs Committee.

Mr. RICH. Was it reported unanimously by the Naval Affairs Committee?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has no information as to the unanimity or otherwise of the report.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. MOTT]?

COLLECTION AND EDITING OF OFFICIAL PAPERS OF TERRITORIES OF THE UNITED STATES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 8951, to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the collection and editing of official papers of the Territories of the United States now in The National Archives", approved March 3, 1925, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COCHRAN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I visited the Archives Building the other day, and if the gentleman can find a piece of paper down there to edit, I would like to have him go there and look for it, and notify me where I can see it. There is no paper, no files in The National Archives Building other than the old Food Administration files. They have 117 employees. They have 18 going around to the various Government agencies looking for historical documents. Aside from that, the rest of them are in the Archives Building, working, so the Archivist says, but I have been unable to learn what they are doing. I repeat, there is nothing in the Archives Building to edit up to this hour. How can they edit something that is not there?

Mr. LAMBETH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield.

Mr. LAMBETH. I should like to say to the amiable gentleman from Missouri, who seems to have developed an obsession with reference to anything dealing with archives, that this has no reference to the new National Archives establishment whatsoever.

This bill relates to the distribution of what are known as the official papers relating to the early history of the Territories of the United States, which are being compiled and printed under the direction of the State Department, and it will save money by reducing the number of copies from 1,950 to 1,227. This bill amends existing law, which was enacted long before The National Archives, as such, was ever in existence, and enacts into permanent law a provision which has been carried in the State Department appropriation bill for the last 2 years. Now, if the gentleman wishes to ask me a question relative to the merits of this bill, I shall be very happy to try to answer it.

Mr. COCHRAN. Your bill says "Now in The National Archives." That sounds like National Archives Building to me. I also see on page 3 the following language:

That not more than the sum of $125,000, and under this authorization not more than $50,000 shall be appropriated for any one year.

I should like to have the distinguished gentleman advise me in what way it is not going to cost the Government any money when the appropriation is here authorized.

Mr. LAMBETH. Mr. Speaker, replying again to my friend from Missouri, who is one of the watchdogs of the Treasury here, and I am very happy we have some watchdogs of the Treasury still in the House, if he will look at the report, a copy of which I now hand to him, he will find that this bill does not authorize any appropriation which is not already in existence. In other words we are amending the law so as to curtail the number of copies of these papers which will be printed and distributed. It will save money. Had the gentleman taken time to read the report of the Committee on Printing I am sure he would be heartily in favor of this bill, because it will save money.

Mr. COCHRAN. I think the gentleman will agree with me that the only way to save money is to take an appropriation away from an activity. If the purpose is to save money, why not amend the bill to make it provide that there must be a reduction of 50 percent of the amount now being spent? There is no other way to save money. They will find some way to spend it.

Mr. LAMBETH. I am trying not to argue with the gentleman but to answer his question. I wish he had read the report of the committee and knew what this was about. This appropriation was made some years ago in an act approved in 1925, before I became a Member of this body.

Mr. COCHRAN. But the effect is only to transfer the appropriation over to the Archives, is it not?

Mr. LAMBETH. No, indeed; it has nothing to do with the National Archives establishment. This is done under the auspices of the State Department. Some of these Territorial papers have already been prepared and distributed. The work is not yet complete, but it has proceeded to such a point that it would be extravagance and waste now to strike out the appropriation. The Committee on Appropriations provides a specific sum for this purpose in the State Department appropriation bill every year.

Mr. COCHRAN. If the gentleman is not referring to The National Archives establishment or to the National Archivist I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. LAMBETH. Not at all, not in any sense. This legislation was suggested by the State Department.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is twofold:

First. To curtail the number of copies of the various volumes of the Territorial papers which are being edited and compiled and distributed under the direction of the State Department. This will mean an appreciable saving.

Second. To provide more specifically as to the manner of distribution of these volumes which are furnished to State historical associations designated by the Governors of the various States and Territories. Under the existing law the Governor of each State might annually designate different historical associations to receive them so that when the entire work of approximately 25 volumes has been finally printed no one historical association or library would have received a complete set. This bill specifically provides that new designations may be made by the Governors only when previously designated associations, commissions, museums, or libraries shall have ceased to exist. The adoption of this legislation makes absolutely certain the delivery of complete sets to agencies once they have been designated.

By unanimous consent, a similar Senate bill (S. 3447), was substituted for the House bill.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the collection and editing of official papers of the Territories of the United States now in the National Archives", approved March 3, 1925, as amended by the act approved February 28, 1929 (U. S. C., Supp. 7, title V, sec. 168a), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"168a. The Public Printer shall print, bind, and deliver to the Superintendent of Documents, for distribution as may be directed by the Secretary of State, 1,227 copies of each volume of the Official Papers Relating to the Territories of the United States, of which not to exceed 3 copies shall be furnished to the Vice President and each Senator and 1 copy to each Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner; 4 copies to the Library of the Department of the Interior; and 1 copy of each volume to those historical associations, commissions, museums, or libraries and other nondepository libraries, which shall not exceed eight in number within each State, Territory, or insular possession, and which have been or hereafter may be designated by the Governor thereof to the Secretary of State of the United States, and the residue of the said 1,227 copies shall be for the Department of State for such use as the Secretary of State may deem appropriate.

"168b. In addition to the foregoing there shall be furnished to the Superintendent of Documents a sufficient number of copies of each volume for distribution to such depository libraries as may make written application therefor; and "To the Library of Congress for international exchange and for official use in Washington, D. C., not to exceed 150 copies.

"The 'usual number' shall not be printed.

"168c. The historical associations, commissions, museums, or libraries and other nondepository libraries within each State, Territory, or insular possession, which have been or hereafter may be designated by the Governor thereof to receive these publications shall, during their existence, receive the succeeding volumes, the distribution of which shall be made by the Superintendent of Documents in accordance with the lists of designations transmitted to him by the Secretary of State, and a new designation may be made by the Governor only when a designated association, commission, museum, or library shall cease to exist or other designation may be authorized by law.

"168d. For defraying the expenses to be incurred in carrying out the provisions of this act, including the employment, either in or outside of the District of Columbia, of not to exceed five historical experts, especially informed on the various phases of the territorial history of the United States, without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and the civil-service rules, and for all other purposes, including salaries for personnel, printing and binding, contingent expenses and traveling expenses, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, not more than the sum of $125,000, and under this authorization not more than $50,000 shall be appropriated for any 1 year."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider and a similar House bill (H. R. 8951) were laid on the table.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. On the calendar there appear as Nos. 521, 523, 524, and 525 bills which have been objected to previously and stricken from the Consent Calendar. My inquiry is whether under the rules these bills are properly on the Consent Calendar.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. O'CONNOR). The rule is plain. It reads as follows:

Should objection be made to the consideration of any bill so called it shall be carried over on the calendar without prejudice to the next day when the Consent Calendar is again called, and if objected to by three or more Members it shall immediately be stricken from the calendar and shall not thereafter during the same session of that Congress be placed again thereon.

If these bills were objected to finally during the last session they are properly on this calendar this session.

WAR MINERALS RELIEF ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1567, to amend section 5 of the act of March 2, 1919, generally known as the War Minerals Relief Act.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

PAN AMERICAN EXPOSITION, TAMPA, FLA.

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 356, to permit articles imported from foreign countries for the purpose of exhibition at the Pan American Exposition to be held in Tampa, Fla., to be admitted without payment of tariff, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That all articles which shall be imported from foreign countries for the purpose of exhibition at the Pan American Exposition to be held in Tampa, Fla., in 1939, by the Florida Fair & Gasparilla Association, Inc., or for use in construction, installing, or maintaining foreign buildings or exhibits at the said exposition, upon which articles there shall be a tariff or customs duty, shall be admitted without payment of such tariff, customs duty, fees, or charges under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but it shall be lawful at any time during or within 3 months after the close of said exposition to sell within the area of the exposition and celebrations any articles provided for herein, subject to such regulations for the security of the revenue and for the collection of import duties as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe: Provided, That all such articles when withdrawn for consumption or use in the United States, shall be subject to the duties, if any, imposed upon such articles by the revenue laws in force at the date of their withdrawal; and on such articles, which shall have suffered diminution or deterioration from incidental handling or exposure, the duties, if payable, shall be assessed according to the appraised value at the time of withdrawal from entry hereunder for consumption or entry under the general tariff law: Provided further, That imported articles provided for herein shall not be subject to any marking requirements of the general tariff laws, except when such articles are withdrawn for consumption or use in the United States, in which case they shall not be released from customs custody until properly marked, but no additional duty shall be assessed because such articles were not sufficiently marked when imported into the United States: Provided further, That at any time during or within 3 months after the close of the exposition, any article entered hereunder may be abandoned to the Government or destroyed under customs supervision, whereupon any duties on such article shall be remitted: Provided further, That articles, which have been admitted without payment of duty for exhibition under any tariff law and which have remained in continuous customs custody or under a customs exhibition bond, and imported articles in bonded warehouses under the general tariff law may be accorded the privilege of transfer to and entry for exhibition at the said exposition under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe: And provided further, That the Florida Fair & Gasparilla Association, Inc., shall be deemed, for customs purposes only, to be the sole consignee of all merchandise imported under the provisions of this act, and that the actual and necessary customs charges for labor, services, and other expenses in connection with the entry, examination, appraisal, release, or custody, together with the necessary charges for salaries of customs officers and employees in connection with the supervision, custody of, and accounting for, articles imported under the provisions of this act, shall be reimbursed by Florida Fair & Gasparilla Association, Inc., to the Government of the United States under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and that receipts from such reimbursements shall be deposited as refunds to the appropriation from which paid, in the manner provided for in section 524, Tariff Act of 1930.

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 365, providing for participation by the United States in the Pan American Exposition to be held in Tampa, Fla., in the year 1939 in commemoration of the four hundredth anniversary of the landing of Hernando De Soto in Tampa Bay, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this joint resolution authorizes an appropriation of $500,000. I have no particular objection to the holding of this fair in Florida. It might be justified.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this joint resolution be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, in view of the fact that the Secretary of Commerce makes an unfavorable report, and inasmuch as the amount anticipated to be expended under this bill is not in accordance with the financial program of the President, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

GRANT TO CALIFORNIA OF RETROCESSION OF JURISDICTION OVER CERTAIN RIGHTS-OF-WAY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 7653, to grant to the State of California a retrocession of jurisdiction over certain rights-of-way granted to the State of California over certain roads about to be constructed in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation and Fort Baker Military Reservation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There is a similar Senate bill in reference to this matter.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate bill (S. 2175) be substituted for the House bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby granted to the State of California a retrocession of jurisdiction over the rights-of-way covered by a certain grant from the Secretary of War to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, of California, dated February 13, 1931, to extend, maintain, and operate State roads across the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation and the Fort Baker Military Reservation, as heretofore or hereafter amended by the Secretary of War, subject to all of the terms and conditions contained in said permit as so granted and any amendments thereof as aforesaid. The land and premises over which such retrocession of jurisdiction is hereby granted shall be the whole of the rights-of-way so granted by said permit and any amendments thereof, throughout their entire length and width, and for the entire distance granted therein, together with the land crossed by any toll bridge that may be erected by such Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District to connect the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation with the Fort Baker Military Reservation, and embracing the said toll bridge with its approach roads over the rights-of-way so granted by said permit and any amendments thereof.

SEC. 2. Should the United States assume exclusive control and management of said bridge and roads, as provided in said permit and any amendments thereof, the jurisdiction herein retroceded shall be suspended and revert in the United States for the duration of such control and management. Whenever the State of California shall cease to occupy said rights-of-way and land for the purpose authorized in said permit and any amendments thereof, then the same, including all jurisdiction thereover, shall revert to the United States.

SEC. 3. The retrocession of jurisdiction herein granted shall not take effect until the same is accepted by the Legislature of the State of California.

ERECTION OF MARKER AT COLUMBUS, GA.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9200, authorizing the erection of a marker suitably marking the site of the engagement fought at Columbus, Ga., April 16, 1865.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. CASTELLOW. Will the gentleman withhold his objection a moment?

Mr. RICH. I withhold my objection. The request was made this morning that these bills were supposed to be presented to the Advisory Committee of the Historic Parks Commission, which committee is supposed to pass on these bills.

Mr. CASTELLOW. They have approved this bill.

Mr. RICH. But the commission has not yet been formed.

Mr. CASTELLOW. This involves only $1,000. It is not for a park or for a monument. It is simply providing for a suitable marker covering a historical proposition.

Mr. RICH. I do not want to hold this bill up for the gentleman from Georgia any more than for anybody else. We passed a bill last year forming this Advisory Committee of the Historical Parks Commission, which committee is ready to pass on these bills and monuments, and I think they should be permitted to pass on these things. If they offer a favorable report, then I shall not object to this going through.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I am getting very tired of statues, monuments, and memorials, and regardless of this Commission or its reports in the future, I am going to object to further memorials or things of that kind. However, this does not come under that category.

Mr. CASTELLOW. We have no parks in our section of the country, and we felt like we were entitled to $10,000 for this purpose. However, that amount was reduced to $1,000, which we think is eminently fair.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, if this does not refer to parks or monuments in the sense that the committee to which I referred a while ago should pass on it, then I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what national significance has this monument?

Mr. CASTELLOW. This was, in reality, the last battle of the Civil War. Efforts to secure passage of this bill have been made at intervals for a long time. I may say that the Historical Society of Columbus, Ga., has prepared a most interesting book recording the details of the battle. This society has meticulously considered the first reports made to the War Department regarding the battle and contends that these reports indicate conclusively the commanding officers considered this the last engagement of the Civil War which could be designated as a battle. The Historical Division of the National Park Service, however, did not agree in this conclusion, and for that reason we have been forced to abandon the hope of a more generous appropriation and are now asking for the modest sum of only $1,000.

Mr. DIRKSEN. If this bill is passed, what about bills commemorating the Battle of Big Dry Wash and other battles?

Mr. KNUTSON. Those matters should be fought out on their individual merit when they come up for consideration.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I shall not object to this bill, but I will object to any further bills of this character.

The regular order was demanded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to erect, or cause to be erected, in Columbus, Ga., a suitable marker, or markers, marking the site of the engagement of Columbus fought in that city on April 16, 1865.

SEC. 2. There is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $1,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out provisions of this act.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

There was no objection.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 1401, to authorize the erection of a tablet in the Washington Monument in honor of those who served in the armed forces of the United States during the World War.

CITY OF SKAGWAY, ALASKA

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 9130, to authorize the incorporated city of Skagway, Alaska, to undertake certain municipal works, and for such purpose to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $12,000, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the incorporated city of Skagway, in the Territory of Alaska, is hereby authorized and empowered to undertake all or any part of the hereinafter described municipal public works, to wit: Construction and reconstruction of sidewalks, reconstruction and reconditioning of city hall, and regrading, construction, and reconstruction of streets and crossings, and for such purposes to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $12,000.

SEC. 2. Before said bonds shall be issued a special election shall be ordered by the common council of the said city of Skagway, Alaska, at which election the question of whether such bonds shall be issued in the amount above specified for the purpose hereinbefore set forth shall be submitted to the qualified electors of said city of Skagway, Alaska, whose names appear on the last assessment roll of said city for purposes of municipal taxation. The form of the ballot shall be such that the electors may vote for or against the issuance of bonds for the purposes herein specified up to the amount herein authorized. Not less than 20 days' notice of such election shall be given to the public by posting notices of same in three conspicuous places within the corporate limits of the city of Skagway, Alaska, one of which shall be at the front door of the United States post office at Skagway, Alaska. The election notice shall specifically state the amount of bonds proposed to be issued for the purposes herein specified. The registration for such election, the manner of conducting the same, and the canvass of the returns of said election shall be, as early as practicable, in accordance with the requirements of law in general or special elections in said municipality; and such bonds shall be issued for the purposes herein authorized only upon condition that not less than a majority of the votes cast at such election in said municipality shall be in favor of the issuance of said bonds for such purpose.

SEC. 3. The bonds herein authorized shall be coupon in form and shall mature in not to exceed 30 years from the date thereof. Such bonds may bear such date or dates, may be in such denomination or denominations, may mature in such amounts and at such time or times, not exceeding 30 years from the date thereof, may be payable in lawful money of the United States at such place or places, may be sold at either public or private sale, may be nonredeemable or redeemable (either with or without premium), and may carry such registration privileges as to either principal and interest, or principal only, as shall be prescribed by the common council of said city of Skagway. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?
There was no objection.

TO PROVIDE FOR THE MAINTENANCE OF UNITED STATES SOLDIERS' HOMES

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 8, strike out the word "right-of-way" and insert in lieu thereof the word "rights-of-way."

was such as would have entitled him to an honorable discharge: Provided, That no back pay or allowance shall accrue by reason of the passage of this act: Provided further, That in all such cases the War Department shall, upon request, grant to such men, or their widows, a discharge certificate showing that the soldier is held and considered to have been honorably discharged under the provisions of this act.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DETAILING ARMY OFFICERS IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4452) to regulate the detailing of army officers for duty in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I object to that. I object to the consideration of the bill.

LOANS TO FARMERS FOR CROP PRODUCTION

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 10213) to provide for loans to farmers for crop production and harvesting during the year 1936, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, that seems to be a rather important measure. Forty million dollars is involved. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his request for the moment?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Yes.

Mr. DOXEY. This is an important bill. The Senate already has passed a bill for this purpose. These crops are being put in now. Time is an essence in this matter.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. How much is involved in the bill?

Mr. DOXEY. Forty million dollars. It is a bill to loan money to the farmers for crop production and the crops are being put in now.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. How about reducing the rate of interest from 5½ percent to 3 percent?

Mr. DOXEY. This is the Farm Credit Administration's rate of interest. This bill is reported unanimously by the Committee on Agriculture of the House. It is an emergency. It is urgent. The Senate already has passed a bill. If we can get it through today we will be just that much ahead. If we do not, then we will have to ask for a rule to bring it in here.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman appreciates that we have not had time to make a study of the bill.

Mr. DOXEY. I realize that.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. A bill for $40,000,000 on the Consent Calendar is very unusual. The gentleman says that this bill is reported unanimously from the Committee on Agriculture?

Mr. DOXEY. Yes. The ranking minority Member, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE], realized the urgency and necessity for this. That is the reason that it is on the Consent Calendar. It is true that it is for $40,000,000, but it is done every year. We are late now. The percentage of collections for the past year has been exceedingly gratifying.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman stress the fact that we are late now?

Mr. DOXEY. Yes. This bill affects the entire United States.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I do not want to put any hardship on the farmers, of course. I have always been in favor of assisting them.

Mr. DOXEY. It is a short-period loan. It is just something to give them an opportunity to get their crops in and tide them over a difficult period. It takes care of that type of farmer who cannot get a loan elsewhere but deserves it, needs it, and needs it now.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman's eloquence has almost persuaded me, but this is the first time, I think, we have ever passed such a bill on the Consent Calendar. However, if it has met with the unanimous approval of the great Agricultural Committee of the House, I shall not interpose my individual objection. For that reason I withdraw my request that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOXEY. Yes.

Mr. RICH. If the Agricultural Committee has consented that this bill go through, why bring it in today? Why not give the House an opportunity to discuss the merits or demerits of the bill? I would like to have some members on this side of the Committee on Agriculture get up and say that they are enthusiastically in favor of the passage of this bill. I want to know where you are going to get the $40,000,000.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. This matter has been discussed. This is just another $40,000,000 for seed loans for a short period of time. It is a matter of emergency.

Mr. RICH. If the money was expended a year ago and the money has been returned to the Treasury, why do you have to ask for this $40,000,000 now?

Mr. DOXEY. A similar bill was passed last year and we have collected nearly 90 percent of the money loaned out last year. We cannot reloan that money without the enactment of this legislation.

Mr. RICH. And the gentleman figures that we will get 97 percent back?

Mr. DOXEY. In some sections of the country we have gotten 100 percent back.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOXEY. A Senate bill was passed and I think it is now on the Speaker's desk. I do not know whether it is identical with this bill or not, but in the interest of good procedure, I think we had better substitute the Senate bill for the House bill. It might be for a different amount. I am not sure about that.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that we take up the Senate bill and strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the House bill.

The SPEAKER. The trouble is we do not have the Senate bill at this time. It has not been messaged over to the House. The Chair will state to the House that there are one or two suspensions which will be taken up, and, if it is agreeable to the House, this matter could be passed over temporarily until we consider the two suspensions.

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, we will not ask for a substitution of the Senate bill. We can work it out in conference. I think that will be satisfactory.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICH. When the Members of the House do not know whether a Senate bill is identical, then we ought to take time enough to try to get our ideas together with the Senate and find out whether we should substitute one for the other.

The SPEAKER. That is not a parliamentary inquiry. The Chair was suggesting to the House that, if the House is willing, we could take up the suspensions and temporarily suspend further action upon the pending bill. Perhaps, by the time we have concluded consideration of the bills under suspension, the Senate bill will be here, and it will save some complications.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Why not pass this now and then suspend the action afterward when the Senate bill comes over?

The SPEAKER. Why not postpone consideration of this bill until later on in the afternoon? There cannot be any objection to that, with the understanding that it will be taken up.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move that further consideration of the bill be postponed until after consideration of the bills under suspension.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the bill will be laid aside temporarily.

There was no objection.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I withdraw my unanimous-consent request, Mr. Speaker.

EMERGENCY RELIEF IN PUERTO RICO

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 3140) to provide that funds allocated to Puerto Rico under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 may be expended for permanent rehabilitation, and for other purposes.

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. Speaker, a point of order. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Ninety-eight Members are present, not a quorum.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and eighteen Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY] moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill, S. 3140, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all sums which the President has segregated or allotted or shall segregate or allot for projects in Puerto Rico out of the money appropriated by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 shall constitute a special fund to provide relief and work relief and to increase employment in Puerto Rico. The fund thus established shall continue available for expenditure until June 30, 1940. All income derived from operations financed out of this fund and the proceeds of the disposition of property acquired therewith shall constitute a revolving fund, which shall remain available for expenditure for the purposes and in manner authorized herein and in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 until Congress shall provide otherwise, notwithstanding any limitation of time contained in the said Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935. Any agency or agencies lawfully designated or established to administer funds allotted hereunder or the revolving fund herein authorized may be continued so long as the said funds or any of them remain available for expenditure.

Projects for rural rehabilitation in Puerto Rico may include the acquisition, development, maintenance, and operation of agricultural enterprises. A reasonable charge may be made for materials and services produced or made available by any project: Provided, That such materials and services may also be supplied as compensation, in whole or in part, for services rendered by persons employed upon any project.

Sec. 2. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 15 (f) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended by section 8 of the act of May 9, 1934, or any action taken thereunder, all or any part of the unobligated balance of taxes heretofore or hereafter collected from the processing of sugar beets or sugarcane in Puerto Rico and/or upon the processing in continental United States of sugar produced in or coming from Puerto Rico are hereby authorized, in the discretion of the President, to be transferred to the revolving fund authorized by this act. Not exceeding $10,000,000 of this fund may, in the discretion of the President, be set aside in the Treasury for use as an insurance fund to insure individual agriculturists in Puerto Rico, but to the extent only of such insurance fund and its accretions, against damage by hurricane to their farm dwellings and farm buildings, growing crops, plants, and trees, including trees used as shade for growing crops, warehouses and produce in barns and warehouses: Provided, That said funds may be so employed only during such periods as the Secretary of the Interior shall find and determine that commercial insurance is not available, and at premiums sufficiently high to keep the principal of the original insurance fund intact, and policies of insurance shall be issued hereunder only pursuant to such terms and premium rates as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe by regulations duly promulgated. Until otherwise provided by law all moneys collected as premiums on such insurance or otherwise in connection with the administration of such funds or the operation of such insurance activity shall constitute accretions to the fund and shall be held, together with the original insurance fund and all additions thereto, as a revolving fund for the purposes of such insurance.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Mexico?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Mexico has 20 minutes and the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] has 20 minutes.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, S. 3140 provides that money already allocated to Puerto Rico be expended over a longer period of time than that set up in the act providing these funds. There are no appropriations made and no additional expense incurred by reason of this proposed bill. Not only is there no appropriation set up and no additional moneys requested, but we estimate that twenty-five or thirty million dollars will be saved if this bill becomes law.

The situation which exists in Puerto Rico is quite different from that which exists in the States. There is an agricultural situation there, with no other industry. To rehabilitate the agricultural situation in Puerto Rico, as a result of the various hurricanes and storms they have had there, requires a long period of time. The rehabilitation provides that coffee bushes and shade trees to take care of those bushes, and methods of that kind can be pursued. It is a known fact that it requires 5 years from the time a coffee bush is planted until it produces. If we take the money that has been allocated to Puerto Rico and expend it in the time we now give, it will be wasted. If we take a longer period of time it will be saved. If we spend it hurriedly they will come back here in a year or two asking this Congress to appropriate additional moneys to save them from starvation, and we will again have to appropriate money.

What we are trying to do is to obviate the necessity for further appropriations. This bill has the endorsement of every member of the Committee on Insular Affairs, both Republicans and Democrats.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. KVALE. The gentleman says it has the unanimous favorable report of the committee?

Mr. DEMPSEY. The report was favorable, and it was unanimous by the entire Insular Affairs Committee.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. As I understand the bill there is absolutely no provision of law with reference to the administration of the fund. The essence of it is merely to extend the time for the application of the fund to the condition now existing in Puerto Rico.

Mr. DEMPSEY. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. And my understanding is that the purpose of this legislation is not only to rehabilitate the people who live in the island in a permanent way, but also to prevent economic and social collapse. Is this correct?

Mr. DEMPSEY. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. RICH. I should like to congratulate the Democratic Party on trying to be conservative and on taking their time in spending the money, for they have been so lavish in spending money in the past that if some halt is not called the country will be wrecked. I want to congratulate the gentleman in taking the right step.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. MAVERICK. Will the gentleman explain the insurance features of this bill?

Mr. KNUTSON. I, too, would like to have them explained.

Mr. DEMPSEY. I am reliably informed that at the present time there is somewhere between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000 processing taxes impounded in Puerto Rico. It is proposed to use this money as a revolving fund to care for hurricane sufferers in Puerto Rico, because it is impossible to get insurance in this island due to the experience of insurance companies which in 1 year suffered a loss of 2,000 percent of all the premiums paid in.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Will the gentleman kindly advise us whether or not any part of these funds is to be used for the development of the tile or pottery industries?

Mr. DEMPSEY. No; not at all.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I understood the gentleman to say that this bill does not authorize the appropriation of any money whatsoever in addition to the money that has already been authorized, but that it only permits an economic expenditure of what has already been authorized.

Mr. DEMPSEY. The gentleman is correct.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, there are three features in this bill: First, there is a situation where the Congress of the United States a year ago appropriated $4,880,000,000 to the President of the United States to use for relief purposes, giving him a lot of discretion as to what he might do. Instead of allotting what might be needed for Puerto Rico within the period for which that money was appropriated and made available under the law for relief purposes, about five times the amount necessary has been allotted.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. The gentleman's own story proves my contention, and he will see it if he will permit me to proceed. I shall not yield until I conclude the main part of my statement.

About five times what was needed was allotted. I want everyone to understand the proposal that is before us, because this is not the first time this bill has been up for consideration. It was called up under suspension last August and it was beaten because the House understood what it was about. Upward of $30,000,000 has been allotted for this purpose. The gentleman from New Mexico tells us he wants the bill passed in order that the money may be saved and not wasted, so that it may be spent over a period of 5 years upon projects the result of which we know nothing whatever about. It is customary in the operations of the Congress to make appropriations available for only a short period of time so we may see how things work, for we do not want to spend money on things that do not work well. This is an untried experiment, setting people up in the agricultural business in Puerto Rico. The administration has the authority to go on this year and until the 30th of June 1937 with this money. Why should they not use what they figure is reasonably necessary to establish whether or not it is going to be a reasonable expenditure, whether it is going to be a successful experiment, and then, if there is need for going further, to come back to the Congress and ask the Congress for more money?

Here is another important element to be considered: This bill should provide for covering into the Treasury the part of this appropriation, upward of $20,000,000, which is not necessary for taking care of the situation. It has been allotted to this island and may be used during the period for which the money is available. This $20,000,000 should be covered into the Treasury by this bill.

This bill has still another angle; that of setting up the Government in the insurance business.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. What is bad about that?

Mr. TABER. Any scheme which puts the Government into business is bad. [Applause.]

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. In addition to that it puts the Government into the insurance business away from home.

Mr. TABER. Away from home, and with a $10,000,000 capital.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. DEMPSEY. This processing tax belongs to the people of Puerto Rico. They just retain that there and rehabilitate the revolving fund. It does not put the Government in the insurance business.

Mr. TABER. It does put the Government in the insurance business.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Is it not also a fact there are 350,000 people there on relief?

Mr. TABER. I do not know; but, according to the gentleman's own statement, this money could well be expended over 5 years. That means five times as much has been allotted as is necessary. From the gentleman's own statement it stands to reason that the trouble with the situation is they have allocated a lot of money for ruthless experimentation beyond the authorized period of this act, and they ought to cover the fund into the Treasury that is not needed. If the experiments happen to be successful over a period of 2 years, within which they can operate, they could then come back here and make a case, but they have not made a case. They have the authority to spend the money.

Mr. Speaker, we should stop the ruthless expenditure of money, and should cover into the Treasury the unnecessary allotment. There is not any sense in passing such a bill as this.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Does the gentleman think the Government is in the insurance business when it has lent hundreds of millions of dollars to insurance companies through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation?

Mr. TABER. Not where the Government has received collateral for the loans which is more than the face of the loan. I do not think that has anything to do with this case.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] understand that the purpose of section 1 is to terminate the expenditures for the dole in Puerto Rico?

Mr. TABER. No. The gentleman from New Mexico proved that was not so, because he said it was enough to carry on this experimentation over 5 years. If his statement was so, there would be no excuse for this bill. The two things do not go together.

There is no use trying to go on with that kind of argument and expect intelligent people to believe it. The Governor of Puerto Rico at his own solicitation came to see me on Friday week before last. He brought with him a man from the Interior Department. I asked them certain questions which they were unable to answer, and in order that they might have an opportunity, I agreed to submit questions to them, which I did. They did not submit answers, as they agreed to, on the following Monday, but did submit the answers last Saturday. The answers were not complete, they were not convincing, and contained no information upon which an intelligent man could vote for such a piece of legislation as this.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that the membership of this House will sustain the record that they made last August and vote against the foolish method of spending money which is provided by this bill. We are trying to spread it over 5 years for projects we know nothing about, and on top of that we are trying to put the Government in the insurance business to the extent of $10,000,000. The whole thing is absolutely ridiculous.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, it is difficult for me to talk about the Puerto Rican situation without getting into what some people might call an extreme attitude. I have watched the situation there closely for 15 years. I have had the opportunity to sit around the table with people very active in Puerto Rican industries. We have sent about $12,000,000 a year down to Puerto Rico, so I am informed, for relief purposes.

Now, the United States may do one of two things: We may help Puerto Rico rehabilitate its idle, starving people, or the taxpayers of this country will have to contribute annually from ten to twenty million dollars in order to feed those people. Puerto Rico is overpopulated, as is Japan. We may either furnish work in Puerto Rico for the Puerto Rican people or else move them out of Puerto Rico to some other place. On the other hand, we may convert their energy into goods and take the goods to some other place or let the people there consume more of their own production and less of the goods we ship to them—thus becoming more self-sustaining.

With reference to the insurance fund, may I point out that the money accumulated through the collection of the processing tax on Puerto Rican sugar has been impounded instead of it being distributed to individual growers of sugarcane, as it was in the United States among both cane and sugar-beet growers. In the United States the individual farmer collected his benefit payments, spent the money in his own way. In Puerto Rico this did not happen. The benefit payments that might have been distributed to individual growers are segregated into a fund, and it is this money this bill is to set aside as an insurance fund to protect growers against hurricane damage that may occur in the future. Of course, additional funds are not to be collected through the imposition of processing taxes on account of the A. A. A. decision by the Supreme Court. And the present amount of this fund will probably not be ample to care for the great damage which follows the acts of a hurricane. However, if the people prefer to use their fund in the form of an insurance protection instead of consuming it without any thought of tomorrow, why should we object to their doing so?

Mr. William T. Reed, Jr., assistant counsel of the National Association of Insurance Agents, informs me under date of January 15, 1936—wherein he refers to the ability of insurance companies to handle this problem—

Due to the high loss ratio experienced since 1928, I do not believe that any of the companies are in a position at present to undertake this type of hazard.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I submit that here is a problem the scope of which rises above the ability of stock- and mutual-insurance companies to handle. It becomes one which demands the highest policy of the United States and Puerto Rico in its solution. Are we to deny these people the right to use their own funds in a manner which will not only alleviate their troubles but at the same time result in the citizens of the United States having to contribute less dollars to Puerto Rican hurricane relief as well as welfare relief? The claim some make that this is destructive to private business because Government enters the field in this manner cannot be sustained. Private insurance activities have ceased, according to Mr. Reed's statement. The hazard is too great. Primitive man assumes and carries his own hazard when private initiative backs away from the problem or before private enterprise is created. Here is a case where private enterprise entered the field and gave up the task on account of too great a hazard. Now Puerto Ricans desire to mutually assume the hazard in this way. Furthermore, it should be kept in mind that Puerto Rican citizens have paid their share of processing taxes on articles shipped from the United States to Puerto Rico and consumed by the Puerto Rican people. Those taxes were collected and remitted to the individual farmers of the United States who grew cotton, pork, wheat, and other crops affected. The Puerto Rican is not complaining about that, but he is asking that he be permitted to use his own funds to help solve his own problems.

The rehabilitation feature of this bill is of greatest importance to these poor people. Since 1898 their condition has grown worse. They are real objects of American-dollar imperialism. Take the record and see how individual farms have been converted into great sugar plantations. How these very plantations, so few in number, have absorbed such a very, very great portion of the total acreage of fertile soils. How the people, through this taking over of the lands and as a result of the hurricanes, have been driven from pillar to post, into the slums of the city, and on relief. How individual farm families who once produced practically all of their subsistence have been forced off those farms and placed on what might be termed "seasonal" pay rolls, forced to work for mere existence, receiving whatever pay the concentrated holdings of farm lands desire to pay them for the stoop labor performed. Take particular note of how "absentee ownership" is bleeding white the productive elements of the islands; the enormous amount of dividends being paid by these "absentee owners" to their stockholders residing in other lands. Puerto Rico is a tragedy. It is a tragedy that has grown worse under the American flag. It was bad enough when we took over the islands with the large-scale farming which was in control even at that time.

Puerto Rico has a great surplus of laborers. More food must be produced there or more industries must be established or we shall have to contribute in increasing amounts to their subsistence. We cannot force on them their independence and let them starve. The scarcity of individual possessions, of food, clothing, medicine, educational facilities all tends to force many of them to live but little above the state of the savage. About 1,700,000 souls are crowded on that little island of about 3,435 square miles. What does "absentee ownership" care about these social and economic problems. The worse the conditions grow and remain short of revolution, the lower the price at which stoop labor can be obtained and the greater the profit of that ownership can become. What appears on the surface as a favorable "trade balance" is set off by the "exports" of revenue in the form of dividends that leave Puerto Rico for other lands. Local ownership always assumes and shares a dissimilar responsibility to social and economic conditions to that of "absentee ownership"—this is fundamental and all in accordance with the economic system under which we live. We should accept the fact and then proceed to see what can be done which will raise the standard of living in Puerto Rico, make the people self-sustaining and make it unnecessary for the citizens of the United States to continually send ten or fifteen millions of dollars annually to Puerto Rico for relief. In my opinion this bill is a step in that direction and therefore I hope the members of the House will vote in its favor. We should keep in mind the basic industry—sugar—in Puerto Rico is a protected industry. Therefore, the benefits of that protection should continue or travel down to the pockets of some of the "stoop workers" of that island and not all be held to the benefit of absentee investors who have the benefit of the protection and the purchasing power of the American consumers who almost entirely consume that basic crop.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK].

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] said that the President had certain powers of relief and that he had allocated five times more than these people were entitled to. I do not go to the length of saying that it is a misstatement, but it is an incorrect statement and wholly inaccurate. Previously the allocation to Puerto Rico has been from twelve to fifteen million dollars a year since relief started.

The purpose of this appropriation is to give the Puerto Ricans what amounts to $30,000,000 for 2 years, or approximately the same amount as has been appropriated before. This money is to be spent intelligently and judiciously, over a period of 5 years, for real rehabilitation of the Puerto Rican people. I cannot see how the average Republican can oppose this measure, and I am glad to note that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] is for the bill. It looks to me as if the opposition is of a partisan nature. Some of you Republicans are just against anything the Democrats are for; certainly the arguments against it are not based on real facts or common sense.

Mr. Speaker, I repeat this money is to be spent intelligently and judiciously. If that is the fact, the Republicans should drop this partisan opposition and vote for the bill.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Puerto Rico is the most tragic victim of American imperialism. This is the first opportunity we have to aid the people of Puerto Rico. As a matter of fact this bill does not give them very much. However, it is better than nothing. Why all this opposition to even this small measure of help? Is it discrimination? If not, to defeat this bill would be false economy. I want to thank the gentleman from Texas for his support of this bill. Puerto Rico has been kicked around too long. Why not give her a chance?

Mr. MAVERICK. The distinguished gentleman from New York is correct. I go with you in thought and know the study and application you have given the Puerto Rican question. The Puerto Ricans have been given slipshod treatment, and really pretty bad treatment as you say. I thank the gentleman for his contribution, and appreciate the fact that he understands the question and has sympathy for the Puerto Rican people and will vote not according to party, but according to common sense and justice.

Mr. MORAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAVERICK. Yes.

Mr. MORAN. May I ask the gentleman this question? The money is going to be spent anyway and the only point involved is whether we are going to spend it as relief and receive no benefit or whether we are going to accomplish some useful purpose in the expenditure of the money.

Mr. MAVERICK. The gentleman is right. This money is going to be spent anyway and if we would do as the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] has suggested, they will take the money and, in effect, throw it away, because it will do little good—and will only feed people, while, according to this plan, the money can be spent wisely. The point is, if they can take this money and purchase real estate and spend it slowly it will be a good thing for the Puerto Ricans, because they can be rehabilitated, and a good thing for ourselves, because it will relieve our tax burdens. In fine, it will assist the Puerto Ricans in being self-supporting.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAVERICK. For a brief question; yes.

Mr. SNELL. Does the gentleman mean to say they are going to throw this money away if we do not extend this time limit?

Mr. MAVERICK. I do not agree that it is going to be thrown away.

Mr. SNELL. That is what the gentleman stated.

Mr. MAVERICK. I will express myself a little better by saying that it would be much better spent if we permitted it to be done judiciously, according to a decent plan, and not just paid out for relief and to feed people.

Mr. SNELL. May I ask the gentleman another question?

Mr. MAVERICK. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. As I understand, this money comes from an emergency fund that expires on June 30, 1937.

Mr. MAVERICK. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. If they have allocated more than they can spend or more than they need for just purposes down there, why should not the balance come back to the Treasury of the United States?

Mr. MAVERICK. The answer to that is they have not allocated more than can be spent, of course.

We have not allocated any more money than is a just amount. This money can be thrown out as a dole just to feed people or it can be used intelligently to purchase farms so that the people can rehabilitate themselves. There does not exist anything like the Rural Rehabilitation Bureau in Puerto Rico and this is for the purpose of agricultural rehabilitation. Industry is not covered; is not interfered with.

They have 300,000 families in Puerto Rico that are on relief. More than two-thirds of the population of Puerto Rico is on relief, and our purpose is to get them off of relief and get them back into agricultural pursuits, and to be self-supporting.

This will benefit the sugar industry of the United States, because this land is not to be used in sugar production, but put into other lines of agriculture. They will therefore have a diversified agriculture to make it a more complete economic unit, and where it will not be necessary to import so many products. It will therefore benefit Puerto Rico and also benefit the taxpayers of the United States.

This statement that the appropriation is five times too much is not true at all. This is one place where the President of the United States, the Director of the Budget, the Governor of Puerto Rico, the Senate of Puerto Rico, and every branch of the government agree that this is a proper way for this money to be spent, and I hope you gentlemen on the Republican side and on this side will not oppose the bill just to be in opposition, because this is one time when money is being spent with wisdom.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAVERICK. Yes.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Is it not a fact that the Government is anxious to buy the land in Puerto Rico at the cheapest possible price and cannot do so without being taken into court, and if the matter goes into court it will take longer than the 2 years? Moreover, is it not correct that many will hold out for exorbitant prices unless Congress allots a reasonable time for purchase? Is not this bill really necessary for proper and correct administration?

Mr. MAVERICK. The gentleman is correct, and I thank him for his contribution. You have really represented your people and have fostered legislation for the people of Pennsylvania which is of great benefit and a social advance. You are correct on this Puerto Rican question, and I am sure the gentleman has given it the same serious and conscientious study that he always does his constituency in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is a good bill; it is sensible, it is fair to the Puerto Rican, fair to the Government of the United States. I believe it should pass.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON].

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to no one in my friendship for the people of Puerto Rico, but as former chairman of the Committee on Insular Affairs and as a member of that committee for 14 years, and having visited Puerto Rico on several occasions, I feel I am perhaps qualified to contribute something to this debate.

I am wondering, my friends, how many of you who voted for the $4,880,000,000 relief fund had any idea that that money would be carried over for a period of 7 years. We appropriated that money last year, in 1935. It is proposed in this legislation to carry this sum over to June 30, 1940. Surely, there can be no objection to the plan proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] to place the unexpended portion back in the Federal Treasury, voting it out as future needs determine.

I consider it a very dangerous thing for this Congress to make appropriations available over a long period of time. I believe that the unexpended money should be covered back into the Treasury, and if the Puerto Ricans come before us and show need for renewing the appropriation we can then act as needs dictate. But to come in here at this time and propose to carry this on for another 5 years seems to me absurd and indefensible.

Congress has done many absurd things, and it is time that we get our feet back on the ground and legislate in a clear, sound manner, one which we can go home and defend.

Now, as far as the insurance plan is concerned, why not insure the buildings and crops of Minnesota farmers, the farmers in Ohio and Texas and California?

Mr. McFARLANE. We are taking care of the farmers in Minnesota; what is the gentleman crying about?

Mr. KNUTSON. Why not take in the whole country?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KNUTSON. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I know the gentleman from Minnesota wants to be fair, and I think he knows that this insurance fund is being provided by the farmers in Puerto Rico and not by the United States Government, not by the Public Works Administration.

Mr. KNUTSON. There were $35,000,000 appropriated or allotted for relief work. Does the gentleman deny that?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I am talking about the insurance.

Mr. KNUTSON. Thirty-five million dollars was allocated to Puerto Rico for relief and for P. W. A. work. Of that sum $9,000,000 has been used for direct relief, making $26,000,000 for W. P. A. In all conscience that is a pretty good sum of money, and I do not believe anyone in Puerto Rico can accuse Uncle Sam of having been niggardly with the people of the island. They can come to Congress when they need further relief. Let Congress not blindly appropriate big sums that would be available for the next 5 years.

You cannot defend this measure to your own constituents, who are paying a large part of the bill.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. EKWALL].

Mr. EKWALL. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that my colleague on this side, the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], is usually the watchdog of the Treasury, and quite often I approve of what he says, but in this case I think he has the wrong idea. I believe this money should be spent in a judicious manner. The money has been allocated. You are merely asked for authority to spread over a period of years the expenditures which otherwise would have to be made by the middle of 1937.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EKWALL. No; I have not the time. It seems to me the insurance feature is entirely misunderstood, because this fund is already available. It is money that is impounded at the present time. It is merely for the purpose of affording insurance in case hurricane insurance rates are too high or in case no insurance of this type can be secured at all. I have gone over this bill rather carefully. The thing that impresses me with its absolute fairness is the fact that every member of the Committee on Insular Affairs present at the time has approved the bill, and when Members of the type of KOCIALKOWSKI, SMITH of West Virginia, CARTWRIGHT, LARRABEE, ELLENBOGEN, SANDERS of Louisiana, RYAN, McGEHEE, MASSINGALE, BELL, MAHON, O'DAY, SAUTHOFF, THURSTON, WELCH, COLE of New York, STEFAN, CRAWFORD, GINGERY, DEMPSEY, and IGLESIAS say the bill is a good bill, that is satisfactory to me, and I believe it ought to be to the other Members. I think the bill should pass as recommended by the committee.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD].

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, sometimes I need to remind myself and the House that I am the ranking Republican member of the Committee on Expenditures. I do not annoy you with many such small matters, but the report on this bill interests me greatly. Puerto Rico tells us that she has too much money to be spent in a short time, and she begs us that she may not be forced to "hurriedly waste the money." The report says practically that she will waste it and spend it somehow within the time. They don't wish to waste this money, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK] said that for once let us see to it that relief money is spent properly. I am glad to get that admission. We have plenty of towns in our districts that would have been glad to have W. P. A. money spent for worthwhile and permanent projects, rather than waste the funds on temporary and wasteful schemes hurriedly suggested. These Island people simply ask that they may be allowed to spend money properly and the suggestion appears like an indictment of the manner in which we are spending on the continent. This report is interesting indeed. They say, "Don't make us build a power plant in 2 years because we haven't the consumption for it now." Why, that is what we have been doing on the continent, is it not—building enormous power plants that will take many, many years to find customers to make use of them? They want to be treated quite differently from what our own municipalities have been treated. Would not all of us wish to make the same identical request? I read:

Do not make us waste this money.

And to think that they agree they are going to waste it, and will waste it in 2 years unless you give them this extra time to spend it properly. I think it is a most remarkable report. It would seem to criticize our methods of spending relief funds. We know that the Insular Affairs Committee look well after their islands. That committee must assume their problems. Who ever heard of an Insular Affairs Committee that did not recommend about the maximum of benefits for them? We can hardly blame them, as they are the guardians and must get all they can of this easy money. But here is an absolute acknowledgment that they do not need the money; that they cannot spend it unless they waste it; but that they are going to waste it. They are making no different request than you and I would like to make for a great many projects in our own districts. They agree that they do not like to waste this money, but will do so unless we pass this bill. I could not resist the opportunity of reminding you that they are no different from most others, who will spend it even if it is to be wasted.

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. Yes.

Mr. MILLARD. This money was appropriated for relief. Does that mean that the depression will not be over until 1940?

Mr. GIFFORD. They suggest that the relief problem of the islands will be before us for many years. This bill means that they really want to spend the money wisely.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Does the bill appropriate any more money than has originally been appropriated? If not, what is the objection?

Mr. GIFFORD. No; they want to hold on to what they have. They have asked even for the processing taxes and the interest thereon and they want that money to go into the fund. They want also to go into the insurance business.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The Puerto Ricans are entitled to a square deal. They need a real chance. Why not give it to them? Furthermore, this money belongs to them, does it not?

Mr. GIFFORD. Yes; if what is given to them for relief belongs to them. But if they cannot use the $25,000,000, whose money is it? Does it belong to them simply because it has been allocated to them for relief? No; it belongs to the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. It is their money. They should be permitted to spend it in a manner that will do the most good, such as is provided in this bill.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SAUTHOFF].

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Mr. Speaker, in this discussion I have noticed that about three-quarters of what has been said is not true. [Laughter and applause.] There is an absolute misapprehension of the facts. What happened in Puerto Rico is this: In 1928 there was a hurricane that wiped out, to a great extent, the leading crop that these people need on which to make a living; that is, the coffee crop. Puerto Rico grows the finest coffee in the world. This coffee has no competition. It is sold mostly in Europe. It does not go into the United States and compete with domestic crops. What happened in Puerto Rico is this: Coffee trees are very delicate and must be protected. They are protected by growing shade trees side by side as they grow the coffee trees. It takes about 5 years to grow them so that they will produce. If this money is spent on a dole, all we do is to pay out to these people who have been driven off these coffee plantations and have been forced into the slums of the city. There are 359,000 of them now on relief. You simply give them the money to keep alive, but you do not put them back in the coffee fields where they belong. You do not give them an opportunity to once more clean up those fields and raise coffee trees and earn a living. That is what this bill seeks to do. We spent $14,000,000 last year, and we spent $14,000,000 the year before that, and all we did was to hand out a dole. Instead of doing that, we expect that $30,000,000 will rehabilitate these coffee fields [applause], and move these people out from the slums, and put them back on their coffee plantations and make them self-supporting. That is the purpose of this bill. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were refused.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the request comes too late.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not.

The House divided; and there were yeas 150 and nays 49.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is no quorum present, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and twenty-seven Members are present, a quorum.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 9871. An act to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the participation of the United States in the California-Pacific International Exposition to be held at San Diego, Calif., in 1935 and 1936; authorizing an appropriation therefor; and for other purposes", approved March 7, 1935; to provide for participation in the California-Pacific International Exposition to be held at San Diego, Calif., in 1936; to authorize an appropriation therefor; and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 3612. An act to provide loans to farmers for crop production and harvesting during the year 1936, and for other purposes.

DOMESTIC SOURCES OF TIN

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 3381) to provide for the protection and preservation of domestic sources of tin.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the interest of national defense, it is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress and the purpose and intent of this act to protect, preserve, and develop domestic sources of tin, to restrain the depletion of domestic reserves of tin-bearing materials, and to lessen the present costly and dangerously dependent position of the United States with respect to resources of tin.

SEC. 2. There shall not be exported from the United States after the expiration of 60 days from the enactment of this act any tin-plate scrap, except upon license issued by the President of the United States. The President is authorized to grant licenses upon such conditions and regulations as he may find necessary to assure in the public interest fair and equitable consideration to all producers of this commodity.

SEC. 3. Any violation of the provisions of this act shall be a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment of not more than 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FADDIS] has 20 minutes and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. McLEAN] has 20 minutes.

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill to prevent the exportation of tin scrap from the United States. We are in this situation with respect to tin: We produce absolutely no virgin tin within the United States. Since we have been a Nation we have produced less than 1,500 tons in the United States, and our normal annual consumption of tin is in excess of 60,000 tons. We have within the United States an industry which acts as a reserve for our tin supply, inasmuch as it detins the tin scrap which comes from the canning factories and converts it into tin which, for all practical purposes, is exactly the same as virgin tin. This detinning industry has been during the last few years almost utterly destroyed because the Japanese have come into the market and have bid tin scrap up beyond the price which our detinners can afford to pay for this product. The reason the Japanese have been able to do that is that they have very low-grade labor, in the first place, but the principal reason that they desire this tin scrap is that in securing the tin scrap and detinning it they secure the high-grade steel upon which the tin is made. Therefore they achieve two purposes. One of their purposes is to destroy our detinning industry, which acts as a reserve in this Nation in time of war, and the other is to secure this high-grade steel which they use to amalgamate with the high silica ores which comes from Manchukuo to make armor plate.

Now, we are at the mercy of the world at large for tin. Tin is one of the essential commodities of this Nation, both in time of peace and in time of war. It is necessary that we take steps, especially so at this time, to protect what domestic sources we have.

Over quite a period of years the tin produced by the detinning industry in the United States has amounted to 27 percent of the tin consumed in this country, although in the last few years it has dropped to almost nothing because of the destruction of the industry. During the present worldwide emergency the situation with respect to tin has become particularly alarming. Although we consume almost 200 tons of tin in this Nation each day, at the present time the warehouse stocks of tin in New York comprise but 173 tons, just about 1 day's consumption; but of this supply of tin, 118 tons is Chinese tin. Chinese tin is tin which is a very poor grade and cannot be used in the making of tin plate.

The United States is absolutely at the mercy of foreign nations in regard to tin, because practically all of our tin comes from the Federated Malay States and from Bolivia. The source of all this tin is controlled by Great Britain. In fact, Great Britain today controls 85 percent of the tin of the world. So now we are in a very bad situation with respect to tin. Therefore, we have asked for this legislation in order to protect our domestic sources of tin.

This is a bill on which the Military Affairs Committee held very extensive hearings, and which was reported out unanimously by that committee. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. EATON].

Mr. EATON. Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether this House is cognizant of the vital importance of the tin question to our Nation at the present time. A select committee of which the chairman was the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McREYNOLDS], chairman of our Committee on Foreign Affairs, and on which I had the honor to serve, made a long and careful study of the tin situation a year ago, and made certain recommendations which are yet to be acted upon.

We use in this country every year from 50,000 to 60,000 tons of tin. Tin is produced from four main sources, Bolivia, the Malay States, the Netherlands, and Nigeria. The Straits tin is considered to be the best. A year or two ago they organized in London what is known as an international cartel to raise the price of tin to the consumer. Remember that America buys more than half the tin produced in the world. By means of this international agreement they raised the price of tin to our consumers from about 20 cents up to 50 cents a pound. The latter figure is about the current price. For some reason they have been holding back the supply of tin for this country until, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania has told you, we have at the present time less than 1 day's supply of tin in stock in the warehouses in New York.

Tin is absolutely essential in time of war or in time of peace, and I approach this problem, first of all, from the point of view of our national defense. Without tin we are at the mercy of an enemy coming in from the outside. We must, therefore, have some reserves. About 30 years ago there was developed in this country what was known as the detinning industry. We have now two companies engaged in this business, with 5 plants—1 in San Francisco, 1 in Chicago, 1 in Pittsburgh, and 2 in New Jersey. One of the Jersey plants is shut down because its supply of tin scrap has been largely taken by Japan. I have in my hand an advertisement by a Japanese firm in a New York paper:

We are detinners.

And they are asking for scrap tin.

Underneath appears a statement by our Jersey firm:

We were detinners, but the Japanese put us out of business.

The hourly wage in Japan detinning plants is 5 cents. In our American plants it is 55 cents.

The material used for detinning comes from scrap left over from the making of tin cans. Tin cans are not made of tin, but are made of steel that is baptized in tin. The detinning plants buy this scrap. It is baled and brought to them. The railroads are given millions of dollars worth of business in this freight carriage. When the detinning companies could buy scrap at a reasonable price they could continue in business. If we put our detinning plants out of business, we put out of business a source of tin at home sufficient to take care of about 30 percent of our total needs in case of war. These detinning plants are highly technical institutions. If we let them go by the board, it would take years to assemble the skilled chemists and engineers and to create new machinery to set them up again.

Several questions are raised in this connection. I want to deal with them in a sentence. The first is the question of how this bill will affect the small producer of tin scrap. Under this bill the President has the right to issue a license to export to anyone whom he thinks is being unfairly treated. In the second place, it is a fact that for 14 years before the Japanese began to put the price up where we could not compete, and before they took from us this one domestic source of our supply, the small producers of tin-plate scrap were paid over 5 percent more than the large producers, like the Continental Can Co. Furthermore, one of these great detinning companies located in my district, and for this reason very fair in its disposition and intelligent in its conduct of business, has made a written guaranty that it will give to the small producer of tin-plate scrap exactly the same price given to the large producer, so all producers will be placed exactly on a par. This is in the record, as the chairman of our committee can verify.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Is it not a fact that the price of tin-plate scrap has jumped from $2 a ton up to $18?

Mr. EATON. It went as high as $24 at one time.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. And it made it impossible for the reclaiming plants to purchase scrap tin.

Mr. EATON. Absolutely; it has put them out of business.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. When I was chairman of the Committee on Rules I was somewhat instrumental in assisting in the set-up of this select committee which investigated the shortage of tin in the country. I have not had a chance to see the report of the committee, although I understand it has been filed; but does this bill in a general way carry out the recommendations of that select committee?

Mr. EATON. I do not want to speak for the chairman of the committee, but this bill has our full sympathy. The chairman of the investigating committee has been instrumental in securing the consideration of this bill, which incorporates the main principles agreed upon in our report, so far as the embargo plan on scrap tin is concerned.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. The ultimate purpose of this bill is to stop the exportation of any tin from the country. Is not this so?

Mr. EATON. The ultimate purpose of this bill is to stop the exportation at this time and under present world conditions of tin-plate scrap which is used in our detinning plants and absolutely necessary for their continuance in business and for our safety in war.

Mr. BLOOM. It is tin that is left over.

Mr. EATON. It is tin that is left over. As I said before, a tin can is not made of tin, but is made of steel plate that is baptized in tin.

Mr. McCORMACK. I just want to get clear in my mind the effect of this bill. It will result in prohibiting the exportation of this commodity from this country unless a license is obtained.

Mr. EATON. Yes; as a national-defense measure.

Mr. MAIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MAIN. When the gentleman speaks of a tin can being a sheet of steel baptized with tin—

Mr. EATON. In tin. Immersed in tin.

Mr. MAIN. The gentleman is an advocate of immersing rather than sprinkling?

Mr. EATON. Yes.

Mr. FORD of California. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. FORD of California. With war going on in Europe and tin being such an important article in time of war, does the gentleman not think it is a very wise provision for this country to stop the exportation of any kind of tin?

Mr. EATON. Yes; of any kind of tin-plate scrap.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Where will be the market for this scrap tin?

Mr. EATON. We have a market here in our detinning plants that is starving to death because it cannot get the material for its use. These plants take scrap tin from the can factories, recover the tin, which is sold and used as 100-percent pure tin, or it may be used in another form in the silk industry to make the rustle that the ladies require in silk material. If the Japanese take all of this tin scrap, then our detinning plants go out of business, and in case of war we are at the mercy of anybody who wants to come over here and beat us up.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EATON. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Is it not true that Japan has been importing from the United States very large quantities of scrap steel, scrap iron, and scrap copper in addition to tin plate?

Mr. EATON. Yes.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. There has been an increase of from 10 to 20 percent since 1932. The situation is becoming very alarming.

Mr. EATON. Yes. May I say further, this country is the only important industrial country which has not now an embargo against the exportation of tin-plate scrap.

Mr. GIFFORD. Does Henry Ford use a lot of tin?

Mr. EATON. I do not know. He used to, but not now.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, may I say that the time is here when the men and women constituting this body had better pay some attention to the needs and dangers of our own country. We have to go into the markets of the world and purchase this tin at a price which is made outside the borders of our country. We can keep 30 percent of it from going back, and we ought to do that, especially when in so doing we do no damage to any American industry while we keep going in our detinning plants an industry that is absolutely essential in time of war. I hope the membership will vote 100 percent for this bill and show for once that we are Americans first.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I want to read a sentence of this bill:

The President is authorized to grant licenses upon such conditions and regulations as he may find necessary to assure in the public interest fair and equitable consideration to all producers of this commodity. There shall not be exported from the United States after the expiration of 60 days from the enactment of this act any tin plate scrap—except upon license issued by the President of the United States.

Remember the word "scrap", because I want to get to that question in a moment—

Mr. Speaker, this turns over to the President the absolute authority to maintain an embargo on the exportation of tin plate scrap. Let me tell you just what the situation is with reference to tin and how important it is from a military standpoint. It is customary for us to export somewhere around 100,000 tons of tin plate, which represents approximately 1,500 tons of tin. That is to say, there is only a small amount of tin used with the tin plate. This is over three times as much as all the tin plate scrap available in the United States. In other words, the amount of tin plate that we export is three or four times as much as the total tin plate scrap available.

Mr. EATON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. EATON. The gentleman is a wizard at figures, but I call his attention to the fact that we produce 250,000 tons of scrap with tin on it, and 35 pounds of tin is taken off every ton. If the gentleman will figure that out he will see that he is left in the hole.

Mr. TABER. No. The amount of tin plate exported is not very serious. The important thing about this matter is that there are two or three people operating these detinning plants. They have a monopoly in this country. They were paying about $1 a ton for the scrap, whereas the price now is somewhere around $12 or $13 a ton. That is the picture with reference to this situation.

From the standpoint of national defense, this bill does not mean a thing. It is simply a bill to maintain the monopoly of two or three concerns which operate about six detinning plants in this country. They can operate and pay a fair price for this product. This bill permits the President of the United States to issue licenses for the exportation of tin anyway. It does seem to me when we come to consider all these facts it is going a long way to pass a bill turning over the entire authority of Congress with reference to the issuance of embargoes to the President, thereby burdening him with this additional duty. Under the circumstances it seems to me we ought to defeat this bill.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The reason the local detinning plants are not getting this tin today is on account of not being able to meet the Japanese competition?

Mr. TABER. I think they are getting it to a considerable extent. As I understand it, there are several plants operating at the present time.

Mr. CRAWFORD. But as the Japanese have been moving forward they have taken this commodity away from the local detinners.

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. And if this embargo is placed in effect it will entirely replace the scrap in the hands of the firms to which the gentleman referred?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What is there in the bill which will protect the fellow who has the scrap for sale?

Mr. TABER. He has to go to the President in order to get a license to export his scrap.

Mr. EATON. Will the gentleman yield so that I may answer the question?

Mr. TABER. Have I not answered it correctly?

Mr. EATON. The price of the product of a detinning plant is determined by the price of virgin tin, which is brought into this country, and if they have any tin to sell after they have detinned this scrap, it receives the same price as if it were imported from the Straits Settlements.

Mr. CRAWFORD. You simply have a refining cost in between.

Mr. EATON. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TABER) there were—ayes 139, noes 14.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LOANS FOR CROP PRODUCTION AND HARVESTING DURING THE YEAR 1936

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. JONES moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 3612) to provide for loans to farmers for crop production and harvesting during the year 1936, and for other purposes, with an amendment as follows: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

"That the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, hereinafter in this act referred to as the 'Governor', is hereby authorized to make loans to farmers in the continental United States and in Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, during the year 1936, for fallowing, for the production of crops, for planting, cultivating, and harvesting of crops, for supplies incident to and necessary for such production, planting, cultivating, and harvesting, and for feed for livestock, or for any of such purposes. Such loans shall be made and collected through such persons, instrumentalities, and agencies, upon such terms and conditions, and subject to such regulations, as the Governor may prescribe.

"Sec. 2. (a) There shall be required as security for any such loan a first lien, or an agreement to give a first lien, upon all crops of which the production or harvesting, or both, is to be financed, in whole or in part, with the proceeds of such loan; or in case of any loan for the purchase or production of feed for livestock, a first lien upon the livestock to be fed. Fees for recording, filing, registration, and examination of records (including certificates), aggregating not more than 75 cents, may be paid from the proceeds of each loan. Fees for the release or satisfaction of record of the lien given to secure any loan shall be paid by the borrower. Each loan shall bear interest at the rate of 5½ percent per annum.

"(b) The amount which may be loaned to any borrower pursuant to this act shall not exceed $300: Provided, however, That in any area certified by the President of the United States to the Governor as a distressed emergency area, the Governor may make loans without regard to the foregoing limitations as to amount, under such regulations and with such maturities as he may prescribe therefor.

"(c) No loan shall be made under this act to any applicant who shall not have first established to the satisfaction of the proper officer or employee of the Farm Credit Administration, under such regulations as the Governor may prescribe: (1) That such applicant is unable to procure from other sources a loan in an amount reasonably adequate to meet his needs for the purposes for which loans may be made under this act.

Sec. 3. (a) The moneys advanced by the Governor in connection with each loan made under the provisions of this act are declared to be impressed with a trust to accomplish the purposes provided for by this act (namely, for fallowing, for the production of crops, for planting, cultivating, and harvesting of crops, for supplies incident to such production, planting, cultivating, and harvesting, and for feed for livestock, or for any of such purposes); and may be used only for the purposes stated in the borrower's loan application and until so used shall continue subject to such trust and be free from garnishment, attachment, or the levy of an execution. It shall be unlawful for any borrower to willfully use said trust fund for any purpose other than those stated in his loan application, except with the written permission of the Governor or his duly authorized representative.

"(b) It shall be unlawful for any person to make any material false representation for the purpose of obtaining, or assisting another to obtain, a loan under the provisions of this act; or willfully to dispose of or assist in disposing of, except for the account of the Governor, any crops or other property upon which there exists a lien securing a loan made under the provisions of this act.

"(c) It shall be unlawful for any person to charge a fee for the purpose of preparing or assisting in the preparation of any papers of an applicant for a loan under the provisions of this act.

"(d) Any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 6 months, or both.

Sec. 4. The Governor shall have power, without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment and compensation of officers and employees of the United States, to employ and fix the compensation and duties of such agents, officers, and employees as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act; but the compensation of such officers and employees shall correspond, so far as the Governor deems practicable, to the rates established by the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. Such agents, officers, and employees, or any of them, and the facilities of the Farm Credit Administration available for use in connection with such loans may also be used by the Governor to perform services for any institution operating under the supervision of the Farm Credit Administration, upon such terms and conditions as the Governor may determine; and such institutions are hereby expressly empowered to enter into agreements with the Governor for such purpose. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, and of collecting loans made under acts of the same general character, including loans made by the Governor with funds appropriated under the provisions of the Emergency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, the Governor is authorized to use the facilities of any agency, institution, or corporation, operating under the supervision of the Farm Credit Administration, and any officer or employee of such agency, institution, or corporation, or of the Farm Credit Administration, and may pay for such services and the use of such facilities from the funds made available for the payment of necessary administrative expenses; and such institutions and corporations are hereby expressly empowered to enter into agreements with the Governor for the accomplishment of such purposes.

Sec. 5. (a) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $40,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of this act. Any moneys so appropriated, and all collections of both principal and interest on loans made under this act, may be used by the Governor for making loans under this act and for all necessary administrative expenses in carrying out the provisions of this act and in collecting outstanding balances on crop production, seed, and feed loans made under prior legislation of the same general character.

(b) Expenditures for printing and binding necessary in carrying out the provisions of this act may be made without regard to the provisions of section 3709 of the Revised Statutes.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I shall ask that the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. FULMER] be allowed to control the time and make such explanation of the bill as may be necessary.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Speaker, this is the usual bill that we have been passing for the last few years for the purpose of making loans to that great class of farmers who are unable to actually give collateral to secure loans through any other credit activity.

I may say to the House that the experience in making these loans in the past, including the last year, is that collections from this class of people have been as high as 98 percent in some States.

The prompt passage of this bill is very urgent for the reason that a great many of the farmers are now ready to proceed with their crops and unless they are able to get this type of loan, where they can only give as collateral paper covering the crop being planted for the present year, they will be unable to carry on, and, naturally, there will be thousands of these people placed on relief rolls and in line for a dole.

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULMER. I yield.

Mr. HOLMES. Does this bill grant the same privilege to tenants and share croppers as to other farmers?

Mr. FULMER. Yes. I may say to the gentleman that has been taken care of to the extent that they will not make loans to a landlord without taking into consideration the fact that the tenants get their just part of the loan. In this way the tenants will be taken care of.

Mr. KVALE. Is it not also true that these loans will be apportioned and evaluated so that the benefits will not all go to those having the earlier demands, namely, the cotton farmers, but will also be extended to the corn and wheat farmers and others of that type?

Mr. FULMER. Absolutely; even including the cases where they plant their crop as late as December to be gathered in the following spring.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What is the amount provided for in the bill?

Mr. FULMER. Forty million dollars in the House bill and $60,000,000 in the Senate bill. We are proposing to substitute the House bill for the Senate bill.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is the same amount as provided for last year and the year before?

Mr. FULMER. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULMER. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman stated that in some sections the return was as high as 98 percent. Of course, that is not very much of a statement with respect to what the actual facts are. Can the gentleman tell us what is the actual amount returned from these loans in all sections as finally averaged?

Mr. FULMER. The total collections up to this time, with other collections to be made, I believe run around—

Mr. JONES. The collections on previous loans have averaged around 70 percent. The 1935 loans have not all been collected. There are a number of wheat loans. I think the collections for 1935 are around 40 percent, but many of the wheat loans are not yet due. The previous loans covering a period of several years have run around an average of 70 percent.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. Yes.

Mr. HOPE. And is it not a fact that loan collections are being made all the time?

Mr. JONES. Yes; additional collections.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I have always been in favor of this law, and I am simply asking these questions for information. When the gentleman says that 70 percent are repaid, does the gentleman include the overhead and the cost of making these loans, or is that outside?

Mr. JONES. That is the amount of total collections, as I understand it. The gentleman understands that the earlier loans were made in the drought area, and naturally there were smaller collections in those areas. In many instances the larger number of loans were made in such areas, and that has somewhat reduced collections.

But taking over the whole period, there has been a little more than 70 percent of these farmers' loans repaid.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I have understood that it was higher than that, but taking it at 70 percent, with the overhead expenses taken out of that, and the overhead is pretty heavy.

Mr. JONES. Not very heavy; I do not remember the exact percentage.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Twenty-five percent?

Mr. JONES. Oh, no. It ran five or six million dollars last year. The 70 percent includes the extreme drought area, where only 15 or 20 percent was collected. In the area where there were normal conditions, as much as 90 percent has been collected.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I think the experts of the Agricultural Committee ought to furnish us and the country generally with a concrete statement of that.

Mr. JONES. If the gentleman will look at the end of the report he will see that that is all itemized. He will find a statement of all the previous loans.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Would the gentleman include that as a part of his remarks?

Mr. JONES. No; it consists of a lot of tables, and it would take up too much space.

Mr. KVALE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. KVALE. The gentleman from Ohio is an assiduous and conscientious student, and I know he has been seeking information. I ask him and all Members to consider this fact, that many of the farmers in the drought area were forced to qualify for loans and had to pay $1.25 or $1.35 per bushel for seed which they were subsequently forced to repay with receipts for grain which yielded from one-fifth to one-tenth the cost of their seed when measured in bushels. Some of us made strenuous efforts to secure the privilege of his paying back in kind, but the Department looked upon that with disfavor.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I understand the percentage is much higher than 70 percent in some areas.

Mr. HOPE. I will say to the gentleman from Ohio that the report shows that the percentage of collections in Ohio is lower than the average.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. That does not apply in my district.

Mr. TABER. That is in reference to the 1935 crop?

Mr. HOPE. Yes.

Mr. TABER. Where they are not accustomed to marketing a large portion of their crops until after the first of the year. If the gentleman will turn to page 4 of the report, he will find that the loans to Ohio over a period of years have been only a million and a half altogether, and the total collections have been 68.2 percent. I think, with reference to the farming population, probably Ohio has as good a record in this as any other State.

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULMER. Yes.

Mr. ROMJUE. Is it not a fact that the percentage will be still increased, because these payments will continue and the percentage of payments will go higher.

Mr. FULMER. That is correct.

Mr. ROMJUE. In addition to that, it will be absolutely impossible for us to collect the same percentage from the various States, because some of the States suffered more through the drought than others.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULMER. Yes.

Mr. GIFFORD. Does any of the $40,000,000 go to the officers of voluntary productive associations that loan money to their members?

Mr. FULMER. None whatever.

Mr. GIFFORD. Would the gentleman tell us how those not connected with voluntary associations proceed to get through a loan of money?

Mr. FULMER. By making application just like the other farmers.

Mr. GIFFORD. Direct to whom?

Mr. FULMER. To the farm agency in his State or county.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULMER. Yes.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Would the gentleman state approximately what percentage of these loans have been made in emergency drought areas?

Mr. FULMER. I cannot give the gentleman that information. It may be that the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE] in his time will be able to give the gentleman that information.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. It occurs to me that the percentage must be very high. It also occurs to me that perhaps most of the delinquencies are in those areas.

Mr. FULMER. Yes; most of them are.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. I happen to be quite familiar with conditions existing in the emergency drought areas in Minnesota and the Dakotas, and I believe that as soon as those regions have sufficient rainfall and the farmers get good crops most of the loans now delinquent will be paid and paid in full.

Mr. FULMER. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. CASTELLOW. And is it not imperative that these funds be made available as early as possible on account of the fact that planning of crops is now going on, particularly in the South in the cotton regions?

Mr. FULMER. Unless we have prompt action these farmers will have to go to some fertilizer dealer and obtain fertilizer on the promise that he will pay when he gets the loan and in doing so he will be charged an extra sum, whereas if he has the cash now he could buy the fertilizer at a lower price.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. And I think I ought to say that in some of the drought-stricken areas of the Middle West, if seed loans are not made available this year, there may be a considerable acreage that will not be seeded.

Mr. FULMER. The gentleman is correct about that.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. We do not have the fertilizer situation the gentleman speaks of, but we have a comparable situation arising out of a scarcity of good seed, due to rust infestation and to the fact that the drought conditions in some countries has continued.

Mr. FULMER. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill as amended.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

THE NEUTRALITY BILL

Mr. TINKHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by inserting therein a public statement I made 2 or 3 days ago in relation to neutrality.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TINKHAM. Mr. Speaker, the neutrality bill reported by the Committee on Foreign Affairs is not a neutrality bill.

Neutrality means refraining from participation with either belligerent.

This bill promotes unneutrality under the guise of neutrality. It makes the United States a puppet state of Great Britain and a subsidiary of the League of Nations. It is more likely to involve the United States in war than to keep the United States out of war.

Section 4 of the bill gives the President discretionary power at any time during the progress of a war to impose embargoes on all articles and materials which he determines can be used in the conduct of war.

This section gives the President authority to participate in the sanctions of the League. It gives him authority to aid in the warlike actions which the League may take against any nation it determines is the aggressor in a conflict. It makes the United States a partner of the League in the wars of the League.

The League of Nations is controlled by Great Britain. Great Britain is now contesting with Italy the control of the Mediterranean. This bill makes the United States an ally of Great Britain in this contest. This is not neutrality.

Neutrality should mean peace for the United States. The United States will not have peace by intervening in foreign quarrels and in taking part in the political affairs of Europe.

Europe is divided into various armed camps. The United States cannot take sides with any of the camps and remain neutral. To take sides must ultimately lead to the involvement of the United States in war.

The President should not be given discretionary power to impose embargoes on articles and materials used in the conduct of war at any time during the progress of a war. If the bill is to pass, the bill should compel him to impose such embargoes automatically upon his declaring that a state of war exists, as he is compelled to do in relation to arms, ammunition, and implements of war.

In modern warfare, articles and materials used in the conduct of war are as essential to warring nations as are arms, ammunition, and implements of war. Therefore, this discrimination between arms, ammunition, and implements of war, and articles and materials used in the conduct of war, in the matter of embargoes, is indefensible and illogical. It is also hostile to the peaceful aspirations of the American people.

It is clear how such discretionary power in relation to articles and materials used in the conduct of war would be used in the present Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

Last fall, without authority of law, the President attempted to place an embargo on oil. At that time Italy stated officially that inasmuch as war was already in progress, she regarded such action as an unfriendly act. It was an unfriendly act. Under international law, it is considered unneutral for a country to change its policy during the progress of any war in a manner favorable or adverse to either belligerent. Therefore, whether embargoes on war materials are made compulsory or discretionary, they should not apply to belligerents already at war.

If an embargo were imposed on oil, Italy could retaliate with reprisals, and reprisals lead to war. Whatever the American people may think of Mussolini or of his form of government, they are friendly to the Italian people and wish to remain so.

It is persistently announced in Europe, particularly at Geneva, that the League of Nations will not place an embargo on oil until the United States has taken the initiative. Therefore, if such an embargo were imposed and war should ensue, the United States would be charged, and properly so, with causing the war.

The sanctions of the League are imposed by the stronger nations for their national interests; therefore, the United States cannot support the sanctions of the League and remain neutral.

The precedent established under this bill in the present conflict would involve us inevitably in future wars. Wars revolving about Germany and Japan now seem likely.

Stalin controls the foreign trade of Russia in peace and in war. The discretionary power to impose embargoes in this bill gives the President a like complete control of the foreign trade of the United States in time of war. This is an expansion of Russian dictatorship in this country.

The Constitution of the United States directs the Congress to make the laws and the President to execute them. The discretionary power which this bill gives to the President to impose embargoes violates this principle. It gives the President the right to make laws and even to make war. Both rights are the prerogatives of the Congress under the Constitution and should not be surrendered to the President.

This Government is an American Government, not a Russian government. It is a government of laws, and not one of men.

The discretionary power in the bill also gives unlimited opportunity for secret diplomacy. If the United States is to be involved in wars, let every move and every action be known to the American people. Let us not have every move and every action shrouded in secret and lying diplomacy, such secret and lying diplomacy as enveloped Washington before and during the last war.

PACIFIC EXPOSITION OF 1938 AT LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House Joint Resolution 164, authorizing the President to invite foreign countries to participate in the Pacific Exposition of 1938 at Los Angeles, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Joint Resolution 164, authorizing the President to invite foreign countries to participate in the Pacific Exposition of 1938 at Los Angeles, Calif.

Whereas there is to be held at Los Angeles, Calif., during the year 1938 an international exposition which has for its purpose the celebration of the completion of the Boulder Dam water and power project, and the depiction and exposition of the progress and accomplishments of the Pacific area of the United States in the fields of science, industry, business, transportation, and culture, as well as a means of inspiring more cordial relations among the nations of the world; and

Whereas said exposition by virtue of its scope and aims is deserving of the support and encouragement of the Government of the United States of America: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and respectfully requested by proclamation, or in such manner as he may deem proper, to invite all foreign countries and nations to such proposed exposition with a request that they participate therein.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SNELL. Reserving the right to object, I should like to have some explanation of this resolution and what it is proposed to do.

Mr. FORD of California. It simply proposes to ask foreign countries to participate in an exposition at Los Angeles for the celebration of the bringing in of the water and power from Boulder Dam.

Mr. SNELL. When is this to take place?

Mr. FORD of California. In 1938.

Mr. SNELL. As a matter of fact, of course, it has been the experience of this House that we first pass a resolution authorizing the President to invite foreign countries to participate, and then afterward there is a request for an appropriation because you say it is necessary. What is the program?

Mr. FORD of California. The program is that the city of Los Angeles is planning to erect a group of exposition buildings right in the heart of the city. Those exposition buildings will be permanent buildings. There is nothing in this resolution that asks for a dollar.

Mr. SNELL. I appreciate that, but every other one has been started exactly the same as this. I speak from experience as far as that goes.

Mr. FORD of California. I am answering the gentleman on the basis of the resolution.

Mr. SNELL. But that is the way they all start, and then the President must invite foreign countries to come here and make exhibits. In order to take care of the property we are committed to appropriate money to help carry on the exposition. That has been the experience in the past.

Mr. FORD of California. I am asking for this resolution on the basis of its merits. We do not have to and are not seeking to appropriate any money.

Mr. SNELL. But that has been the experience. I do not like to object. If that is going to be the policy of this House to keep on doing it, all right. I am not going to object all the time to you people on the Democratic side spending all the money in the world.

Mr. FORD of California. I appreciate the gentleman's feeling.

Mr. SNELL. I do not feel any different about it and I do not desire any compliments about it. I know it is wrong. The other Members know it is wrong, but I do not think I should take all the responsibility of stopping these appropriations.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the resolution (H. J. Res. 164) authorizing the President to invite foreign countries to participate in the Pacific Exposition of 1938 at Los Angeles, Calif.

The Clerk read the House joint resolution, as follows:

Whereas there is to be held at Los Angeles, Calif., during the year 1938 an international exposition which has for its purpose the celebration of the completion of the Boulder Dam water and power project and the depiction and exposition of the progress and accomplishments of the Pacific area of the United States in the fields of science, industry, business, transportation, and culture, as well as a means of inspiring more cordial relations among the nations of the world; and

Whereas said exposition by virtue of its scope and aims is deserving of the support and encouragement of the Government of the United States of America: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and respectfully requested by proclamation, or in such manner as he may deem proper, to invite all foreign countries and nations to such proposed exposition, with a request that they participate therein.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering a second. The Chair appointed Mr. Ford of California and Mr. TABER to act as tellers.

The House divided; and the tellers reported there were—ayes 63 and noes 31.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Evidently there is not a quorum present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 199, nays 106, answered "present" 1, not voting 124, as follows:

Foreign Policy Association at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, delivered Saturday, February 1, in Philadelphia.

Before I offer this, however, I should like to make a few remarks: The Foreign Policy Association is a national organization devoted to the study of what its name implies. It has units in a number of the fair-sized cities of America, and has an especially strong unit in the city of Philadelphia. The Foreign Policy Association has its representatives in Washington, D. C., and maintains a research staff which prepares factual reports on current world affairs, dealing with such economic and political issues as neutrality, currency stabilization, and conditions in various foreign countries.

The vice president of the association and its representative in Washington is William T. Stone, whom I believe to be one of the ablest students in the matter of foreign policy, peace, and neutrality in the United States. The association is not a "lobby" in the insidious sense, although it frequently makes representations to Congressmen; its principal function being to inform its own members and give Members of Congress unbiased data on any subject relating to foreign affairs. This association, to me, is an example of what a decent lobby ought to be. They do not try to put pressure and cram their own ideas down a Congressman, but attempt to give fair and useful information with which you can form your own conclusions.

In Philadelphia, where I made my address, the local chairman is Hon. Francis Biddle, who served in Washington as head of the National Labor Relations Board for nearly a year. Mr. Biddle is one of the ablest lawyers in the United States of America, and is the type of man that we need in Government service. With a solid and substantial education, and a conservative background, he dealt realistically with the problems of the Government, and has sense enough and liberalism enough to know that we face great changes. He is the type of man who would make an excellent attorney general for the United States; a man who could coordinate the many legal functions of the Government, and who has the brains and courage to do a first-class job. I merely mention this because he has been interested in foreign policy, has given much of his time to the welfare of the country, and is the type of man who should be encouraged to enter the public service. The address which I delivered on that occasion is as follows:

ADDRESS BEFORE FOREIGN POLICY ASSOCIATION, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1936, IN PHILADELPHIA

A week ago today I was visiting in New York City and was invited by Oswald Garrison Villard to attend the Saturday luncheon of the Foreign Policy Association, at the Astor Hotel. I was impressed by the fact that every person who spoke or asked questions was deadly in earnest against war. However, it seemed that nearly all persons who either asked questions or said anything trailed off into generalities or ended with vague conclusions. You see, I am a Congressman and must help prepare and pass upon actual legislation. I must put my thoughts into actions and deeds and upon paper and help make them a part of the law of the land. I cannot wrap myself in terms of nice ideology and consume from a year to 30 years in study. The Congress of the United States must act now, within the next 2 or 3 weeks; the bill will probably be on the calendar within a few days. My subject today is "Neutrality."

One of those who made comments at the meeting in New York was Walter Millis, the author of a most instructive book on the causes of the World War. I do not have his exact comments here, but in the Nation of January 29, 1936, he wrote:

"Perhaps the real point of the whole present neutrality debate is simply its indication of the complexity of the subject and our immense lack of concepts, public instruments, and popular understanding necessary to begin to deal adequately with it."

In the same article, concerning powers for the President, he said: "If the President is to have power to deal with such violent situations as are here anticipated, they must be real powers, and that means that they must be as powerful for ill as for good."

And then he said:

"The only final safeguard against them lies in the American people's ability to understand its own objectives and control its own governmental agencies for their attainment."

Right here I should like to say that two things are necessary to make a good foreign policy—one is a knowledge of conditions in foreign countries, the other is a knowledge of conditions in the United States. I know America, and conditions in America, and I know what our people are willing to do to keep out of war.

So I will proceed upon the thought that it is our duty to understand our own objectives and control our own governmental agencies. For in the majority of the studies I have seen the reasoning on neutrality has been on the basis of old concepts and old ideas of international law, and not upon new concepts of neutrality which some of us in Congress hope to establish.

OLD AND NEW CONCEPTS OF NEUTRALITY COMPARED

What then are our old and our new concepts, and what do we mean?

Well, the old idea of neutrality was that a neutral had a "right" to trade as much and for as high profits as it pleased with the belligerents; the neutral nation further had a "right" because of the theory of "freedom of the seas" to sell all the munitions possible to the belligerents, with which they could kill each other; to sell all the food, clothing, and supplies necessary for the soldiers to march to the front so they could get at each other. That is the old idea of neutrality. We tried it out in 1914 and we went to war with Germany. Now the new idea is that by embargoes and restrictions of our own making, by refraining from the use of our so-called neutral rights under international law, and by the exercise of self-restraint and sacrifice, that we thereby stay out of war. Under the latter concept we have as little to do with belligerents as possible, operating under national laws duly enacted, and not relying on the vague practices of nations which are supposed to determine international law. We are told by some scholars that if we just follow international law properly, and protect our "rights", that we can maintain peace. The only trouble about international law is that it has been the law of war—at least, it has never kept this Nation out of war. I favor neutrality according to the modern concept and of the mandatory type.

I say this for many reasons; but Charles Warren, who as Assistant Attorney General during the war had the job of enforcing our neutrality laws, and who ought to know something about the subject, has said:

"Hence the situation confronting the United States today is that not a single neutral right of trade asserted by us is recognized officially by Great Britain, France, Italy, or Germany to any greater extent than it was between August 1, 1914, and August 1917."

What are we going to do about this situation? Demand our old "rights", which nobody recognizes, and shout about our honor and defense of the flag? I hope not.

I hope we are intelligent enough to give up those rights which will only involve us. But I know that there are two points of view in this country—and in this audience. Some tell us that permanent peace is not possible by neutrality and that we cannot keep out that way. They really want us to support what they call the "collective system"—to join with the League of Nations against an aggressor; and they say this will prevent war. I hold another view. First, because I know that the American people today are not willing to join the League against aggressors. Second, because I don't believe that sanctions will really prevent war.

I am not an isolationist. I am not opposed to the whole idea of the League of Nations. But when we fought the war to end wars we hoped that the League of Nations would remove some of the causes which make for war. It was supposed to find ways in which nations could bring about changes by peaceful means. But it hasn't done very much along that line. It hasn't used article 19 of the League Covenant. Instead, the big powers in the League are preventing any change.

LEAGUE FOR STATUS QUO OF WORLD NEUTRALITY FOR KEEPING THE UNITED STATES OUT OF WAR

The League group, it seems to me, are standing for upholding the status quo and maintaining the territorial limits set out in the Treaty of Versailles. I think the main question is whether our mission is to maintain the territorial status quo of the world, or of ourselves keeping the United States out of war. It seems to me that cooperating in sanctions with the League of Nations will only involve us in this conflict between status quo and revision powers, between those who are expanding and those who are trying to hold by military force what they have.

You can call this conflict by any name you want, but I believe that the policy of the United States should be to keep out. Now, they say that neutrality is isolation. Perhaps it is; but the new neutrality that we are talking about is not imperialism and is not power politics, and it won't obstruct the League of Nations if it really wants peace and not merely preservation of the status quo.

As far as that's concerned, the Nye-Clark-Maverick group have not abandoned all hope of international agreements. In fact the Nye-Clark-Maverick bill in the very first section provides as follows:

"The provisions of this act are necessary to preserve and maintain peace between the United States and foreign nations and to safeguard the interests of the United States in the absence of international agreements defining the rights and duties of States in time of war, and pending the initiation and conclusion of such new agreements as will insure peace, justice, and equality among nations."

I believe that neutrality is the best policy for the United States at the present time, in the face of the present world situation. I have an idea that since the United States of America—our own country—is not entirely free from a charge of being wholly without self-interest in the past, neutrality, at least, may be a stepping stone toward peace and more concerted action in the future. As for international effect, it may be that our neutrality—a knowledge by the world that we will not put up men, money, and munitions—may have a deterrent effect.

Observing collective action from a practical viewpoint, the League of Nations and the World Court have been thoroughly defeated, not only in the Senate of the United States, but in the minds of the American people. The League of Nations has not prevented war. Recently the actions of the British in dealing with Italy and attempting to have us place sanctions on Italy, at the same time that they were trading with the belligerents—pious ideas expressed internationally, and with an attempt at the same time to split the swag of the Territory of Ethiopia—makes it utterly impossible for us to go into any League of Nations now.

NEUTRALITY IS NOT IMPERIALISM

We are met immediately by the statement that neutrality is a cold-blooded, un-Christian, selfish attitude, and that since civilization is about to be destroyed, we should prevent it. There is a great question as to whether we can save civilization. I doubt very much that the great imperialistic powers of the world are interested in saving civilization. They have their colonies to protect, their trade routes to defend, and their interests and investments in backward areas. They have never given any evidence that they put civilization above these things. If they, as separate powers, or combined as a League of Nations, call upon us to help save civilization, we ought first to ask them what they are willing to give up to save it.

Again I repeat that at the present moment there is no evidence that the imperialistic nations have changed one bit. From this it follows that the wars they engage in are primarily imperialistic wars. It follows also that when we get into such wars because of disputes about neutral rights, or because we want to save civilization, we are simply an innocent helper to an imperialistic and militaristic peace. We are not fighting for civilization when we fight alongside the great nations of the world today. We are fighting only to let everybody keep what they have grabbed—in other words, for the status quo by using American blood. Sometimes—as in the World War—we are fighting for our own aims, but indirectly for secret aims which are imperialistic and selfish. These facts were brought out by the Nye committee.

AMERICAN ATTITUDE IN WORLD WAR AND TODAY

In connection with these thoughts, let us discuss the attitude of the American people as of the World War and as of today. You will remember that when we went into the World War, and preceding it for many years, that we had an attitude of assumed moral superiority; we had a contempt for European institutions—and, of course, we were selling supplies to the Allies all the time. In the World War we were being treated with utmost disrespect by both of the belligerents—that is, the main belligerents, Germany and England—and our neutral rights were not respected by either belligerent, and we had sufficient cause to go to war with England, as we finally did with Germany. But while we were reaping profits from the sale of munitions and supplies, and while we had this high-toned attitude of not going into this conflict, we continued to make money. During this high tide of war boom and false prosperity, if I remember correctly, our attitude was one of superficiality and pretty much of hypocrisy.

But the situation is different now. For the American people, with something like 11 or 12 million unemployed, with not very good city governments in many places, with not the most efficient State governments in the world, and with a few things even yet to learn in the Federal Government, with also a memory of the losses of the last war in billions of dollars, and of human lives, have concluded it is best that we attend to our own business at home. And I don't mean that in the cruel spirit of entire isolation from the rest of the world. I mean it in the spirit that the American people themselves realize that we have something to learn of self-government. So our American attitude of neutrality is not the belligerent attitude of neutrality we had before the World War but one of simple, dignified willingness to protect our people first. Therefore, we have gained that much in the subject. We also learned from the World War that political and military isolation was not possible, unless we isolated ourselves economically. The truth is we started out with economic connections and were pushed into the war in a military and political way as a result.

NEUTRALITY BILLS COMPARED

Let us discuss the essentials of the various neutrality bills which have been presented to us.

The situation at the last session of Congress was somewhat as follows: The administration-Pittman-McReynolds group were then for giving unlimited discretionary powers to the President; the Nye-Clark-Maverick group were for mandatory neutrality, and granting the President no discretion whatever. We stood for the extreme type of embargoes and mandatory legislation. Since last session I find that most of us who are Members of Congress and who are primarily interested in keeping out of war have spent the recess and the first part of this session in discussing this situation. I think I can reasonably say that all groups agree on two points: First, as to the fundamental facts and major causes of war; and, second, as to certain conclusions. The administration group now seem to concur less in discretionary powers for the President and more for a definite type of neutrality; and the Nye-Clark-Maverick group have become a little bit more ready to be compromising and to enact legislation which is satisfactory to all. The situation, therefore, is somewhat better than it was last session, although the recent senatorial dog fight caused a ripple that has been very much embarrassing in addition to the powerful representations of the Italo-American groups who have protested the enactment of any bill.

Now, the essentials of the neutrality bills are as follows:

First, all neutrality legislation, of whatever kind or character, now seems to agree on the necessity for an outright embargo on munitions of war. Of all the important points involved in the legislation, there does not seem to be any objection to this provision.

The working of the McReynolds bill and the Nye-Clark-Maverick bill is somewhat different, and some of us believe the McReynolds bill is not clear enough and should be stated in more definite language.

As I understand it, the administration forces are not only willing to add the wording to include present belligerents but will insist upon adding it. There is no opposition to the adding of these words, except from certain Italo-American groups who have come down to Washington in large numbers to tell us that we should not apply embargoes against Italy.

WAR MATERIALS DEFINED AND EXPLAINED—DIFFERENCES IN BILLS

We then get into the matter of what we call "export of articles and materials used for war purposes." The Nye-Clark-Maverick statement as to the export of war materials is different. It appears that the purposes of both bills are the same; that is, not to increase the ordinary peacetime proportions of articles and thereby create a war boom, or more-than-peace-profit motive in the minds of commercial or financial groups, or special interests, and for acts which will lead us into war. However, it would appear that there are certain essential differences in the bill. The administration bill gives the President full discretion to decide when to apply any embargo, and also to fix the quota basis.

The Nye-Clark-Maverick bill makes the embargo mandatory on a basis of the normal peacetime trade over a 5-year period. Moreover, the Nye bill definitely says on page 5 that a provision of quota shall not "confer any right upon any belligerent state to the delivery * * * of any quota." It might be construed in some quarters that quota provisions would give an implication of a guaranty to deliver. This, however, is expressly denied in the Nye bill. In the bill the President is also authorized to call upon Congress for further restrictions in the matter of exportation if he believes it to be necessary.

A long technical discussion of this subject would only be tiresome, but the general idea is that the administration bill, although it is fairly written and to apply to both belligerents in case of the imposition of any "restrictions" is still of a discretionary nature, and this I oppose, along with a large group of Congressmen and Senators. The reason that I oppose this is that if we are to stick to neutrality and not to any concept of aggressor nations, or any concepts of morality in reference to foreign powers—if we are to be neutral, we should be neutral. And if we have too many ifs and ands and too many loopholes and changes, then the legislation is in effect both neutral and nonneutral, and for itself and against itself. It cannot be both national and international, provide for neutrality and also collective action. Therefore, instead of being legislation that will provide for its own enforcement, it will provide for its own defeat by virtue of its conflicting provisions.

I say this because the McReynolds bill in section 6, lines 22 and 23, has these words, after speaking of the equal application of embargoes:

"Unless the Congress, with the approval of the President, shall declare otherwise."

This is an unnecessary provision altogether, and does not give the bill any more force or effect, except to give unwarranted implications. Therefore, I should at least strike out the words "with the approval of the President", since Congress has to make its own acts and the veto powers of the President are known, anyway.

I think the whole provision ought to be cut out, because it is confusing.

RESERVATION OF INTERNATIONAL RIGHTS UNNECESSARY AND CONFUSING

The McReynolds bill also has the words, in section 9:

"Provided, That the United States reserves and reaffirms all rights under international law as it existed prior to August 1, 1914."

This is another confusing provision and means nothing, because nobody knows what international law was prior to August 1, 1914. Neutral rights are not recognized now and were not recognized after the war started August 1, 1914, and the clear implication in this provision is that we will stick to whatever we believe were neutral rights before August 1, 1914. But inasmuch as they are entirely vague and what rights we had were violated after that date, it is impossible to ascertain what our so-called rights really are. Therefore, this seems to be an indication that although we unquestionably allowed our rights to be violated during the World War, that we will insist on them in the future.

I desire to call attention to the report filed by Hon. SAM D. McREYNOLDS, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, on this same subject. It seems to me that the report by Mr. McREYNOLDS brings out just what I have stated. It is as follows:

"TRANSACTIONS WITH BELLIGERENTS"

"Sec. 9. This section provides that whenever the President shall find that the maintenance of peace between the United States and foreign nations, or the protection of the commercial interests of the United States and its nationals, or the security or neutrality of the United States would be promoted by requiring nationals of the United States to assume the risk of commercial transactions with the governments or nationals of belligerent countries (in other words, if there is danger of our country becoming involved in the risk of commercial transactions with governments or nationals of belligerent countries, or persons residing therein), the President shall so proclaim, and thereafter American nationals who engage in such transactions shall do so at their own risk. There is a provision in this section, however, which reads as follows:

"Provided, That the United States reserves and reaffirms all rights under international law as it existed prior to August 1, 1914."

"The reason of this date being placed in this amendment is from the fact that we had to a great extent a somewhat settled international law as to the freedom of the seas prior to August 1, 1914. During the World War the international law was violated by practically every nation engaged in that great war, and over the many protests of our Government to the Allied Powers, as well as the Central Powers before we became involved, and the war did not settle these questions. Even if one of our nationals shipped at his own risk, he ought to have the right given him under the international law, and while under this section we would not become involved in the war, yet if any of the shipments of our nationals were seized or confiscated during such war, they could at least rely on claims to be filed after the war that would give them a legal standing, and it would also give our Government the right to protest for any of our nationals during such war to such belligerents in case their rights under international law are being violated."

The Foreign Affairs Committee have done good and faithful work on the matter of neutrality, and I do not desire to be placed in the position of criticizing them severely. I am not a member of the committee, and do not wish to appear to find fault with gentlemen who have given so much time to so important a matter. However, I have, myself, given this serious attention, and when you get down to brass tacks the provision which has been offered seems to me just about as follows:

"Provided that the United States wants the cake of international law that got us into the World War, and wants to eat the cake of neutrality, without any sacrifice, and without learning what happened to our cake subsequent to August 1, 1914, and all the rules of cake eating having been broken, anyway."

This also means that I favor putting our own cake in our own pantry, and not selling it on credit for someone else to eat, and never getting paid for it, anyway.

Prior to August 1, 1914, was just prior to the beginning of the World War, and there are many nice books on international law written then. After that day we had the books, but no actual law, for our rights as a nation were constantly broken. So we put in a provision to give us the book rights we had at a certain time, and then we set our pot on to dream.

In any event, whatever our "rights" are, we should have them anyway; to put in this clause merely means to put in the law that we don't mean what we say about neutrality.

EXEMPTIONS IN ADMINISTRATION BILL WEAKEN NEUTRALITY

The administration bill in section 4 exempts food, clothing, and medical supplies from quotas. The Nye-Clark-Maverick bill does not. There may be an excuse for exempting medical supplies.

But once food is exempted, for the benefit of the wheat, corn, cattle, sheep, and other food producers, and clothing is exempted for the benefit of the clothing producers, and workers of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, the door stands wide open, and the engraved invitation is printed for all the oil people to ask exemptions, for the copper people, the steel people, and all the rest. We want no war boom in anything. Quotas providing against abnormal exports should be put on everything except, perhaps, medical supplies.

The administration bill, section 7 (b), allows American ships to carry contraband through war zones, unless the President, in his discretion, decides they had better not.

The Nye-Clark-Maverick bill makes it an offense for an American vessel to go through war zones with contraband.

The administration bill, in section 9, does not have the "cash and carry" provisions of the Maverick bill. It does not make shipments at the risk of foreign governments. It leaves them, mildly, at the risk of American citizens. That is still leaving us entangled with the risks that cargoes we sell will be torpedoed or bombed from the air. It is very important to have that risk completely carried by foreign governments or nationals, whereas, if foreigners buy here for cash and take all risk and responsibility we are not involved in the war at all.

The Maverick bill, section 7 (a), is mandatory and solely at the risk of the foreign government. They come and get it and if they lose it or have it torpedoed, we have no responsibility.

The administration bill does not make it unlawful for American citizens to involve the United States in war by traveling on the ships of foreign belligerents through war zones. It simply makes that travel at the risk of the individual citizen.

I believe that it should be unlawful for any American citizen to travel on belligerent ships through war zones. No matter how much we say "at your own risk", the lives and destinies of 130,000,000 people are involved when such travel is permitted.

FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS

There is also in nearly all of the bills before Congress a section which concerns financial transactions with the belligerent governments. Section 5 of the administration bill makes it unlawful for the sale of foreign securities of belligerents, and the same is in section 9 of the Nye-Clark-Maverick bill. However, it does appear that the provision in reference to temporary or usual commercial transactions is weaker in the administration bill than in the other bill. The administration bill provides that the President may make certain exceptions as to so-called ordinary commercial credits and short-time obligations in aid of legal transactions, and of a character customarily used for commercial business. The Nye bill provides that credit shall not be extended over 6 months, and prevents the extension to any belligerent state of any credits which might become long-term loans, and prevents excessive foreign balances in American banks. I believe that this provision covering loans and credits is rather strictly drawn and drawn pretty much in detail for the reason that it is necessary that if we start out by granting short-term credits and let them pile up too much, they will eventually either lead us into the war or lead us into the extension of so much credit in another form that it will be just about the same as securities; I think that was about the way of the World War, that we started out by granting credits sufficient to develop a war boom, and then had to face the collapse of the boom unless we opened the doors for loans to belligerents. So we opened those doors. One of the outstanding reasons for our entering the World War was the granting of loans and floating of securities which led to an increasingly greater war boom, which would have collapsed as soon as Allied credit went bad, or if they had lost the war. It happened, by accident, perhaps, that we entered the war 3 months before Allied credit went completely bad.

The proposal of the administration is better than it was when presented last August. I think that their step is far in advance of anything that's ever been done before. I believe that this is of extreme importance. When we start talking about trade, that is a thing more or less difficult to control, but the limitations on loans and credits through the Federal Reserve Board, and through the Securities and Exchange Commission can pretty well control these things. It seems to me that if in the World War we had not extended any credit, if we had not permitted the flotation of any securities, and had stayed out of it in that way; that is, if we had maintained greater economic isolation, as well as political and military isolation, and had taken instead the trade of the South American countries and the countries which had been trading with England and European countries, that the probabilities are that we may never have gotten into the war, or at least, would not have been forced into it. In any event, we do know that we advanced, under the spur of profits, large amounts of money or credit in terms of money for goods, and having to do so we went to war to protect the rights of one foreign belligerent to arm its munition ships carrying munitions from America from submarine attack, although our own Secretary of State thought that these munition ships had no right to be armed. It seems to me if we do not repeat this in the future, that we may be saved from the results of it.

Both bills have prohibitions as to American vessels carrying arms, various statements of risk in order to keep us out of trouble, travel by American nationals on belligerent vessels, a prohibition of the use of submarines from entering American waters, and the establishment of a munitions-control board, with power to license exports in peacetime as well as wartime.

I desire here to make certain specific references to the matter of neutrality, in which objections have been made.

POSITION OF AMERICANS OF ITALIAN DESCENT

Let us first take Americans of Italian extraction. This is indeed a difficult situation to discuss, and I wish to state it without any emotional basis, and without any unfairness. In the World War, Americans of German extraction were as patriotic as any other Americans. For Americans of German extraction then, like Americans of Italian extraction now, to protest their Americanism is unnecessary. I am already convinced of this. The hounding of Germans during the World War and for some time thereafter, and use of the term "hyphenated" Americans was unjust; however, in reference to those of Italian extraction now, I have this to say:

Many of these who claim to lead millions of Italians, some of them who claim to control "one, two, three, four, or five million votes", others who speak before congressional committees, with the obvious desire to put pressure on Congress asking preferential treatment for Italy, are doing themselves, their own people, and the cause of peace a disservice.

Many of these gentlemen insist that the present belligerents be exempted from embargoes under American neutrality. I see no reason for this. Suppose Abyssinia should finally borrow money and we should begin heavy selling to Abyssinia of various materials. Would not Italy, like Germany, sink our ships? Would not then any Italian-American who had taken active part in claiming preferential treatment for Italy find himself in an embarrassing position?

I fear these people will subject Americans of Italian extraction to humiliation and embarrassment. No person, by virtue of his racial background, has any more right to speak than any others. I recognize the background that the Italian-Americans have of culture, of the great history of Italy—but, by virtue of their having an Italian background, I do not recognize their right to dictate to Congress a course which may lead their country and mine into war, or which would be favorable to Italy as against any other power. Hence, we should recognize all Americans from the same viewpoint. Some Italian-Americans, in speaking of neutrality, say that the United States of America would thereby be working with the League of Nations in the matter of sanctions. I desire it plainly understood that when we adopt neutrality, we are adopting a national policy to protect the United States as far as that is possible by legislation.

I frankly state that no racial groups, no matter how great, should be recognized as such. I am not concerned with fascism or communism in foreign countries. It is none of my business, and neither is it the business of any other American citizen, whatever his racial background. I want it understood that this is not a jingo statement; not a statement intended to embarrass any person of another racial background. It is merely that, as Americans, we must be careful not to let the prejudices of racial background enter into our concepts of law—and the Americans of Italian extraction being patriotic, will of course not be misled.

ATTITUDES OF COMMERCIAL CLASSES

Now, to the second point, in reference to the objections of certain commercial classes. I have been told in letters and I have heard in speeches that the policy of neutrality would be ruinous to southern agriculture and industry. I take southern agriculture and industry because I am from the South, and because my State is the greatest cotton and oil area in the entire world. The people of Texas do not want to make money at the expense of human lives, and neither do any other people. The oil business today, from the exercise of proration, is at a very low ebb. Some wells capable of producing 30,000 barrels a day are cut down to 30 barrels a day. It would be much more profitable if these oil wells could produce a great deal more oil. But I am frank to say that if the normal peacetime oil sales are permitted—that is, if the proration is continued—that I can see no reason for complaint of these people in the oil business. The same is true of the cotton business. At the Foreign Policy Association meeting the other day in New York City a man from a port city stopped me and said that such a policy would ruin the "cotton industry" in the South—he, of course, meant cotton speculators, not farmers. I asked him if he wanted an increase to be sold to the belligerent powers, and he said, of course, that he wanted that; that what concern was it of ours what others did about war? That, of course, means that this man had learned nothing from the World War. He was a cotton speculator preceding the World War and saw us go into the war on account of commercial transactions; he sees the European powers owe us money, which will never be paid—he saw all the faults of that, and yet, he has learned nothing by it, and wants to do it over again. Take the cotton farmers—but especially the wheat farmers of the Northwest.

The wheat farmers put in hundreds of thousands of new acres of land, and now, this land which was temporarily used for war supplies and sale of wheat is being blown and eroded away. So, when we talk about the ruinous effect of neutrality on agriculture, I cannot see it at all, because if we put an embargo on munitions, and then put the usual agricultural products on the basis of a quota system, where the people can sell as much as they did before and no more, there is no reason for complaint either by the people at home or those abroad.

Everyone is certain, I think, that the question of what kind of foreign policy the United States shall have is the most important that has faced this country in many, many years. The real issue we are facing in Congress now is not whether the United States shall support the collective system or follow a policy of isolation—the real issue at the present moment in Washington is whether the United States should try to stand on its old traditional "neutral rights", or whether it is going to give up some of those rights along the lines which we are suggesting in the new neutrality legislation.

Suppose we go back to the old neutrality and insist upon our rights to trade in all the war materials, to provide the instruments of human destruction to belligerent nations. Is that going to help peace? Is that going to help international cooperation? It is not. On the other hand, if we can succeed in getting the new kind of neutrality, if we are willing to pay the price of it, then we will have made an important contribution to peace and lessened the danger of America's involvement in war.

EXPOSITION CELEBRATION 1938, LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. FORD of California. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks on the Puerto Rican bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMBETH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. FORD of California. I yield.

Mr. LAMBETH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks made today during the consideration of the Consent Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I refuse to yield further.

House Joint Resolution 164 provides merely that the President be authorized to invite foreign countries to participate in an exposition to be held in Los Angeles in 1938 in celebration of the bringing in to that city of water and power from Boulder Dam. I am sure every Member of this House is familiar with this gigantic engineering enterprise which has been surpassed by only one or two other engineering feats in the history of the world. We in Los Angeles feel justified in requesting that the nations of the world be asked to participate, because it is designed to show the other nations just what a magnificent drama of development has taken place in the great Southwest. The bringing in of a vast stream of water from the Colorado River and the development of a billion kilowatts of electrical energy will transform this whole Southwest section into a great industrial and commercial empire.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FORD of California. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. In 1938 you will have completed 2 years of the San Diego Exposition.

Mr. FORD of California. That is correct.

Mr. SNELL. San Francisco held an exposition a few years ago and a resolution is pending for another exposition in San Francisco, is there not?

Mr. FORD of California. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. This makes four expositions for California within a short space of time.

Mr. FORD of California. The gentleman from New York calls attention to the fact there are four expositions projected out in California. I should like to know what other section of the country has enjoyed the rapid, vast, and important development that has taken place in this southwest section? We could hold an exposition every week and would be warranted in doing it by the development that has taken place.

Mr. MAAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of California. I yield.

Mr. MAAS. Does this resolution come to the House with the endorsement of the administration, and is it in conformity with the financial program of the President?

Mr. FORD of California. What does the gentleman mean by that?

Mr. MAAS. Has it been approved by the administration?

Mr. FORD of California. No; I have not asked the administration to approve anything. Why should I?

Mr. MAAS. Bills usually go to a department. I assume this bill went to the State Department. Is there a report on the bill?

Mr. FORD of California. It is not necessary. This bill went to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and was reported out by that committee a year ago.

Mr. BURNHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of California. I yield.

Mr. BURNHAM. This resolution does not call for any appropriation, does it?

Mr. FORD of California. It calls for no appropriation of any kind.

Mr. BURNHAM. It will not cost the Government anything?

Mr. FORD of California. No.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of California. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Can the gentleman tell us where we are going to get the money to finance this fair?

Mr. FORD of California. We are not going to get it from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. When you get money from the Federal Government, and that is the only place you will get it, one-tenth of it comes from Pennsylvania, and these expenditures have just about wrecked Pennsylvania and pretty nearly every State in the North. We have got to stop contributing to these things. That is the answer.

Mr. FORD of California. Let me tell something about this exposition, Mr. Speaker. We are going to build a set of permanent buildings in the city of Los Angeles to hold the exhibits which will be sent by the entire southwestern section of the country. It will be there the year around, it will be there from now on. It is not just a temporary thing we have in contemplation, but a permanent exposition on the order of the annual exposition in Toronto, Canada. Los Angeles has not asked, and we are not now asking, for any money.

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of California. I yield.

Mr. MILLARD. Does the gentleman want the House to believe that he is not going to ask for something later?

Mr. FORD of California. I have made my statement in reference to that, and it stands.

Mr. BLOOM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of California. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BLOOM. The report on this bill states that this exposition will be participated in by the neighboring States of Nevada, Utah, Arizona, and New Mexico.

Mr. FORD of California. Yes.

Mr. BLOOM. So it is not a California exposition exclusively?

Mr. FORD of California. No.

Mr. BLOOM. It is an exposition which will be participated in by all Southwestern States?

Mr. FORD of California. Yes. It is for the purpose of showing to the country and to the world just what that great section out there has in the way of natural resources.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of California. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. UMSTEAD. The gentleman stated he would not ask for an appropriation. Does he expect to come in later under this authorization and ask for an appropriation?

Mr. FORD of California. I do not.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Does the gentleman expect that to be done?

Mr. FORD of California. I do not know. I am not responsible for anybody else. I am telling the gentleman I do not expect to.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Could the purpose of this resolution be carried out without additional funds?

Mr. FORD of California. What funds?

Mr. UMSTEAD. Without a subsequent appropriation by the Congress?

Mr. FORD of California. Of course it could.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Could the purpose of this resolution be carried out without the appropriation of funds?

Mr. FORD of California. It could.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. If a Member now votes for this particular bill, does the gentleman feel that Member is under obligation to vote for an appropriation later on?

Mr. FORD of California. I do not know anything about an appropriation. I am not asking any obligations in connection with this measure.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I will vote for this bill, but I shall vote against any appropriation for same, even to the extent of $50.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MAAS].

Mr. MAAS. Mr. Speaker, the inference is that this resolution will not involve any money. It is quite true the resolution in and of itself does not call for an authorization nor an appropriation, but we certainly do not propose to invite foreign governments over here and then not spend money entertaining them. If we expect to do that it would be better not to invite them at all. As a matter of fact, we are going to spend money to entertain them, if we do bring them over here, and we ought to be hospitable if they come as our guests.

I should like to see this exposition a success, but I am going to vote against this bill—first, because its success is not dependent on foreign guests, and, second, because the only time you ever put the brakes on spending money is when it comes to the veterans. Is this going to increase the taxes? Are we going to have to have a new source of taxes to pay for this exposition? You can find more ways to spend money than you can to raise it; in fact, you have hired a "brain trust" to go out and find new ways to spend money. But when it comes to the veterans we have to raise taxes, we are told, if we are to do anything for the veterans at all.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAAS. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I was going to suggest that these foreign governments might send their payments on war debts over with their representatives.

Mr. MAAS. I think that is a good idea. We might amend this bill and invite them on condition that only those countries that paid their debts could come over. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I think the time has come when we had better think a little more about our own affairs at home. Let us have these expositions among ourselves. I am going to vote against any more of these appropriations so long as the attitude prevails that you cannot find money to take care of the veterans.

The gentleman from California said that this bill did not have to go to any department. As a matter of fact it has the approval of the administration, and I quote from the report of the Foreign Affairs Committee:

Your committee has received information from the Department of State that no objection is offered to the passage of the resolution.

If there is no objection, that means approval.

I think the veterans themselves will feel very keenly the fact that the same administration that says it has no money to pay their bonus, no money to take care of their adjusted war pay, can spend several hundred thousand dollars to entertain representatives of foreign governments for whom they, the veterans, fought, and which countries will not even pay the interest on their debts. If these foreign governments would pay the interest on their debts, we would have plenty of money to take care of the veterans' bonus.

Mr. SCOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAAS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. SCOTT. The gentleman does not for a minute mean that we are going to have to stop all legislation until we pass all the veterans' legislation? Does he mean we cannot pass anything until we have done everything the veterans want?

Mr. MAAS. I mean spending money on foreign governments for entertainment. We should not do that until we take care of our own people.

Mr. FORD of California. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAAS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. FORD of California. The gentleman voted in favor of something like $13,000,000 for the Minnesota fire claims that had been paid before?

Mr. MAAS. Oh, they had not been paid before. The gentleman is misinformed. Under a previous Democratic administration these people were forced figuratively at the point of a gun to take less than 50 percent of the value of their property by the Government's own appraisals. I am not using my figures at all, but the Government's own figures.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. And that was during a Republican administration?

Mr. MAAS. No.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Under what administration was it?

Mr. MAAS. Under the administration of President Wilson.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. What years?

Mr. MAAS. The fire happened in 1918.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. But when were the guns put on these people?

Mr. FORD of California. In 1921.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAAS. I yield to my colleague from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. The first settlement of these fire claims was forced by the Railroad Administration appointed by President Wilson.

Mr. MAAS. Absolutely.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL].

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate very well the fact it is useless for anyone at this time to oppose any reckless expenditure. I appreciate the fact that this is an era of unprecedented spending, and as far as I know, it has never been equalled in the history of the American Congress.

Now, with a proposition from your own President here to raise $2,500,000,000 of extra taxes, and he says it is up to you to do it, it would seem to me you would have just a little bit of responsibility about the spending of this money. This is the second time this afternoon we have had a suspension for the purpose of spending more money.

Let us now get to the real history of these expositions. I will not say everyone but nearly everyone I can remember has always come in here, first, with an authorization, and the man who presented the authorization has always said, "This does not require any money", but a little later, after a year or so, someone from his locality or State, a different man, presents a resolution calling for a certain amount of appropriation and the argument is always used, mind you, this is the argument that is always used, "The Federal Government has gone on record as approving this exposition, it has invited foreign countries to participate, and it would not be fair to them if we did not participate ourselves."

This is the situation, and you might just as well have put the appropriation in the original resolution, because it is absolutely sure to come, and when you consider we have just extended for another year the appropriation to take care of San Diego, Calif., providing for the same facilities they have there for their exposition, which will last 2 years, with one on deck for San Francisco, although we had one at San Francisco only a few years ago, it really is going too far.

I do not suppose it will have any effect, but, for one, I am standing for what I think is right, and I think, to a certain extent, we should guard the expenditure of the taxpayers' money.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. McFARLANE].

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I am heartily in favor of this resolution. Since hearing the remarks of our Republican friends, I am more convinced than ever that the real intent of this resolution is correct. We might as well be frank and perfectly candid about this proposition. There is not any use in trying to mislead anyone. If this resolution is passed it will authorize the President to invite these foreign countries and others interested to a celebration of the completion of the Boulder Dam project. This ought to be done. It is a worthy and worth-while undertaking.

This is a celebration of a power project that is going to mean much to the country and to the area involved. This section of the country has gone along with us in the other parts of the program, and we ought to go along with them. Of course, our Republican friends cannot see going along at all on any proposition, but I think this is a worth-while project, and it ought to receive the support of everybody on this side of the aisle.

The President ought to be authorized to invite all of these foreign countries over here to this celebration. It is a celebration that will be worth while in helping the under dog, the forgotten man, the fellow who needs it. It is going to bring cheaper power to him, give more power to the people who need power—irrigation and reclamation—and more consideration to the people who have been forgotten and absolutely overlooked by the Republican administration throughout its entire history. I hope the Democratic side of the aisle will will go down the line and vote for this proposition.

Mr. MAAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield.

Mr. MAAS. Who do you mean should go along with whom? [Laughter.]

Mr. McFARLANE. I mean that the gentlemen on this side of the aisle, whom you could not understand at all, ought to go along with this proposition.

Mr. MAAS. I admit that.

Mr. McFARLANE. Of course, the power issue is involved in this, and the Power Trust will be very strong in opposing it.

Mr. MAAS. I thought you meant the foreign governments have gone along with us in spending our money.

Mr. McFARLANE. Oh, no; I do not believe you thought any such thing. In conclusion, let me urge you all to vote for this measure. The Boulder Dam is a great engineering accomplishment, and the nations of the world ought to be invited to attend this big celebration. They ought to be allowed to see how much real progress we have made under this administration on projects of this kind driving toward the accomplishments of cheaper power, better and safer farming conditions for the country, and adequate water supply for the people of that section of the Nation.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR].

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, the only reason I speak for this exposition is because there have been expositions previously, and there will be more to come.

There is no great economy in opposing these expositions, even if there is no money in the present resolution. Back under a Republican administration we gave some millions to Philadelphia. I think about $3,000,000. I do not think the exposition was ever completed.

This exposition is for Los Angeles. There is another in San Francisco, for which the gentleman from California [Mr. McGROARTY] has introduced a resolution, and shortly there will be one for New York. They do not cost the Government one penny. I am not so foolish as to say there will not be an appropriation for this exposition. There should be. When the Government gets through, with the gate admissions, the concessions, the commemorative stamps issued by the Post Office Department, the Government will make more than it expends. That will be the case in Los Angeles, San Francisco, and New York. [Applause.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS].

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I should like to make this observation, and that is that in spending this money it is not going to be a small sum. If anybody votes for this bill, they must do it not with the idea that it is going to be any small sum like $10,000. He knows that it will be a large sum, as we have appropriated in the past. I remember the exposition at Philadelphia, and we had a big fight on it. I do not know of any of these fairs that have paid the expenses except the one at Chicago. That, I understand, paid for itself. That was a great exposition, and it was in a great place. This will cost a million dollars, perhaps $2,000,000.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN].

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. McFARLANE] said that we never go along with the President. He is not quite right about that. Just the other day the President said something about levying more taxes. I do not know how all the gentlemen on this side feel about it, but for one I am willing to pay as we go and impose the necessary taxes now. New taxes must be levied some time, and if we pay as we spend the extravagance will end. We passed the bonus legislation. We always get together when it is a matter of appropriation that is easy. We will, I think, pass the Frazier-Lemke bill and that means three billion dollars more. In a little caucus the other day, on Saturday morning, evidently called for the purpose of finding ways and means to pay the bonus, those there were somewhat like the boy who had a cat by the tail but did not know what to do with it. We passed the bonus, but now there is difficulty in getting the money. Some one suggested we issue some new money against the gold now on hand, and then in the Sunday morning papers we learn that we do not have that gold, that it is all tied up, all earmarked, so we cannot do that. Spending must stop some time. Now is as good a time as any. This resolution means more money, and as the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] will say, "Where are you going to get the money?" Are you going to get it out of that gold fund, or just how will you get it? We will go along with the President—I will change that and say the people in my district will be glad to have the Government do as they do at home, and that is "pay as you go." Pay as you spend. We will go one step farther. If there is a message up there on the desk now asking for the repeal of the cotton act and the tobacco act and the potato act, I rather suspect that this side will go along with that also.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes.

Mr. KVALE. When the gentleman speaks about the little boy having a cat by the tail—

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, two cats by the tail, the bonus bill and the Frazier-Lemke bill.

Mr. KVALE. And I say to the gentleman that if we get a few more names to that petition up there we will have the Rules Committee by the tail.

Mr. HOFFMAN. And then, as Mr. RICH says, "Where are you going to get the money?" How will you find the funds to pay, to make good the appropriations? Only through new printing-press greenbacks or higher taxes—new taxes. Have you on that side the courage to follow the President on this sound suggestion—that we begin to think of pay day? Regrettable he did not think of that when he asked and received the $4,880,000,000. We should stop spending now, if not before.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. TABER. I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, where are you going to get the money? That may seem like a foolish question, but it is not. I have nothing against Los Angeles or any of the other California towns that want to have a fair; but I tell you that within the last 5 or 6 years—3 years of a Republican administration and 3 years of a Democratic administration—if you look at the statements from the Treasury Department, you will wonder where we are going. You are putting this country in a position where we are building on sand. We are putting ourselves in a position where we are going to lead to the greatest fall the Nation has ever seen. You may not think about this expenditure of vast sums, but it seems to be the proper political thing to do if you want to come back to Washington.

You ought to have greater respect for your country than to sink it into the depths of financial ruin. This is a very, very serious thing. Where are you going to get the money is a slogan that each of you ought to take to heart. Why are the people leaving the Treasury Department? What is the reason that Mr. Awalt resigned this last week, and what is the reason the other strong men are going out? It is because of fear in their own minds they are not going to be able to handle the situation. And yet you men come around here and vote for any expenditure of funds; but when it comes to doing what your President requests of you, to vote for taxes, you will be like a bunch of sheep—you will all run away. You will not stand up and back him. You will do as you did with the bonus vote last week. You will all run away from him. The time is coming, and it is coming very soon, when he is going to say, "I want you to raise money"; and when that time comes, what are you going to do? Are you going to desert him? It is the most serious time in the history of this Nation. I tell you it is time for you to think. Let us be sensible about this right now. If you permit this bill to go through, you know it will require additional funds. With an already overburdened Treasury and with an overburdened people, you must give consideration to the fact of whether you are going to tax them or put the charge on future generations.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BLOOM].

Mr. BLOOM. I should like to bring to the attention of the Members that, unless this resolution is passed, it will be impossible for the State of California to invite foreign nations to participate in this exposition. There is only one way by which a foreign nation can be asked to participate in any celebration that is held in the United States, and that is through the State Department. Unless the invitation does come from the State Department, no other department of the Government, whether local or State or anything else, has a right to invite a foreign nation to participate. So it is the usual procedure to first ask the nations of the world to participate. As far as the expenditure of money is concerned, of course this resolution calls for no expenditure of any kind. But it is just the reverse, because, if you invite foreign nations to participate in any exposition that occurs in this country, they come here and spend their money. They erect buildings and will pay the expense of installing their exhibits, so it is just the reverse. The United States does not have to spend one cent for foreign participation in any exposition.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. It is my information that Uncle Sam will have $100,000,000 invested in Boulder Dam by the time the water is ready to be turned on. Now, as I understand, it is proposed to spend a couple of million dollars to celebrate the flow of the $100,000,000.

Mr. BLOOM. If I am not mistaken, the gentleman from Minnesota voted for that at the time, and he should have thought of it then.

Mr. KNUTSON. I did, but I do not think we ought to celebrate a debauch.

Mr. BLOOM. Then the gentleman should say "I do think" instead of "I do not think."

Mr. COLDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. COLDEN. Does not the gentleman believe it would be very fine for the United States to invite Mexico, the Central American Republics, and the South American countries to participate in this exposition?

Mr. BLOOM. No one can invite any foreign country to participate, except through the State Department. That is what this resolution provides. It does nothing else except authorize the President of the United States, through the proper channels, to invite foreign governments to participate. That is all it does.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be delighted to yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. One of the speakers said there would be a later authorization for entertainment. There is nothing in this resolution whatever for entertainment?

Mr. BLOOM. No; nothing of the kind. May I say this: When an appropriation is made for any exposition in this country, that appropriation is made for the exhibits of the Government departments. That money does not go to the exposition company for its own use. It is for the erection of a building to exhibit the different things pertaining to the Government of the United States. It has nothing to do with the local exposition at all.

Mr. BACON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. BACON. As far as I can make out, we are going to have an international exposition at Los Angeles, San Francisco, and New York, all at approximately the same time. If we invite the nations to participate in all three of those expositions within a period of a year and a half or 2 years, they probably will decline all of the invitations.

Mr. BLOOM. I do not agree with the distinguished gentleman from New York, for this reason: If they have their exhibits in this country, whether it be at Los Angeles or San Francisco or New York, they will then transfer their exhibits from one city to the other. I think they will be more likely to exhibit when they can bring their exhibits here at one cost or one expense, and then be able to transfer them from one city to the other. They would be more likely to take advantage of that, instead of not coming here to exhibit at all.

Mr. BACON. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. BLOOM. I yield.

Mr. BACON. Does not the gentleman think it would have been more appropriate to invite the nations of the world to celebrate the repeal of prohibition rather than the bringing of water into Los Angeles? [Laughter.]

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. What does the gentleman think of the proposition of inviting a foreign government to pay its own expenses of participating in this exposition, and we will credit them on account of what they owe us? Let them advance the money.

Mr. BLOOM. That question cannot be answered, of course. Furthermore, if the gentleman would only remember that you cannot get these people to continue to do business with you if you always keep on insulting them. I think this question had better be stricken from the Record, because it does not belong in these proceedings. If we are going to invite them, let us do so in the right way, without first making them think there is an insult attached to the invitation.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. The last exhibits of a foreign country I saw at a fair were nothing more than merchandise-vending institutions, foreign countries coming to this country to sell merchandise and make a little money. I do not think this is the right attitude. I think they should be informed now that if they want to make exhibits, they should let them be exhibits and not make them for the purpose of dragging away a few dimes and nickels.

Mr. BLOOM. I could answer the gentleman's question, but I do not think I better.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I do not think the gentleman can.

Mr. BLOOM. It may astonish the gentleman, but I can.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I think there has been enough demonstration here of the fact that this is an overstepping of bounds in the spending of money and that the Members will not vote for this resolution. This means, practically, participation in and financial support by the Federal Government in a celebration on the west coast. I am perfectly willing that occasionally any part of the country should have an exposition with a reasonable expenditure by the Federal Government. But every time such a resolution as this has been adopted it has been followed by a large expenditure of money, and this money has not come back to the Treasury. This resolution will be followed up by another resolution appropriating money, and the money will be appropriated, because we cannot stop a thing like this unless we stop it at the source and stop the first resolution. This is where the camel gets his nose under the tent. If the camel is not to get his nose under the tent we must defeat this resolution right here.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Shall the rules be suspended and the House joint resolution be passed?

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SNELL) there were—ayes 73, noes 65.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is not a quorum present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant-at-Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 147, nays 119, not voting 164, as follows:

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, on last Friday I was present in the Chamber waiting a roll-call vote. Before my name was reached I was called to the other end of the Avenue on official business for constituents and did not return in time to answer the roll call. I desire simply to make this statement in explanation of my inability to vote.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES—REPEAL OF CERTAIN ACTS

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Agriculture:

To the Congress:

I recommend to the Congress the prompt repeal of the act of April 21, 1934, as amended, known as the "Bankhead Cotton Act"; of the act of June 28, 1934, as amended, known as the "Kerr-Smith Tobacco Act"; and of title II of the act of August 24, 1935, known as the "Potato Act of 1935." This recommendation is made because of the termination of the programs of agricultural production adjustment under the act of May 12, 1933, as amended, known as the "Agricultural Adjustment Act", to which the three acts mentioned were auxiliary.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 3, 1936.

CLAIM OF HOMER BRETT, AMERICAN CONSUL AT ROTTERDAM, NETHERLANDS

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following further message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims:

To the Congress of the United States:

I enclose herewith a report which the Secretary of State has addressed to me in regard to a claim of Homer Brett, Esq., American consul at Rotterdam, Netherlands, for the sum of $116.58, such sum representing the unrecovered amount stolen when, on the night of September 27, 1935, burglars entered the Consulate with a false key to the front door and with a powerful tool cut open the back of the safe and abstracted therefrom the iron cash box containing such money.

In view of the fact that the funds were in a locked iron cash box enclosed in a safe provided by the Government, it is apparent that no negligence can properly be imputed to Consul Brett, and since he made good the loss so occasioned, I recommend that an appropriation in the amount suggested by the Secretary of State be authorized in order to relieve this officer of the Government of the burden such loss has occasioned.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 3, 1936.

(Enclosures: Report of Secretary of State, with enclosures.)

ANNUAL REPORT OF ASSISTANT DIRECTOR GENERAL OF RAILROADS FOR 1935 (H. DOC. NO. 403)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following further message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying report, referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and ordered printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress the annual report of the Assistant Director General of Railroads for the calendar year 1935.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 3, 1936.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include at this point a resolution adopted by the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation commending the work of Dr. Mead.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

The resolution referred to is as follows:

The following resolution was adopted at a special meeting of the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation, House of Representatives, on January 28, 1936:

In the passing of Dr. Elwood Mead, Commissioner of Reclamation, this committee lost a faithful and conscientious associate in reclamation endeavors. His broad experience, good judgment, and wise counsel proved valuable to the committee in its deliberations. Mindful of his long association with the problems of reclamation, and his constructive work on behalf of irrigation, the members gratefully record its appreciation of him by adopting the following: Be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the House Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation, attest to the inspiration and support brought to its deliberations by Commissioner Elwood Mead; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be recorded in the minutes of the committee, and that a copy be sent to Dr. Mead's family as a testimonial of our sincere appreciation of his usefulness, not only as an official of the Government, but also as a friend and adviser.

HENRY E. STUBBS, Chairman.

JUNIOR AIR RESERVE, REVISED NAME, "AIR RESERVE TRAINING CORPS"

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on H. R. 10662, a bill to set up the air reserve training corps, commonly known as the Junior Air Corps, and to include therein brief extracts from a number of letters which I have received commendatory of that proposal.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I respectfully call attention to H. R. 10662, which I am appending hereto as a part of my remarks for the information of the Congress and the country. The purpose of this bill is to provide a reservoir of young men instructed in the ground school work of flying, called aerodynamics, and involving the mechanics of aircraft construction and repair, and also with ability to fly aircraft, so that the young men in this reservoir, which in a few years should number perhaps 20,000 or 30,000, may be called into the service and quickly trained into military pilots for the defense of the Nation.

THE PLAN WILL EMPLOY THE VOLUNTEER SPIRIT

The basic idea of this plan is to utilize for the Government the enthusiasm which all boys and young men now feel and manifest toward aviation. The records of the Department of Commerce, in the Bureau of Air Commerce, show that approximately 24,000 student pilot permits or licenses are outstanding. These young men are studying aviation and learning to fly at their own expense, and some of them are taking training in schools and colleges devoted exclusively to instruction in the principles and practices of aviation. If we can organize and direct this enthusiasm of young men for aviation, and standardize their training, and also classify them as to their aptitude and proficiency, it will save the Government vast sums of money that might be expended in trying to train perfectly raw and green recruits, and will also save weeks, if not months, of valuable time.

Mr. Speaker, while it is true that we are short on aircraft for the Army and the Navy, and more especially are we short on aircraft necessary for the training of the Organized Air Reserves and for the National Guard, yet we are also short on flying personnel necessary to meet a major emergency. It is true that we have in the Air Corps about 1,300 officers and probably 1,200 of them are now flying officers, yet many of them are beyond the age for effective combat duty in time of war, and most of them would have to be employed in instruction and in administration and in high command in the event of an emergency. It is also true that we have approximately 3,000 Air Reserve officers, but only about 1,400 of them are sufficiently up-to-date in their training to be able to function as combat pilots. It also appears that about one-third of this 1,400 are war-time pilots and must very soon pass out of the picture completely as combat pilots. One-third of the 1,400 are graduates of the Air Corps training center at San Antonio, Tex., and will be for 10 or 15 years available for combat duty, but must be constantly trained. The remaining third of this 1,400 officers have been commissioned directly from civil life as the result of the training which they received in schools and colleges teaching aviation. The presumption is that most of this remaining one-third are young men and will for several years be available for an emergency.

AIR FORCE MUST BE STRONGEST AT OUTBREAK OF WAR

But, Mr. Speaker, since air power is the first line of defense, and since we wish to insure as nearly as possible victory in the initial stages of any assault upon us, we must strengthen our air defense in both matériel equipment and in flying personnel so that in order to beat down any attack by air we may feel free to expend our personnel even in desperate resistance, realizing that we can quickly, if not instantly, replace them from our Reserves and from our second line of Reserves. For illustration, the 1,200 Regular Army pilots, being nearly all devoted to administrative and instructional work, can be augmented at the initial stages of war by approximately 1,000 Reserve officers able to function in combat. This will undoubtedly mean less than 2,000 thoroughly trained pilots, and I think we all have agreed that 3,000 airplanes should be our 5-year objective. I think, therefore, we should always have at least 3,000 young and well-trained pilots in both the Regular Army and in the Reserves. We should have from 20,000 to 30,000 young men whose qualifications are already ascertained, whose names and addresses are well known, who are thoroughly familiar with aircraft, its construction and repair, and who have already had solo experience ranging from 50 hours to 400 hours.

Mr. Speaker, some may think that these figures are extravagant. We do not hesitate to speak of mobilizing an army of 1,000,000 or 2,000,000 men. Thirty thousand is but an infinitesimal fraction of 2,000,000. The initial stages of air combat will be savagely fierce. Each side will strive fiercely and furiously for the mastery. This will result in the attrition of planes and pilots in large numbers. In such an emergency we can put all existing aircraft factories at work on 24-hour duty, enlarge them if necessary, triple and quadruple their working forces, and turn out in them all scores of planes a day. It would not be wise to construct in advance of war the very large number of planes we would probably need. As we hope war will be long deferred, the planes themselves would probably be obsolete and useless. But the human element must also not be neglected; probably we can build planes faster than we can train green and inexperienced youngsters into combat pilots. It is the part of prudence during these years of peace to ascertain through this Air Reserve Training Corps which of our young men have the knowledge and experience necessary to be quickly whipped into combat pilots. My plan proposes to do this with practically no expense to the Government. It will help the private flying schools and it will also indirectly help the industry. Every aircraft factory is a potential arsenal. Every private flying school is an actual school of preparation for defense. By keeping the names, the addresses, and qualifications of the successful classes of young men in all the approved schools in the records of the War Department, those best qualified for flying can be immediately put upon training for combat flying.

Those best qualified for ground work, as mechanics, as repair men, and so forth, can be assigned to that kind of service. We will need large numbers of both kinds. If we should need a total of 30,000 pilots in a major emergency, we would certainly need 150,000 mechanics having a knowledge of aviation and a knowledge of aerodynamics and familiar with the details of aircraft construction and repair.

IDEA OF R. O. T. C. EXTENDED AND APPLIED

Mr. Speaker, I am simply seeking to apply to this new branch of warfare—to wit, aviation—the idea and fundamental principle which prompted the Congress in the National Defense Act of 1920 to set up the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. There are 115 schools and colleges where senior units of the R. O. T. C. now function, with a total enrollment of about 72,000. There are 139 junior units in junior institutions not having the advanced course. In these junior units there are now enrolled about 53,000 boys. It is interesting to note that since 1920, 76,201 young men have graduated from the senior R. O. T. C. units. These young men now constitute the overwhelming majority of the active Reserve officers. The wartime Reserve officers are fast passing out of the picture. Since we realize that 95 percent of the officers leading the combat units of the ground forces in time of major war must be Reserve officers, we can realize what these 76,000 R. O. T. C. graduates now mean to national defense. In addition to the 76,000 graduates, about 22,000 other college students were enrolled in the senior units, but, for some reason—perhaps physical defects or failure to attend the camp of instruction—they did not receive their commissions as Reserve officers. But most of these 22,000 are potential officers in the event of an emergency.

In addition, 429,670 young men in our military colleges and in our ordinary colleges and universities have received military instruction in the basic courses. All of these 429,670 have received a training far more valuable to them and to the country than two or three terms of Citizens' Military Training Corps camps. Therefore, all of these young men are potential noncommissioned officers in the event of an emergency. Their names are known, their qualifications recorded, and I think we should keep track of changes in their addresses, so that in the event of an emergency they might be readily employed as noncommissioned officers in helping to train the absolutely raw recruits from the farm and from the factory, from the store and the bank, from the countinghouse and the clearing house. All of this vast training of these more than a quarter million young men has cost the Government only $54,882,871.10.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if in the course of a few years, through my plan of an Air Reserve Training Corps, we can train, with practically no expense to the Government, between 20,000 and 30,000 young men and keep on adding to their number from year to year as the older ones lose interest and neglect their flying, so that we will have a reservoir of alert, active, and practically trained pilots for an emergency, it strikes me as a most wise and expedient plan for national defense. In the old days the militia cost the Government practically nothing. Afterward and prior to the World War, the National Guard cost the Government very little, if anything. No drill pay was provided; men and officers gave their time, and many of them gave their money for uniforms, for practice ammunition, and for the expenses of camps merely because they loved the training, and because they were patriotic enough to wish to be better prepared to assist in national defense.

The young men of today have the same patriotic impulses. They do not want a dollar mark put upon their patriotism. They want to get ready to serve their Nation. They love aviation, and they realize its vast and primary, and perhaps paramount, importance in national defense. Therefore, they want to obtain at least the preliminary training, and they and their fathers are willing to pay for it, provided the Government furnishes the very inexpensive supervision and assistance contemplated by H. R. 10662.

WAR DEPARTMENT WILL ABSOLUTELY CONTROL

There are no mandatory provisions in this bill. The bill leaves to the War Department absolute discretion in the making of all the rules and regulations to set up and to govern this corps. It leaves it absolutely to the discretion of the Secretary of War as to what aid and assistance will be given to this A. R. T. C. The paper certificates or diplomas and the insignia, such as wings, required to be furnished would involve a bagatelle of expense and amount to practically nothing. If some of the Air Corps personnel and if some of the Air Reserve officers called to active duty should be detailed to this work of supervising and administering this A. R. T. C., it would be perhaps the very best sort of training that these officers could have. The War Department is properly proud of the splendid job it did in organizing and setting up the C. C. C.

Undoubtedly the Regular Army officers who did this good job received themselves much valuable experience as a result of their work. When later all regular and camp administration in the C. C. C. was turned over to Reserve officers called to active duty for that purpose, these Reserve officers have received a training and preparation of enormous value to the cause of defense. Many of these Reserve officers had never had an opportunity to contact and manage men. They had never had responsibility such as the administration of camp discipline and a mess compelled them to receive. I believe the report of the Secretary of War shows that something over 9,000 Reserve officers have had active duty with the C. C. C., and I venture the opinion that 6 months' duty with the C. C. C. for a Reserve officer was almost as valuable training for him in the mobilization and training of raw recruits as were 6 months' duty with the Regular Army. Of course, an officer must know the details of warfare himself; a company officer should be the best soldier in the company. But the indispensable quality of any company officer and also of any battalion officer is personality, magnetism, leadership, and ability to inspire confidence in others. That is what these Reserve officers on duty with the C. C. C. obtain. That also is what Regular Air Corps officers and Air Reserve officers on duty with A. R. T. C. would receive.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, to sum up the ideal, the purpose, and the plan of A. R. T. C., I can say that it proposes to mobilize, organize, and standardize the knowledge of and the training in aviation of those young men who volunteer to take the course at their own expense, in order that they may enjoy the distinction of belonging to this corps, and of becoming graduates of this corps, of wearing its insignia, and of wearing its uniform. Of course, if they have a uniform, they must buy it themselves, just as Reserve officers now buy their own uniforms. Thus, we propose to accumulate a reservoir of young men who have the fundamental knowledge of aviation and considerable experience in the air. These will be classified, indexed, so as to be immediately subject to call in the event of an emergency. When called, their qualification card will show which ones should be detailed for further instruction in flying and to be made quickly into proficient military pilots. In like manner, the qualification cards will show which ones should be detailed to the ground work of the air force. Perhaps some of the latter class would be detailed to help carry on the work in the various aircraft factories, which would be quickly expanded, and be operating on the 24-hour schedule.

If we can get all these vast resources of national defense with practically no expense; if we would utilize and capitalize this enthusiasm of youth for aviation, if we would organize and standardize the instruction of these thousands of youngsters taking training in flying, then we will be following the traditional policy of America with reference to military preparedness. We will be predicating our preparedness upon the voluntary spirit of loyal, patriotic American citizens. We will be following the ideals laid down and followed by George Washington, as demonstrated so clearly by the historical studies and writings of Gen. John McAuley Palmer. We will be following the examples of the old militia, of the present National Guard, of the Organized Reserves, and more especially, will be following the example of the R. O. T. C. In other words, the A. R. T. C. will be to the air forces what the R. O. T. C. is to the ground forces.

I herewith submit for printing H. R. 10662.

A bill to promote national defense by organizing the Air Reserve Training Corps

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to organize a civilian reserve component for the United States Army, to be known and designated as the Air Reserve Training Corps, and to establish such rules and regulations as he shall deem fit and proper for carrying out the purposes and objects of this act.

Sec. 2. That all persons between the ages of 17 years and 24 years, of sound physical condition, and with a minimum education equivalent to at least a full high-school course, shall be eligible to be listed as cadets of said corps, and shall be entitled to receive such emblem or designation to wear upon the clothing as the Secretary of War may prescribe while receiving such course of instruction and training in aerodynamics and in the art of flying as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War.

Sec. 3. That the Secretary of War is authorized to use all proper means and agencies for the encouragement of said corps, by detaching either Regular flying officers, or Reserve flying officers called to active duty, to engage in the instruction and training of said cadets in such private flying schools and centers of air instruction and training as may be selected by the Secretary of War for that purpose, where the number of cadets shall not be less than 20, and where the standards of instruction and training shall have been approved by the Secretary of War, and wherever desirable to coordinate said instruction with courses in any college or university.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of War is further authorized to encourage the development of said corps by permitting the use of such Army air fields from time to time as may not conflict with the work of the Air Corps of the Army and further by permitting the use of airplanes, aircraft generally, and equipment belonging to the Air Corps of the Army, if and when, in the judgment of the Secretary of War, such use is wise and proper in promoting the art of flying and in the training of said corps.

SEC. 5. That upon the completion of such course of training as shall have been prescribed by the Secretary of War and upon the satisfactory passage of final examination and tests by said cadets, the Secretary of War shall issue certificates of graduation to that effect, and said graduates shall then be entitled to wear such uniform as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War, and such insignia and other designations and decorations upon said uniform or civilian clothing as the Secretary of War shall prescribe and confer. All such graduates of the training prescribed for cadets shall be kept listed as to their addresses, business occupations, and other pertinent facts, so that the same may be available on shortest notice for service in the national defense in the event of a national emergency.

SEC. 6. That the Secretary of War is authorized to select each year 20 of the most promising and efficient graduates of the primary instruction hereby authorized for each of the nine Corps Areas, and to give said graduates instruction at any school or flying field of the United States Army for such period as the Secretary of War may prescribe, and then to offer to all who shall be properly qualified Reserve commissions as second lieutenants in the Air Corps Reserve, and to call such number of said second lieutenants to active duty as Reserve officers in the United States Army Air Corps, for such time, as the Secretary of War may from time to time prescribe, and all appropriations necessary to carry out the provisions of this act are hereby authorized.

Mr. Speaker, on January 23 a hearing was had before the Committee on Military Affairs on this bill to set up the Junior Air Reserve, and about 35 witnesses from different parts of the country appeared, and many of them were heard, and practically all of them expressed approval of the principle contained in this bill. Previously on January 13 I had sent out a letter to about 300 or more citizens in all parts of the country known to be interested in the subject of aviation in reference to national defense. In response to that letter I received replies from about 150 persons, and all those who replied favored and approved the general proposition, and some of them were very enthusiastic in their endorsement, except one of them, and he expressed opposition. From among the 150 who replied I have selected certain representative letters from widely dispersed cities and States, ranging from California to Maine, and from them I have extracted very brief expressions, and herewith submit for printing in connection with my remarks said excerpts from the representative letters referred to. I invite careful reading of these extracts, because they show that the country recognizes that there is merit behind this proposition.

Mr. Hilding N. Carlson, of the New England Aircraft School, Inc., Boston, Mass., writes on January 25 as follows:

My chief desire to take part in the discussion on the bill pertains to provisions for the adequate training of ground personnel, primarily aircraft mechanics. For every airplane, in or out of service, there must be at least five men designated solely as aircraft mechanics whose functions is the maintenance, repair, and service of airplanes and engines. These men must, of course, be trained technicians. The time required to train a good aircraft mechanic equals, and perhaps exceeds, the time required to train a pilot, and this training is in every sense just as important.

Mr. F. Pace Woods, Woods Bros. Corporation, Lincoln, Nebr., in his letter of January 24 states:

The passing of such a bill would tremendously stimulate not only the aviation industry but would create a backlog of flyers who could be made available for the defense of our country almost immediately. Such a plan has been held back heretofore, I believe, due to the high cost of airplanes and their upkeep. The program of the Bureau of Air Commerce in stimulating development of aircraft for private use at low cost based on production has been far more successful than is realized by the public.

Mr. John L. Cousins, of the J. R. C. Flying Service, San Jose Airport, writes on January 22 as follows:

Any movement to the end of interesting young men in this country in flying, especially along military lines, is highly admirable and a tremendous asset.

Mr. E. A. Link, president of Link Aviation Devices, Inc., Binghamton, N. Y., states in his letter of January 23 the following:

Also we believe it would help interest more young men in learning to fly and therefore help civil aviation itself.

Mr. W. H. Marden, Airways, Inc., Waterville, Maine, in his letter of January 24 states:

I would be interested and glad to do anything in my power to aid the proposed Junior Air Reserve bill.

Am heartily in favor of such a proposal and assure you of my fullest cooperation.

Mr. Henry E. Moore, 2032 Belmont Road, NW., Washington, D. C., writes on January 24 as follows:

I am thoroughly in accord with your plan of training young men in aviation—as I am a young lawyer myself and am vitally interested in that field.

Mr. G. C. Rawls, Mississippi Power & Light Co., Jackson, Miss., states in his letter of January 23 the following:

I think your idea of promoting a plan whereby we will have a good supply of pilots is a good one for strengthening our national defense.

Mr. Edward A. Dycer, Dycer Flying Service, Inc., Los Angeles, Calif., in his letter of January 19 states:

This measure is constructive and practical and would likely stimulate the student flying activity it contemplates.

Mr. L. D. Ruch, Pioneer Aviation School and Sales, Savannah, Ga., in his letter of January 21, writes the following:

I most heartily agree with your bill and your idea of the junior air reserve.

Mr. George W. Orr, Roosevelt Field, N. Y., states in his telegram of January 22 the following:

I heartily endorse your constructive bill to provide a competent reserve air force and save taxpayers enormous sums of money by using commercial aviation schools for primary training.

You may count upon me for any assistance possible in successfully setting up this Junior Air Reserve.

Mr. G. F. Fox, of the Harvard Flying Club, Inc., states in his telegram of January 23 the following:

Suggest that you include in the bill that obsolete Government flying equipment be made available for ground and laboratory study.

Mr. William F. Centner, major, Air Reserve, superintendent, Port Columbus, Columbus, Ohio, writes in his letter of January 21 the following:

The proposition is certainly one of tremendous significance.

We are much interested in Junior Air Reserve and hope bill can be passed this session.

Mr. Milo E. Oliphant, department of aeronautics, Lansing, Mich., in his letter of January 18, makes the following statement:

I want to say that I would like to give my personal support to the plan. It is a splendid idea and would not only provide a source of trained pilot personnel in time of national emergency, but would also save the Government a great deal of expense in training these pilots. Looking at it from the other side, it is plain to see that it would be a great benefit to aviation schools which would be selected to give the required training.

Mr. Alex Pellett, Jr., San Francisco, Calif., writes in his letter of January 18, as follows:

I will be only too willing to cooperate with you in any manner that I can.

Mr. John G. Bailey, secretary of Kern County Pilots' Association, Bakersfield, Calif., in his letter of January 18, states:

The Kern County Pilots' Association, consisting of 45 licensed pilots, heartily endorse your junior air reserve bill.

Mr. John J. White, president of Private Fliers Association, Inc., New York City, states in his letter of January 18, as follows:

I feel that a junior air reserve which is properly operated and gives the youth of the country an opportunity to know what flying is all about is most desirable. It will develop their minds along the lines of interest in aviation, and I cannot too strongly commend any efforts made in this direction.

Mr. Raymond P. King, Gainesville National Bank, Gainesville, Tex., writes in his letter of January 16 the following:

May I say to you that I think that you are surely on the right track to accomplish something really worth while for this Nation in that you will create a reserve of flying men to whom the Nation can turn in time of an emergency.

Maj. J. H. Doolittle, St. Louis, Mo., in his letter of January 15, states the following:

Mr. C. J. Brukner, president of the Waco Aircraft Co., Troy, Ohio, writes in his letter of January 9, as follows:

I have long favored some kind of an arrangement whereby the Federal Government could give encouragement to the training, in private schools, of a junior air reserve to be made up of able-bodied young men suitable for military pilot training in the future.

I wish to say that I think your idea of a junior air reserve would be one of the best things that could be done today for national defense.

Mr. E. W. Hudlow, of the Spartan School of Aeronautics, Tulsa, Okla., writes in his letter of January 7 the following:

I was very glad to hear from you regarding the junior air reserve. I believe this to be one of the greatest moves our Government could make to help develop American youth into better citizens and to give training that all healthy young boys desire, as well as to build up our national defense.

Mr. Malcolm L. Hathaway, of Easton, Md., in his letter of January 14, writes as follows:

We are very much in accord with the plan outlined in the bill.

Mr. Paul D. Selby, vice president of Hanford Airlines, Sioux City, Iowa, writes in his letter of January 13 the following:

The junior air reserve is a most necessary adjunct to our national-defense program.

Mr. Clyde E. Brayton, president of Brayton Flying Service, Inc., Robertson, Mo., writes the following in his letter of January 13:

My personal opinion of House of Representatives' bill no. 4336 is the most progressive move to help commercial aviation that has so far been started.

Mr. Karl E. Voelter, All American Airport, Miami, Fla., in his letter of January 13 states the following:

I wish to state that I am heartily in favor of such action.

Mr. C. R. Douglass, vice president of Valley Airways, Inc., Winchester, Va., writes in his letter of January 14 as follows:

As we see it, an organization such as the junior air reserve will not only directly strengthen our air forces by furnishing an unlimited supply of trained personnel but will bring into being an unexpected number of trained mechanics, factory men, designers, and engineers by stimulating commercial aviation. As commercial aviation grows, so will the number of trained men available for aviation use in time of emergency.

Mr. Fred W. Pultar, Southern Aircraft, Inc., Valdosta, Ga., in his letter of January 13, states:

I beg to advise that I am very much interested in the junior air reserve for young men.

Mr. Dudley M. Steele, chairman of the aeronautics commission, the American Legion, Indianapolis, Ind., writes in his letter of January 3 as follows:

Aviation interests feel that you are one of its strongest friends.

Hon. C. H. Warrington, Sportman Pilot Association, Washington, D. C., writes in his letter of January 8 as follows:

I have the honor to acknowledge yours of the 3d and to voice my approval of your contemplated legislation.

Mr. O. P. Herbert, president of Safair, Inc., Roosevelt Field, New York City, in his letter of January 5 writes as follows:

We received your letter of January 2 today and hasten to assure you of our full support for your bill to set up a junior air reserve.

Mr. Richard D. Morgan, president of Air Service, Inc., New Castle, Del., writes in his letter of January 13 as follows:

I have read your letter and bill with interest and feel that your plan is a most worthy one.

Col. Oliver L. Parks, president of Parks Air College, Inc., East St. Louis, Ill., writes in his letter of December 20 as follows:

I am very much interested in being of assistance to you, because of your great personal interest in commercial aviation.

Mr. E. W. Hudlow, vice president of the Spartan School of Aeronautics, Tulsa, Okla., states in his letter of January 7 the following:

After reading your House bill, H. R. 4336, I have a suggestion that I would like to offer. It is very essential that the air force have a well-trained ground crew. In fact, it takes about five men to each airplane in order to keep it serviced, checked, and airworthy. There will be a number of boys who would be eligible for the junior air reserve, but due to some slight physical defect would not be able to pass the flight examination.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE HIGHWAYS

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a radio speech which I made on Friday last entitled "Death at the Wheel."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address made by myself over a National Broadcasting Co. network, during the program "Congress Speaks", Friday night, January 31, 1936:

On December 8 I spoke over the radio on the subject, the Tragedy of the Highways. Since then I have received letters from all over the country, from hundreds of persons, urging that action be taken at once to relieve the situation. I wish each and every one of you could read those letters. Some of them are pathetic, for they come from those who have lost loved ones. They are eager to encourage any step which will prevent others suffering the pain and anguish they themselves have experienced.

Since the 1st of December it is conservative to estimate that fifty-four hundred men, women, and children have died as the result of automobile fatalities. One hundred lives a day—every day—one life every 15 minutes. Death is still at the wheel. No one expects that legislation will stop this terrible slaughter. We do know, however, that if the State traffic regulations were uniform in their provisions, enforcement would be simplified, those who are physically or mentally unfit to drive would be taken off the highways (in the words of one official, there are too many 30-horsepower brains driving 90-horsepower motors), headlight glare in night driving would be controlled, street lighting would be improved, wild speed would be reduced, brakes would be tested regularly, and the ultimate result would be a lessening of the number of accidents.

On December 18 last, an accident-prevention conference was called by our humane Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper. It met in Washington and laid out a program dealing chiefly with causes of accidents and suggested remedies for them. Two high points of the conference program appeal particularly to me. One is that the conference is seeking to meet immediate problems with educational material. The other is that of attempting to obtain uniform vehicle regulations throughout the United States. A committee on this work has been set up, with my distinguished and very able colleague, Representative EMMET O'NEAL, of Kentucky, as its chairman. Mr. Labert St. Clair, transportation assistant to the Secretary of Commerce, was appointed director of activities of the conference. Today I am talking solely of the motor fatality phase of the problem, and at a later date I intend to take up the other phases of the matter.

Gradually, America is awakening to the fact that no one is exempt from the dangers of the road. My only surprise is that it has taken so long to formulate a plan and to get it started. Over a year has elapsed since my bill was introduced in Congress. This measure calls for a study and research of traffic conditions and measures for their improvement. The bill does not call for the creation of new departments—only existing facilities will be used—the money is available, the organization is there and ready to go ahead as soon as authorization to do so is granted. States rights will not be interfered with by this measure. The sad part of it all is not that just a year has been wasted. During that year more than 36,000 lives have been lost by automobile accidents. That is the terrible part. For some of these lives could have been saved. It appears that the 1935 figures will show an increase over 1934. The 1935 total will probably be very close to 36,400 with a corresponding increase in permanent disabilities and injuries.

In 1934 there were 36,000 automobile fatalities. But there is another side to the picture. In addition to those deaths, you must consider the 105,000 persons who were permanently disabled and the 1,500,000 temporarily incapacitated. Think of the mental and physical suffering involved. Aside from this, there is the economic loss, and that is estimated at $1,580,000,000. It is so shocking, so staggering, when one has the figures before him, that it seems as if the country were becoming calloused and human life becoming cheap.

We all shudder at the thought of war. The traffic fatality situation is far worse than any war the United States has ever fought. Figures were given recently which show that in all the conflicts our country has had, from the Revolutionary War down to and including the late World War, 244,357 lives were lost. The period of time covered by those wars was approximately 150 years. Compare the traffic fatalities of only 15 years with this, and you find that 389,000 men, women, and children have been killed in or by automobiles. We need neutrality on our highways.

The average person goes on his way confidently, with the feeling he is perfectly safe, but here and there the lightning strikes each day and he is either killed or kills. His whole life picture and that of his family are completely changed. The family never forgets his death if he is killed—he never forgets the fact he has killed somebody. That horror will be with him always—and it's infinitely greater if it be his own fault.

The public authorities have responded in bringing this picture more and more before the public eye. However, when you compare what was done in the way of publicity in depicting the horrors of the World War, when only 38,000 American lives were lost during the entire conflict, the fatalities of last year, which were 2,000 less, enough has not been done.

Some of the American indifference to this crashing, smashing death is vanishing, however. A great deal of fine, intelligent, and valuable research work has been done. It has been determined that from 12 midnight to 1 o'clock in the morning the hazard is nine times as great as from 12 to 1 in the middle of the day, in proportion to the amount of travel. Similarly, the average accident hazard between 6 p. m. and 6 a. m. is four times as great as that between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m.

We are gradually getting somewhere with the problem. We are finding out the facts. What we need now is legislation to put this knowledge to use. The manufacturers have become interested and have set up a number of committees which are to deal with important aspects of the traffic problem. They have just announced a large-scale cooperative plan of safety work, one of its items providing for 15 fellowships in the Traffic Research Bureau of Harvard University.

State and municipal authorities are increasing their activities; grade-crossing elimination is being carried forward all over the country—1,500 of these death traps will be made safe in the coming year. Educational programs are being set up, many of them modeled on the Milwaukee plan, which has worked out so successfully. That plan, controlled by a commission, with the very hearty cooperation of the police department, has made Milwaukee the safest city in the United States. It is not a complicated program, and much of its success comes from the fact that the commission is made up of 12 men, each of whom is an expert in his own particular field, each realizing just what the situation demands. As a result, the public schools have a course of study embracing all phases of the traffic problem from driver training to law enforcement. The police department works closely with the commission. There is no ticket fixing in Milwaukee.

Safety studies should be a part of the curriculum of all schools. There is a great opportunity for activity of this nature in the organizations of the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, and the Campfire Girls. With their eager enthusiasm they can be of wonderful help. It is a tremendous challenge to the youth of America. Arrangements have been completed for introducing general accident-prevention courses in the C. C. C. camps. If these 421,000 young men are taught the principles of safety, an army of most useful safety leaders soon can be established.

With all these agencies at work, anxious as they are for a betterment of the conditions, the one most crying need at the present moment is for uniformity of traffic laws. The demand for this is national. This is borne out by the result of the Nation-wide poll conducted recently by the American Institute of Public Opinion. Last Sunday's Washington Post printed the figures on this poll. It showed that 95 percent of the voters agree that there must be uniform traffic laws and regulations in all States. In a day or two I am introducing another bill in Congress that takes in a broader scope than my previous one. I am glad to see more persons taking interest daily in the safety problem. It is only through such interest that we can master the situation. Instead of death at the wheel, let us have safety at the wheel.

REPUBLICANISM AT THE CROSS ROADS—LET'S SEE THE COLOR OF THE CHICKEN BEFORE WE PUT THE POT TO BOIL

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Speaker, as a Democrat, I have no fault to find with the theory that the business of an opposition party is to oppose.

Progress, in government as in everything else, lies in the give and take of constructive criticism. But it is my contention that criticism, to qualify as constructive, must be sincere, honest, and well balanced.

No intelligent American citizen, whatever may be his party affiliations, whatever he may think of the New Deal, can conscientiously accept or countenance the particular brand of political windjamming that has burdened the air waves and filled the headlines during the past month.

Some of it defeats itself without the necessity of comment or refutation. Even the most hide-bound and ostrich-headed conservative must begin to recognize the fact that the old catchpenny scarewords that were used to give the public the nervous jitters back in the twenties have lost their black magic and no longer create even a mild furore.

Crying "red", "Communist", and "Socialist" in this year of 1936 is not good for a one-night stand in a third-rate house. The public is looking for something newer and better. It refuses to be distracted by slapstick when the legitimate fare has run out.

Fortunately the American people are able to profit by the example of two powerful European dictatorships which had as their slogan, "Communists must be wiped out." By the time our European neighbors waked up to the fact that they were fighting an enemy that had never really made an attack on their own borders, they discovered that another, and for them, far more malignant form of dictatorship had stepped in to throttle them within their own country.

The American workingman will not let himself be betrayed into a similar position by the trickery of would-be capitalistic dictators.

A recent radio address delivered by one of my colleagues of the opposition opened with the statement that it was to be addressed to the laboring man since business and professional men who are not already back in the Republican Party need to have their heads examined.

The enemies of the New Deal do well to cast their juiciest bait before the workingman. He will prove a wary nibbler at best. Agreed that his first concern is knowing which party is able to restore business confidence and provide a steady job for him at an American standard of wages. It has been his first concern since the fiasco of 1929 showed him how unstable was the so-called security of a boom era.

Through the years of 1930, 1931, and 1932 he was given ample opportunity to see just what a Republican administration could and did do to provide him with a steady job.

For the first time, in 1933, the laboring man, factory worker, farmer, and miner found his problems the primary concern of an administration.

President Roosevelt recognized the fact that so many of his predecessors seemed to have overlooked, that the prosperity of business, industry, and Wall Street depended entirely on the prosperity of the (in 1933) appropriately labeled "man in the street."

The charge has been made that he called in professors of economics from the universities—inexperienced theorists—to help him formulate a plan for the immediate relief of the starving and the eventual restoration of economic security.

If he did so, it was because he could not escape the realization that the colleges were the only places left where the first principles of sound economics had not been distorted to fit the insanity of the "every man a millionaire" slogan of our boom era. Certainly there were few, if any, among the politicians and businessmen, industrialists, and financiers who could lay claim to having brought forth any basic economic principles in an effort to stem the tide of speculation and restore sanity before we were swept overboard in the inevitable shipwreck.

It was from the theorists on the side lines that the warnings came, and they were ignored by our hard-headed, practical men. The President had reason to seek a "brain trust."

Incidentally I might question the purported opprobrium in the term "theorist." Every forward step in science, technology, and government has been made because some theorist saw a way to build something new on the basis of old facts, and experimented until he made what he saw visible to the popular mind.

President Roosevelt was the first to admit that the N. R. A. was an experiment. The country was facing a crisis that demanded drastic and immediate measures. Business could not and did not ask to be left to pick itself up while the unemployed starved.

But now that business has experienced a 50-percent recovery, on the strength of confidence and buying power restored under the N. R. A., it is determined to throw off the helping hand and let the other fellow shift for himself. It made no objection to calling out the Army when its own house and lot were in danger, but now that they are saved it disapproves the Army on principle and wants it disbanded.

And to make felt its disapproval, it quotes facts and figures with approximately the same accuracy and understanding as a parrot.

Anyone knows that the same set of figures can be made to prove any side of an argument provided care is exercised in selecting portions to be quoted and emphasis is shaded accordingly. Enemies of the New Deal are adepts at this doubtful accomplishment.

They quote the American Federation of Labor Bulletin to the effect that there were eleven and one-half million men still out of work in 1935, as against fifteen and one-half million in 1933. And this, they hasten to remind us, after a $15,000,000,000 Government appropriation.

What they fail to point out is the fact that the eleven and one-half million figure for 1935 includes three and one-half million who are employed on Federal work-relief projects. It also include a 2,000,000 increase in job seekers since 1933. In other words, including those employed on Federal work-relief projects, better than 9,000,000 more men are gainfully employed today than were so employed in 1933.

Is that failure?

No one claims that the whole problem is solved while there are men still unemployed. But it is apparent, at least to 9,000,000 men in this country who have directly benefited, and should be apparent to the business men, who have benefited more or less directly by this increased buying power, that the New Deal has come a long way toward a solution.

In his radio address delivered on December 28, 1935, the Honorable HAMILTON FISH, Jr., stated that as a result of the A. A. A. the United States has lost half her cotton-export trade. The answer to that is a quotation from the Department of Commerce summary of foreign commerce for November 1935. During the 4 months ending with November 1935 the United States exported 2,574,786 bales of cotton as against 1,894,142 bales for the same 4 months of 1934.

I might add, from the same source, that the total exports of American merchandise have risen from $1,147,176,000 worth of goods in 1932 to $2,021,089,000 worth of goods in 1935. And that, in the face of an acknowledged world tendency toward national self-sufficiency and a definite tightening of export markets.

With long faces our rock-ribbed conservatives point out that the election of a Republican President is the only thing that will restore confidence. It seems a contradiction in terms to speak of restoration of confidence in the same breath with deliberate misrepresentations and falsifications aimed at the destruction of the very thing they claim to seek to restore.

Bemoaning the fate of the poor wage earner who watches the skyrocketing of prices with grave dismay, they neglect to call attention to the fact that, whereas the cost of living has increased 2.9 percent under the New Deal, a legitimate sign in itself of business recovery, the average earnings of the working man have increased 6.8 percent.

The alarm seems more in the nature of a false alarm.

We are expected to accept without question the Republican promises of "a sound and workable program for the benefit of the American farmer, which will restore the foreign markets for our exportable farm surplus and protect our domestic markets for the American farmer." But I hardly think the farmer himself will prove so gullible. He was fed on promises too long by previous Republican administrations. He is going to demand to see the color of the chicken before he puts the pot on to boil.

In his December 28 speech Mr. FISH puts the blame for alleged unconstitutional enactments of the New Deal on a supine and rubber-stamp Congress. Yet he did not hesitate to conclude his remarks with the prediction that most of the Republican candidates for the United States Senate and Congress who will be up for reelection in 1936 will be for the nomination of Senator WILLIAM E. BORAH as Republican candidate for the Presidency, if for no other reason than in order to help get elected themselves.

Just what does that promise in the way of an independent, purposeful, and unmanageable Congress?

I shall not attempt to argue the Supreme Court's findings on the constitutionality of the N. R. A. and the A. A. A. If there was room for two opinions within the Supreme Court itself, it is not to be expected that opinions without it will be one and universal.

But I do take exception to the meaningless cry that the administration and the New Deal have broken with the Constitution of the United States as set forth for us by its framers. Let me point out that there have been 21 amendments to that original Constitution and each of them has broken with some expressed conviction of the men who framed it. It is extremely doubtful if they or the original Supreme Court itself would have passed on any of them as constitutional.

In the case of most of these amendments, existing conditions were the primary factor in passing upon the constitutionality. It is open to question whether existing conditions were given due consideration in the Supreme Court's ruling on the N. R. A. and the A. A. A.

Where, for example, were those who cry "dictatorship" when the eighteenth amendment was passed. The Supreme Court slept 10 years over that usurpation of State rights. And it took this allegedly socialistic administration to resubmit it to the will of the people.

The Republicans have launched their campaign. They have extended a friendly hand to the malcontents and renegades of the Democratic Party. They are prepared to weep on the necks of the American people over their sufferings under the New Deal.

It is up to the intelligent American citizen to decide for himself whether or not a wet collar is sufficient compensation for a return to the economic apathy of the Hoover administration.

ON "TAKING A WALK"

Mr. GRAY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GRAY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, on January 25, 1936, Gov. Alfred E. Smith made an address before the American Liberty League, which was officially replied to on January 28 by the Senate majority leader, JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, of Arkansas. In 1928 Governor Smith was the Democratic Presidential nominee and Senator ROBINSON was the candidate for Vice President.

Sufficient time has now elapsed for the stilling of our emotions, so that we can calmly and with some respect to reason examine the whole scene and threatened impasse brought about by the Governor's address.

In the meantime, many things have been said and done which might well have been left unsaid and undone. As one who campaigned with Governor Smith and whose political fortunes were tightly bound up with Smith's Senator ROBINSON has proper standing to criticize the position now taken by the Governor. It would be much better, in deed, if all who have since found fault with Smith were equally eligible to the right to belabor him for what he said in his Liberty League speech.

In the 1928 Presidential election Smith and Robinson carried eight States—Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Rhode Island, and South Carolina. I admit the right of any official representative of any one of this group of States to express his disapproval of the utterances of Governor Smith insofar as it touches the Democratic Party organization and policy. Such men have solid footing when commenting adversely or otherwise on Smith's suggestion that nothing may be left for him and others who feel as he feels but to "take a walk" after the National Democratic Convention in Philadelphia this year.

I can go farther than that, and, grant the right and privilege of any individual, as an individual, expressing his own personal views on the subject; but I shall not agree that it is particularly palatable that Governor Smith shall be belated for suggesting that some may have to "take a walk" when, and if the time comes, by those who themselves in 1928 led the way in "taking a walk", strayed away from their historic Democratic traditions and deserted the Democratic Party nominees, not because of any political principle involved, as is now involved, but on altogether reasonless and personal grounds.

I want to express my thought on the subject and wish that I might give it directly to the Governor himself. As a Democrat from the North, particularly as a Pennsylvania Democrat, with a lifetime of service to the Democratic Party in Pennsylvania, with generations of Democratic Party devotion behind me, and as one who believed in and followed Governor Smith's leadership in 1928, I am entitled to a hearing on this subject.

Governor, you would not say that years and years of Democratic Party affiliation in Pennsylvania, since 1860, let us say, was an indication that a man was in a party for the sake of profit. You would give him the benefit of the doubt, if there were any, and say he must have been actuated by deep and abiding principles—right or wrong—in which he believed and on which he tacked his faith.

As one who claims to be that kind of a Democrat not in years but in principles, and one who joyed at the terrific blow you delivered to the Republican machines in Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties, from which, by the way, they are not likely ever to recover, I have a right to talk "United States" to you.

Governor Smith, we Pennsylvania Democrats have been a sorry lot in a melancholy state. It has not been just the proper caper to be a Democrat in our State—not for many, many years. It has been rather an unmixed evil. It did not advance one in politics, in society, in business, or in the professions, or in finances. Whereas in some parts of the country it was eminently proper, polite, politic, and profitable to be a Democrat; in Pennsylvania it was just the reverse, and a Democrat in most sections of that State was looked upon as a fool for principle or a fanatic, or a nitwit, fairly sensible in a way, but more or less non compos.

Now, Governor, whom do you suppose you may walk out on? Certainly not on those who walked out on you in 1928. You are walking out, if you do walk out—and I have my doubts that you will—on those of us who did not walk out on you. Do you know how much you increased the Democratic vote in Pennsylvania in 1928?

John W. Davis received for President in 1924, 409,192 votes in our State. In 1928 you, Governor, received 1,067,586 votes, and you remember the kind of a campaign that was urged and waged against you. You remember the "hot stuff" pulled out of the hat of the Republican National Committee.

What about the 15,016,443 who supported you, stuck by you, and voted for you in 1928? You have no right to walk out on us, Governor, just because the going gets tough. A democracy is the people's business and must always remain the people's business, and the Democratic Party is the people's party in that democracy, and it is your business as a great Democratic leader to keep it such. A democratic form of government must of necessity depend mainly for its success upon men who feel the pulse beat of the common aching heart and who speak the inarticulate thoughts of the striving hosts of men.

No, Governor; you have no right to walk out on us, regardless of the provocation. It is your duty to help our Democratic ship steer a safe course through the turbulent mounting billows of discontent, depression, and impending disaster.

I really think, Governor, that is what you are trying to do when you suggest "taking a walk." But as for actually doing that, you know you should not do it. You must not "walk out" on more than 15,000,000 Democrats in these United States and more than 1,000,000 in Pennsylvania. You would not think of such a thing.

ANDREW JACKSON

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
There was no objection.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, we all revere the memory of Andrew Jackson. Much has been written and said about this great Democrat. Many times when I hear present-day speakers proclaiming their allegiance to Jacksonian democracy I wonder, if they had lived in his time and had been called upon to take part in the fight waged by this champion of the common people, whether they would have espoused the cause—"Jacksonian democracy"—and faced the odds opposing Jackson with the zeal and devotion they profess today.

Read the account of President Jackson's fight against the money power during his administration as written by a Republican—a Lincoln Presidential elector.

Everyone should read the history of the great battle between Andrew Jackson and the money power in Benton's Thirty Years in the Senate.

History on the money question is simply repeating itself. In Jackson's time we had but one great corporation in the United States—that was the old United States Bank, with a capital of $35,000,000 and a charter that expired in 20 years. The great money power of that generation was concentrated in that bank and its branch banks in all States of the Union. Thirty-five millions do not seem very big when compared with the corporations we have now, but the old United States Bank had one vast advantage over all other corporations. We had no United States Treasury then, separate and apart from that bank, and the laws then required that all the money belonging to the Government should be deposited in that bank. This gave its managers millions of money and vast power, for money was worth from 1 to 5 percent a month, and no restraint on the amount they could issue, except their good faith. Banks then printed their own paper money and the law permitted them to circulate $5 in paper money for $1 of capital, with no restraint except their good faith to prevent them from circulating $100 to $1 of their capital, which was often done.

Nicholas Biddle was president of the great bank. He was the money king of that day and generation. He lived in a marble palace on the banks of the Delaware, 15 miles above Philadelphia, and there in that palace of pure white marble, with great Corinthian columns, this money king dispensed hospitality equal to almost any king in Europe. Thousands of people thought him vastly greater than General Jackson.

Sometime before Biddle's charter expired he took a trip to Washington to have a talk with his then friend, Jackson, about a new charter for his bank. The old one was to expire in 1836, and as Jackson was a candidate for reelection he thought it would be a good thing to tell him about the vast power of his bank and its many branches. He told Jackson that the merchants and men of affairs through all the States were, as a rule, largely indebted to his banks and that through the influence of his branch banks he could control the election in any State in the Union. Then up rose Andrew Jackson and, with suppressed emotion, said: "Mr. Biddle, if that is true, and I think it is, I tell you here and now, that if you can control the election in any State in the Union, that is too much power for one man to have in a free country in time of peace. And I will tell you further, here and now, that if you can get a new charter from Congress for that bank, by the Eternal, I will veto that charter."

Then the great money king set himself to work to defeat the election of Andrew Jackson. The first thing that Banker Biddle did was to buy up or influence all the great Democratic papers that were for sale from Boston to New Orleans. They even bought Jackson's home organ, the old Washington Globe, edited by Jackson's personal friend, Gen. Duff Green. When Jackson saw them using Government money to buy up Democratic papers, editors, etc., he said to his Secretary of the Treasury: "Mr. Duane, I don't want you to put any more Government money in that bank; it will blow up; the money is not safe." But Mr. Duane was himself a banker and a very rich man for that day. Of course, he was in sympathy with the money power and he said: "I can't obey that order." Then, he was told to take an indefinite furlough for the benefit of his health and Jackson put Roger B. Taney in his place, the man who afterward became Chief Justice of the United States.

Clay, Webster, and Calhoun were then all in the United States Senate and all candidates for President against Jackson. Benton, Jackson's great defender, called them "the great triumvirate." At the proper time these great men made great constitutional arguments to show how Jackson had turned Cromwell and was trampling the Constitution and the liberties of the people underfoot.

The next move Biddle's henchmen made was to get up "honest" Democratic meetings—"honest" primaries to denounce and head off the President.

A great anti-Jackson, an "honest" Democratic meeting of this kind, was held in Philadelphia, where the great bank was located, at which they gave a free dinner to 80,000 men—all paid for by the great bank. They appointed a committee of 300 Democrats to go to Washington and ask Jackson to desist from his course in ruining the country. When this committee got to Washington, one of these pride-swollen bankers so far forgot himself as to say to the President that if he persisted in his course the people would rise up en masse and come to Washington with shotguns, pitchforks, and anything that would kill "to expel the Goths from Rome." Jackson replied: "Do you come here to threaten me?"

If you men dare to put any of your big threats into execution, by the great Eternal, I will hang you high as Haman!"

For a time it did look blue for Old Hickory. It seemed as if he was being forsaken by all his friends. But after a while it began to be seen that for each great banker that left him four or five honest farmers, mechanics, and laborers came to him.

When the election was over and the vote counted, Andrew Jackson, the hero of the people, had swept the whole country by storm. He had more majority than the other candidates had votes. Then the Democrats rejoiced.

Of the millions who (now) inhabit our great Republic how many know that such a man as Nicholas Biddle ever lived? His marble palace is gone, and in the wreck of his great bank only $20 was found to redeem a paper circulation of over a hundred million.

Andrew Jackson was indeed a great man. His name will live forever with the Republic. He saved the people of his day from the grinding curse of a moneyed aristocracy. (Charles Schreiner, a Lincoln Presidential elector in 1864. Courtesy O. J. Lynge, Ponderay, Idaho.)

Truly, history repeats itself. We are confronted today with the business of 120,000,000 people in this country prostrate before the organized greed of an entrenched money power, with the public mind confused by cunning and misleading statements adroitly put out to conceal their machinations and true state of facts concerning the cause for the financial difficulties that have overtaken the country due to the overthrow of the very principles that President Jackson successfully defended and maintained and the domination of the forces he opposed, now in control of the Nation's finance and credit.

MILITARY ROAD

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that House Joint Resolution 330, to close Military Road temporarily, number 505 on the Union Calendar, be recommended to the Committee on Military Affairs for further consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

EXTRAVAGANCE OF GOVERNMENT

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech I made over the radio on last Saturday night.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include my radio address made over the Columbia Broadcasting System on February 1, 1936, as follows:

I should like at the very outset to give you a note of warning. It is this: If the Nation is living within its income, its credit is good, but if, like a spendthrift, it throws discretion to the winds, is willing to make no sacrifice at all in its spending, extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay, and continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy.

Perhaps my listeners recognize that warning as having been uttered before. It was. It was made by Candidate Roosevelt at Pittsburgh, October 19, 1932. It is the surest self-indictment ever uttered by any man.

In the more than 3 years that have passed since Candidate Roosevelt sounded this solemn truism, we in the United States have lived in an unprecedented era of spending. We have been under the thumb of the spendthrift. At no time since March 1933 has our Budget been balanced. Continuously since that time we have piled up huge deficits. If we but take his own warning in the face of this sorry condition, then the country truly is on the road to bankruptcy.

Never before, I repeat, have we seen in this country such utter disregard of sound governmental finance. Never before have we seen so much money spent, such debts accumulated, such deficits piled up.

Already this year, with but a little more than half of the fiscal year gone, the New Deal deficit is more than $2,000,000,000 and about $13,000,000,000 since 1933. The public debt, when Mr. Roosevelt came into office was $20,934,728,350. That was the public debt on February 28, 1933. Under the loose fiscal policies of the New Deal that debt has grown until on December 31—a month ago—it had reached the unprecedented figure, an all-time high, of $30,557,324,062. And instead of the Government living within its income, it was spending approximately $2 for every one taken in.

Now Mr. Roosevelt is himself responsible for the statement that the credit of a nation is good only when that nation is living within its income. He also has been responsible for the statement that at the very top of the credit structure of the country are the obligations of the Federal Government, and that those obligations suffer only to the extent that Government is permitted to be extravagant, wasteful, and ill-managed.

He said further in relation to this, and I quote: "They suffer if the Federal Budget is not balanced, and particularly where the deficit of 1 year is not cleared up in the succeeding year."

Consequently by his own word Federal obligations are suffering because the Budget is not balanced, and certainly the deficits instead of being wiped out from year to year are being added to.

How the Roosevelt administration is spending the taxpayers' money is as important as the amount it is spending. In the few minutes at my disposal I intend to discuss not only how much is being spent but where it is going, and I entertain the conviction that all of you are necessarily and equally interested in this.

To use another platitude of the President, I want to recall to you that he said, and I quote: "Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on rocks of loose fiscal policy."

Every honest, thoughtful citizen approves that statement. But it has not been lived up to by the Roosevelt administration. One of the first acts of the New Deal was to introduce two budgets instead of one, as had been the practice in this country for 150 years. That was the start of a loose fiscal policy. The purpose of two budgets, as I pointed out nearly 3 years ago, was for the distinct and very definite purpose of fooling the people about Federal expenditures, and my statement at that time was most prophetic in the light of present-day facts.

The two budgets simply help to furnish an alibi for New Deal spokesmen, who everywhere are trying to defend the extravagant expenditures of the present administration. They are continually crying out, until unfortunately they have made some people believe it, that it is only the relief burden that is unbalancing the Budget. That is far from the truth. While I know that the enormous and, in all too many instances, wasteful expenditures for relief have been a factor in keeping the Budget unbalanced, do not let them fool you for a moment that it has been the only cause for the increased cost of your Government under President Roosevelt. The fact of the matter is that routine costs of Government have mounted tremendously, and routine costs are wholly aside from expenditures being made as emergency expenditures.

The expenses for conducting ordinary Government in the last year of the Hoover administration amounted to $3,865,000,000, while the expenses in prospect for the fiscal year 1936-37 for the same purpose, and I again emphasize not for emergency purposes, show an increase of a little short of $1,000,000,000, or an increase of 23 percent, under an administration that was pledged to reduce these same expenditures 25 percent.

Now, that is only one side of the picture. The other side which necessarily is a part of that picture, is that while these normal expenditures have constantly increased, revenues also have increased. This means that if President Roosevelt and his New Deal were giving this country even the semblance of efficiency and frugal management there would not be the budgetary problem which in its present form, as Mr. Roosevelt has said himself, leads to bankruptcy.

An additional fact is that the taxpayer's money has been expended in ever-increasing amounts in practically every one of the departments of Government. Current appropriation bills show this. And the answer, to some extent, is that the New Deal has made constant additions to the Government pay roll for the regular departments, in a very palpable effort to build up a tremendous political machine.

According to the Civil Service Commission's report of November 30, 1935, there were 602,230 employees in the regular departments of the Government. When Mr. Roosevelt came into office there were 572,091 in the same regular establishments. Now, this is an increase of 30,139, and, mind you, that increase is in the regular establishment. Now, let us examine the number of New Deal employees added to so-called emergency New Deal agencies. The total number on November 30, 1935, according to the Civil Service Commission, was 197,849, and if you add the 30,139 increase in the regular branches, you find that in less than 3 years of New Deal government there have been added 227,988 employees. Most of these are outside the civil service. They are for the most part political appointments. And these figures of increases that I have given you do not include the military, legislative, or judicial branches or the thousands of part-time employees on the pay roll.

Now, this has been done by a man who pledged himself to uphold 100 percent the platform on which he rose to the Presidency. Need I remind you again that one of the principal planks in that platform was a reduction by 25 percent of the costs of government?

The personnel increase, however, is only one source of increased spending. Another, and by far more reprehensible, waste is involved in the terrific extravagance surrounding silly boondoggling projects, which fail utterly to create jobs anywhere near commensurate with the money frittered away.

A few days ago the President, speaking at Newark, N. J., expressed the hope that we were boondoggling ourselves out of the depression. He ought to be a judge, for his administration has furnished more jazz music for the American people to dance to than any other administration in history. But he seems to have forgotten one important thing, and that is that he who dances must pay the fiddler. You taxpayers will be paying this New Deal fiddler for many years to come. Your children will be paying him and your children's children will be paying him.

I want to give you just a few samples of some of the ways Mr. Roosevelt is spending the taxpayers' money. Some $25,000 has been allocated to build a dog pound, to be equipped with shower baths, to take care of stray dogs in Memphis, Tenn. Among the drama projects—and there are many—there has been set aside $330,000 to equip and send out over the country a New Deal theatrical troupe, probably to furnish amusement for relief workers on useless W. P. A. projects.

There is such a multitude of these boondoggling projects of the more fantastic varieties that it is difficult to pick out the most fantastic among them.

I am inclined to believe that when President Roosevelt said at Newark on January 18 last—and I quote him—"If we can boondoggle ourselves out of this depression, that word is going to be enshrined in the hearts of the American people for years to come", he was both apologetic and at the same time expressing a forlorn hope. The haphazard way in which relief funds have been used on hundreds of these ludicrous schemes spells waste and rank extravagances which the Roosevelt administration never will be able to live down.

There was another note of apology in the President's Newark speech, and it requires no exaggeration to interpret in this note a desire of the President to shift responsibility. It is obvious, of course, why the President wishes to do this. It was the second time he somewhat plaintively sought to say, "Someone else, not I, is responsible for these wasteful projects." Mr. Roosevelt cannot escape responsibility. He has had to approve these projects before W. P. A. money was made available for them. It was his power; he insisted on having it; he exercised it. The burden is on his doorstep.

To sum it all up—the taxpayer's money is today being spent with unparalleled prodigality in every department of the Government. And notwithstanding the billions we have wasted, Mr. Hopkins says we still have a peak load on relief. That tells the real story of the success of the administration in boondoggling, regimentation, raking leaves, and pump priming. In fact, we have tried everything under the "trial and error" rule of this administration except the American way of working, saving, and paying our honest debts.

The present regime is not only abhorrent to the average citizen but it is destructive of that thrift, energy, and spirit that made America what it is today.

SUPREME COURT VS. NEW DEAL DICTATORSHIP

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, including a radio address delivered by me.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address delivered by me over the National Broadcasting Co. network Saturday evening, February 1, 1936:

Before discussing the subject of my remarks this evening I propose to digress for a few minutes to make certain observations.

The other night Senator ROBINSON, in his attack and attempt to smear Governor Smith, which, after all, is a Democratic dog fight, nevertheless failed to answer the specific charges that the various planks of the Democratic platform had been violated and repudiated by the New Deal administration.

We Republicans are perfectly willing to let the Democrats call each other pet names, and even invent a few for the edification and entertainment of the public. It is the old story of the pot calling the kettle black. It is not, however, my fight, but it must be obvious to all the onlookers on the side lines that the New Dealers cannot take criticism from either Republicans or Democrats. The feathers are still flying where the shot hit, and it is beginning to look as though Al Smith's hot shot was only the first of a barrage of feather-producing shots from Jeffersonian Democrats. Al Smith, John W. Davis, former Governor Ritchie, former Governor Ely, Bainbridge Colby, Lewis Douglas, former Senator Jim Reed, William R. Hearst, Governor Talmadge, and a host of other Democrats are scattering hot shots, pot shots, and buckshots liberally into the New Deal vulture and filling the sky with clouds of feathers. We Republicans have no objection to the softening up process, as it makes it easier for us to land the knockout wallop next November.

My good friend JOE ROBINSON referred to me in his speech as being alarmed about the Communists. I am not in the least alarmed. All I suggest is that alien Communists or alien Fascists or Nazis, or even alien conservatives who do not like our laws and institutions, and who teach class hatred and spread poison against our form of government, should be deported back home and their jobs given to loyal American citizens walking the streets who believe in our American institutions. I suggest to my good friend JOE ROBINSON that if his party would throw out the host of young radicals, Socialists, and near Communists, never before affiliated or identified with the Democratic Party, who are now shaping its policies, and give their jobs to loyal Jeffersonian Democrats, that the split in the Democratic ranks might be patched up before the New Deal loses all of its feathers.

I am sorry that the great speech of Senator BORAH pitched on a high constitutional level and calling for a living platform in the interest of the American people was not broadcast on a coast-to-coast network. He is a great American and a standpatter for the Constitution, the powers of the Supreme Court, preservation of the home market for our wage earners against competition of the pauperized labor of Japan and Europe, and for Americanism against internationalism. He will speak over a coast-to-coast network from 10 to 10:30, eastern standard time, on Washington's Birthday, Saturday evening, February 22, and I hope all those who believe in the fundamental principles of our Government and the restoration of constitutional and representative government in opposition to political and economic dictatorship and the reestablishment of a government by law instead of Executive orders will listen in and arrange BORAH dinners and meetings for that purpose.

A Borah-for-President national committee will open officially next Monday at the Hotel Willard at Washington, D. C., under the direction of Hon. Carl G. Bachmann, a former Republican whip of the House of Representatives, and all Borah clubs and supporters should communicate directly with him there. I am for Senator BORAH because I believe he has the greatest appeal to the mass of voters. I appreciate he is not popular with the big interests and the reactionary politicians. If he has the support of the rank and file, he should be nominated, as that is the surest way to win; otherwise I am for the strongest candidate that is developed—preferably from the West, and with a liberal record.

As a comprehensive five-point, or quintuple, Republican program after all the New Deal feathers have been plucked, I suggest the following platform, upon which all conservatives and liberal Republicans can unite:

1. Repeal of Franklin "Deficit" Roosevelt.
  2. Liquidation of the "brain trust" termites—Rexford Guy Tugwell, Felix Frankfurter, the Corcorans, and the Cohens—and of class hatred and state socialism.
  3. Liquidation and repeal of all unsound, un-American, socialist, and unconstitutional New Deal acts that have destroyed confidence and prolonged the depression.
  4. The restoration of the powers usurped from the Congress and the States and the reestablishment of a government by law, in place of economic and political dictatorship through Executive orders. The preservation of the powers of the Supreme Court and of the Constitution against usurpation or nullification by both the Congress and the President.
  5. The enactment of sound workable and constitutional agricultural legislation for the benefit of the farmers of the South and of the West and the restoration of the vanishing foreign markets and a price parity, or an equilibrium between the products of the farms and the protected industries of the North and East.
- The Constitution of the United States in spite of what the Communists, Socialists, radicals, and a growing number of New Dealers tell the American people—that it is a scrap of paper for the benefit of special privilege, wealth and private property—is the greatest charter of human liberty ever devised by the mind of man. It is what makes for the rights and liberties of the American people and of popular government. It is the safeguard of our free institutions and representative and constitutional form of government, as opposed to the autocracies and dictatorships of the Old World. It is the bulwark against dictatorships of the left and of the right, communism and socialism on one side and of fascism and Hitlerism on the other.

The Supreme Court of the United States stands like a rock against political and economic dictatorship, while a supine and subservient Congress is surrendering, under the whip and spur of party patronage and upon the arrogant demands of President Roosevelt, its legislative powers and functions. It has not been the servile and partisan Congress that has withstood the encroachments and usurpations of the Chief Executive upon its constitutional powers, which it has delegated away in a cowardly manner, but the Supreme Court that has boldly declared that such delegation of power as in the N. R. A. case was in violation of the letter and spirit of the Constitution. More recently the Supreme Court held that the Federal Government—that is, both the Congress and the President—had usurped the powers of the States in the triple A. Every writer on government for a hundred years or more has pointed out that when the executive powers are combined with the legislative powers you have tyranny. A rose by any other name smells as sweet, and a dictatorship by any other name smells as rotten.

Thank God for the Supreme Court of the United States, which, without fear or favor, continues to uphold our representative and constitutional form of government in spite of the efforts of the New Deal termites like Rexford Guy Tugwell and the other members of the "brain trust", who seek to undermine our American system and the Constitution itself.

Al Smith was right when he called the Constitution the civil bible of America, protecting the rights of the minority—racial and religious—and upholding the rights and liberties of large groups of American citizens who are vitally interested in the preservation of constitutional government.

I am not one of those who believes that the Constitution must not be amended in an orderly manner and in accordance with the methods prescribed, by a two-thirds vote of Congress and three-fourths vote of the legislatures of the various States. Personally, I am inclined to believe that the less tampering we do with the Constitution and with the powers of the Supreme Court the better it will be for the American people. I am opposed to curbing the powers of the Supreme Court to pass on acts of Congress and so is the Republican Party. We will welcome a clear-cut fight with the New Dealers on this issue.

I am strongly opposed to any and all the proposals suggested to destroy the power of the Supreme Court to hold acts of Congress unconstitutional. The general plan suggested is to give Congress a free hand to control wages, industry, and farming through national planning or economy without regard to the rights of the States or the limitations provided in the Constitution.

If such an amendment were adopted, and God forbid, we would be launched into fascism, Hitlerism, and sovietism over night. It would mean the creation of a gigantic and crushing bureaucracy at Washington which would attempt to regiment and control every human activity. It would mean the destruction of our free institutions, State and local governments, and the establishment of collectivism and State socialism on a stupendous scale. Our experience with the N. R. A. should be a sufficient lesson as to what to expect.

The improvement of business conditions dates from the decision of the Supreme Court holding the N. R. A. unconstitutional and doing away with the mass of bureaucratic edicts and restrictions and resulting confusion that the attempt to control seven or eight hundred different businesses from Washington created. The fact is that the N. R. A. had failed and collapsed of its own weight before the Supreme Court decision. It is physically impossible to control hundreds of industries through bureaucracies at Washington without confusion, graft, and inefficiency. No one denies that some provisions of the N. R. A. were good and praiseworthy, such as doing away with sweatshop hours and wages and child labor in certain industries. The President loves to harp on the child-labor provision of the N. R. A., but the fact is that most of the Northern and Eastern industrial States had child-labor laws long before N. R. A. and the dozen States without such laws are practically all Southern Democratic States. Let the President use his influence with these States and stop his child-labor political propaganda in order to curry favor for the unconstitutional N. R. A. and thereby befog the issue.

A large part of the New Deal legislation was obviously in defiance of the provisions of the Constitution and usurped the powers of the Congress and of the States. It was nothing more or less than government by nullification, which that fearless old Democratic President, Andrew Jackson, in whose memory the New Dealers recently held a Belshazzar's feast at Washington, pronounced to be treason. As one after the other of the New Deal nullification measures are held unconstitutional these "brain trusters" and New Deal termites are more than ever determined to undermine and destroy the Constitution and particularly the power of the Supreme Court. We Republicans are prepared to accept the challenge and say "Lay on Macduff; and damn'd be him that first cries, 'Hold, enough!'"

The New Dealers, since the two great props of their new social and economic order, the N. R. A. and A. A. A., have gone the way of all other nullification measures, are floundering around uncertain how to proceed, and afraid to inject a direct constitutional amendment empowering Congress to regulate and control wages, hours, industry, and agriculture without constitutional restrictions. After a few more decisions by the Supreme Court, such as holding the Guffey coal bill, the potato amendment, and the Bankhead cotton bill unconstitutional, the logic of events and the desperation of the New Dealers in seeing the entire unconstitutional fabric of their experiments crumble away and disappear, will force them to advocate a constitutional amendment providing for economic or national planning. It will be highly interesting and politically diverting to witness the trials and tribulations of the dyed-in-the-wool Democrats of the South try to side-step this death blow to State rights.

We Republicans, however, will not retreat from any attack directed against the Supreme Court or any attempt to undermine its influence or curb its powers. We propose to uphold and defend both the Constitution and the Supreme Court and to preserve for ourselves and for generations of free unborn American citizens the rights and liberties guaranteed in the Constitution and the blessings of orderly representative and constitutional government. We do not deny the right of any individual or party to propose a change in the Constitution, but we will fight in every way within our power the New Deal efforts to undermine and destroy the power of the Supreme Court to hold acts of Congress invalid when in violation of the provisions of the Constitution. If this power of the Supreme Court is destroyed, the Congress might legislate the President out of office and establish a dictatorship of their own.

The "horse and buggy" days are preferable to the plain buggy days of bureaucracy, regimentation, collectivism, and squandermania. The American people have a right to change or alter their form of government, but let us not throw overboard the experience, wisdom, and safeguards of the past, under which we have become the greatest, richest, and most powerful nation in the world, with the freest people and the highest standards of wages and of living. Let us steadfastly refuse to import foreign principles of government to undermine our American system in order to erect a gigantic dictatorship at Washington based on some imported form of either nazi-ism or communism.

Thank you and good night.

THE FRAZIER-LEMKE FARM-MORTGAGE REFINANCING BILL

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech that I made over the radio last Friday.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD I include the following address which I delivered at Washington, D. C., over the National Broadcasting Co. network during the program "Congress Speaks" Friday, January 31, 1936.

The recent action of the Supreme Court in holding the Agricultural Adjustment Act to be unconstitutional has put the farm problem squarely up to the Congress. It remains to be seen whether the majority in Congress are willing now to assume their constitutional duty and responsibility as lawmakers and to report out and enact farm legislation of their own making, or whether they will follow their usual custom of doing nothing on their own account and content themselves with merely rubber stamping whatever new farm bill the President and his Secretary of Agriculture may choose to send them as a substitute for the invalidated Triple A.

The history of the Democratic majority in Congress from the day of President Roosevelt's inauguration down to the present moment would seem to indicate that they will probably do the latter. From the opening day of the Seventy-third Congress in March 1933 this overwhelming 3-to-1 administration majority in Congress has refused altogether to legislate on any subject. They have delegated their effective power to make law to a small group of men not in the legislative department but in the executive department who, under the Constitution, have no authority whatever to make law.

The A. A. A., for example, was made by Wallace, Tugwell, and a group of ex-college professors in the Agriculture Department, whose names would be quite unfamiliar to most of those who are listening to me. The majority in Congress had nothing to do with the making of it, and the minority was not even permitted to try to make a good bill out of it by amendment. The minority also sought to offer a complete farm program of its own as a substitute for the A. A. A. This offer was rejected by a straight party vote, and the minority was told it could take the Triple A just as the professors wrote it, or nothing.

Now that the Supreme Court has thrown out the work of the professors, and the administration has openly admitted that it has nothing to offer in its place except a substitute bill which was written by the same professors and which has for its purpose the doing of precisely that which the Court has emphatically said cannot be done without a constitutional amendment, the minority in Congress today is trying very desperately again to secure consideration for its own farm program, a program for which it has been fighting in Congress for 3 years and the enactment of which—let me make it perfectly plain—has been prevented to date solely through what we believe to be the unwarranted opposition and interference of the President and his Secretary of Agriculture in a matter which is the exclusive business of the Congress.

I think every farmer is familiar with the minority's farm program in Congress. The program consists of three major bills—the Frazier-Lemke farm-mortgage-refinancing bill, the cost of production bill, and the export-debenture bill. Almost every farm leader who is recognized by the farmers themselves as an authority has endorsed this program. * * * Nearly every unit of the two great national farm organizations—the Grange and the Farmers' Union—has endorsed it. A majority of the States of the Union through formal resolutions of their State legislatures have repeatedly memorialized Congress to enact at least a part of this program at once. Thirty-three State legislatures, for example, have petitioned the Congress to enact the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill, which is the keystone in the arch of this program. The Agriculture Committee of the House of Representatives has favorably reported this bill.

More than a majority of the entire membership of the House have attached their names to a discharge petition demanding a vote on this bill. And yet, with all of this support and demand for a real effective and constitutional farm program the majority leaders of the House, who dictate the making of the rules of that body and who are themselves controlled entirely by the dictates of the Chief Executive in this regard have succeeded to date in preventing a vote either on the Frazier-Lemke bill or on any other part of the farm program of the Congress. They have done this through the control of the Rules Committee, which is the political committee of the House, and without whose permission no vote can be taken on any bill except on a petition signed by a majority of the whole membership of the House. Many more than a majority, which is 218, have at different times signed the petition to force a vote on the Frazier-Lemke bill. But we have never been able to get 218 signatures on the petition at any one time, because whenever we approached the 218 mark the Democratic leaders have persuaded a few of their brethren to withdraw their names. We have 211 signatures on the discharge petition today and require only seven more to compel a vote on the Frazier-Lemke bill.

I am addressing myself here particularly to the farmers who are supporting this legislation and who are interested in knowing why the Frazier-Lemke bill has not been voted upon and who has been responsible for preventing the vote on it. So far as these farmers are concerned, I know it is not necessary for me to discuss the provisions either of the Frazier-Lemke bill or any other part of the farm program I have referred to. For the benefit of others, however, who may not be so familiar with it, I want to take the remaining time to comment very briefly on just one of the three bills making up this legislative program.

Of these three bills the Frazier-Lemke bill is, of course, the most immediately necessary and the one which has the best chance of passage at the present session, in spite of the opposition of the President. The bill embraces a comprehensive, carefully worked out national plan for permanently lifting the farmer out of his present state of insolvency through the refinancing of the impossible mortgage load which agriculture, as a national industry, is now carrying. It undertakes to refinance all farm mortgages at a rate of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  percent a year to be applied on the interest and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  percent a year to be applied on the principal, the whole loan to be amortized over a period of 47 years. As security for these loans the Government takes the farm mortgages themselves. Upon these mortgages farm-loan bonds are issued, which are held by the Treasury as the basis and security for a new issue of Government notes with which the refinancing is done. The amount required will be \$3,000,000,000. The provisions of the bill for annual repayment of principal and interest are such that a greater amount than three billion will not be outstanding at any one time, the money received by the Treasury annually from installments of principal and interest being reloaned until the refinancing of all farm mortgages is completed. It is generally conceded that under this plan the farmer can and will repay his loan.

It is conceded also that the Government will not only not lose money in this refinancing, but that it will actually return a profit to the Government. It is conceded further by most financial experts that this refinancing plan is not inflationary, as some of its opponents contended when the bill was first introduced. And finally it is conceded, and this is important, that the Frazier-Lemke bill is entirely constitutional.

The problem of farm-mortgage refinancing is no longer a matter which concerns only the farmer. It has become a national necessity. One-third of our entire population is engaged in agriculture. For years they have been without buying power and the little buying power they have now is steadily decreasing. With one-third of our population deprived of the ability to purchase the goods and services of the rest of the population, it is admitted by nearly everyone now that the rest of the population cannot prosper, and that unless agriculture can be given a new lease upon life, not only will the future of the farmer be a hopeless one, but that the future of every other industry will likewise be hopeless.

The people of the United States have very emphatically demanded that this condition be remedied and the majority of the people of this country, as well as a majority of the Members of Congress, believe that the Frazier-Lemke bill and its companion legislation is the proper method of solving the problem. With all of this support, therefore, we think there is ground for believing that we shall prevail at the present session in spite of the opposition of this administration.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED

A bill and joint resolution of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 3398. An act to establish the Air Corps Technical School and to acquire certain land in the State of Colorado for use as a site for said Air Corps Technical School and as an aerial gunnery and bombing range for the Army Air Corps; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. J. Res. 196. Joint resolution to correct errors in the enrollment of Private Act No. 349, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 29, 1935, and to clarify the duties of the Comptroller General in connection with said act; to the Committee on Claims.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a joint resolution of the House of the following title, which was thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. J. Res. 307. Joint resolution authorizing the erection of a memorial to the early settlers whose land grants embrace the site of the Federal City.
